"Among the first acts of the commission was to ask the secretary of war, the adjutant general, the commissary general and the surgeon general to transmit all the complaints received by them touching the administration of their respective departments. This request was promptly complied with, and from that time forth all complaints were forwarded to the commission immediately on their receipt at the war department. In further pursuance of this preparatory measure, the commission on Sept. 27,

Made Public Invitation

through the press to all persons having knowledge or belief of any official wrong or dereliction to submit their statements in writing, accompanied by such collateral proof or information as might be at their disposal. This invitation met with a liberal response. Hundreds of affidavits, letters, newspaper clippings, editorial articles and sermons were received, all of which were thoroughly and laboriously investigated, as will appear in the testimony taken by the commission and the various exhibits and appendixes to be published hereafter.

"It may be said now, at the beginning of this report, that there has been no evidence before us that any one in or connected with the department has dishonestly received a dollar. We have made persistent efforts to secure the attendance of persons to whose names rumor had attached an allegation that they knew of corruption of officials in the war department, but these men have either denied the statements attributed to them, or have maintained silence when invited to tell what they knew."

DUTY WELL DISCHARGED.

War Department Worked With Earnestness and Energy.

The report now proceeds to take up the subjects in their regular order, beginning with the army.

"On the first day of April, 1898, the strength of the army was 2,143 officers and 25,040 enlisted men, a total of 28,183. War with the kingdom of Spain was declared April 21, 1898. On May 31, 125,000 volunteers had been mustered into the service. In August, 1898, the regular army numbered 56,365, the volunteer army 207,244, a total of 263,609.

"These figures of themselves indicate that an immense work was thrown upon the war department. After thirty-three years of peace, during a great part of which the army did not exceed 26,000 men, it suddenly became necessary to arm, clothe, feed and equip more than a quarter of a million.

"How that duty was discharged will appear in detail in subsequent parts of this report. The sudden emergency which called our people to arms after an interval of half a century of peace with all foreign powers was met by the war department with earnestness and energy. The situation found the country unprepared with any large stock of arms, ammunition, clothing, supplies and equipments. That they were duly provided and the numerous demands on the industries were met so promptly that they will remain one of the marvels of history."

"One of the lessons taught by the war is that the country should hereafter be in a better state of preparation for war. Suggestions have been made that large supplies of all the material not liable to deterioration should be kept on hand to be continuously issued and replenished so that continually they should be available. Especially should they be provided with such supplies as cannot be readily obtained in open market."

Question of Authority.

Perhaps the most significant utterance in the whole document, so far as concerns the discipline and efficiency of the army, comes next:

"For many years the divided authority and responsibility in the war department has produced friction, for which, in the interest of the service, a remedy, if possible, should be applied.

"The president must have the same power of selection of his general-in-chief as he has of his secretary of war, without this there can be no guarantee that he will give, or that the secretary of war will place in the general-in-chief that confidence which is necessary for the control of the army. Neither the president nor the secretary of war should have in command of the army a person who is not working in harmony with them."

ALGER ALL RIGHT.

Charges Against the Secretary Are Found to Be Baseless.

The report now takes up the war department and its chiefs of subdivisions, beginning with the secretary of war:

"The records of the war which have been laid before us show that the secretary of war extended to all chiefs of bureaus cordial and full support and promptly responded to every proper demand made upon him by commanding officers. No testimony has been presented showing intentional neglect of duty nor any attempt to serve personal interests. The charges made that the secretary of war was primarily interested in contracts, purchases and other contracts of the war department, have been thoroughly examined and found baseless.

"In the judgment of the commission there was lacking in the general administration of the war department during the continuance of the war with Spain that complete grasp of the situation which was essential to the highest efficiency and discipline of the army."

"The commission has refrained from criticising certain of the heads of bureaus for not having acted with foresight in preparing their several departments for active war before war was actually declared, because it has appeared that the national defense funds, provided by the act of March 9, 1898, was not made available for use except for the navy and for coast defenses and the expenditures incident thereto until after the declaration of war.

"EMBALMED BEEF."

This and Other Charges as to Rations Found to Be Untrue.

The report then takes up the question of rations and Gen. Miles' "embalmed beef" charges:

"Brig. Gen. Charles P. Eagan, commissary general U. S. A., in charge: 'The commission has carefully investigated the subject of the condition, quality and quantity of the food supplied to the army. Almost without exception it has been shown by the testimony taken that wherever the troops were ordered, whether to the various camps in the United States or in Porto Rico, Cuba and Manila, the rations prescribed by law were on the transports and at the camps with the soldiers.

"So far as we have been able to ascertain there was but one occasion, that of a day in front of Santiago, when the troops were seriously short of rations; these had been supplied but thrown aside when the men went into action; the condition of roads and lack of transportation prevented prompt reissue. At times the vegetable ration was not of good quality, the potatoes and onions being spoiled. Condemned by a board of survey, such vegetables were destroyed, and an equivalent part of the ration issued. Some trouble occurred, because such vegetables and other damaged food were disposed of by the company without the warrant of the board of survey. This was done through ignorance, their officers not knowing what was necessary to be done.

Gen. Miles' Testimony.

"On the 21st of December last, Maj. Gen. Nelson A. Miles, upon the written request of the president of this commission, appeared before it. He refused to be sworn as all other witnesses had been, except one, who affirmed, stating that he would make his statements without being sworn, and was responsible for what he said. He proceeded, and for the first time in the history of this investigation, the allegation was made that refrigerated beef issued to the troops had been chemically treated.

"In the statement revised by himself, Gen. Miles said: 'There was sent to Porto Rico 337 tons of what is known as so-called refrigerated beef, which you might call embalmed beef.'

"He proceeded to read a communication from Dr. W. H. Daly, major and chief surgeon, U. S. V., on his staff, bearing date of Sept. 21, 1898, wherein Dr. Daly stated that 'in the several inspections I made in the various camps and troop ships at Tampa, Jacksonville, Chickamauga and Porto Rico, I found the fresh beef to be apparently preserved with secret chemicals which destroy its natural flavor and which I also believe to be detrimental to the health of the troops.'

"Although Dr. Daly swears that he informed Gen. Miles about the first of August, 1898, that he suspected that the refrigerated beef was chemically treated, it does not appear that the general informed you or the war department that an officer of his staff had made this discovery, nor does it appear that he at the time ordered any of the officers under his command to probe to the bottom an allegation that, if true, concerned the health of 275,000 soldiers of the United States. It appears from the report of Dr. Daly, which he handed to Gen. Miles Oct. 21 last, that he then specifically stated that the refrigerated beef furnished to the troops was 'apparently chemically treated.' It does not appear that when this charge was made, Oct. 21, it had been already made to him in August, 1898, that Gen. Miles communicated to you or to Dereliction of Duty.

"It is true that Sept. 20 he had directed that an order should be issued asking for reports relative to meats issued, but the orders specifically mentions 'canned fresh roast beef,' and nothing else, and it was the reports received in answer to this that were presented in abstract by the general at the time of his appearance before the commission and alone.

"The commission has not confined itself to merely verbal or written proof. Immediately upon hearing the testimony of Dr. Daly on the 20th of January, telegrams were sent to all issuing commissaries in Cuba, Porto Rico and at the various home camps occupied by troops, asking that samples of refrigerated beef be at once taken, placed in glass jars, securely sealed and forwarded to the commission. These samples were to be one pound weight from the outside and one pound weight from the inside of a quarter. In response to this request many samples have been received, and later sent to the chemists of the agricultural and interior departments for careful chemical examination. The result of analysis has been reported to us in ninety-nine cases and, as will be seen by the reports appended, in no specimen examined has either boric or salicylic or other deleterious chemicals been found.

"In view of the facts above set forth the commission is of the opinion that no refrigerated beef furnished by contractors and issued to the troops during the war with Spain was subjected to or treated with any chemicals by the contractors or those in their employ."

MEDICAL DEPARTMENT.

Some Shortcomings Are Noted and Recommendations Are Made.

Medical Department, Brig. Gen. Sternberg in charge: This important part of the report is dwelt upon at great length by the commission and must be read in its complete form to be properly understood. A glance at the commission's summing up, however, will sufficiently indicate its nature.

"First—That at the outbreak of the war the medical department was, in men and materials, altogether unprepared to meet the necessities of the army called out.

"Second—That as a result of the action through a generation of contracted and contracting methods of administration, it was impossible for the department to operate largely, freely and without undue regard to cost.

"Third—That in the absence of a special corps of inspectors, and the apparent infrequency of inspections by chief surgeons, and of official reports of the state of things in camps and hospitals, there was not such investigation of the sanitary condition of the army as is the first duty imposed upon the department by the regulations.

"Fourth—That the nursing force during the months of May, June and July was neither ample nor efficient, reasons for which may be found in the lack of a proper volunteer hospital corps, due to the failure of congress to authorize its establishment and to the non-recognition in the beginning of the value of women nurses and the extent to which their services could be secured.

"Fifth—That the demand made upon the resources of the department in the care of sick and wounded was very much greater than had been anticipated, and consequently, in like proportion, these demands were imperfectly met.

"Sixth—That powerless as the department was to have supplies transferred from point to point except through the intermediation of the quartermaster's department, it was seriously crippled in its efforts to fulfill the regulation duty of 'furnishing all medical and sick supplies.'

"Seventh—That the shortcomings in administration and of operation may justly be attributed in large measure to the hurry and confusion incident to the assembling of an army of untrained officers and men, ten times larger than before, for which no preparations in advance had been made or could be made because of existing rules and regulations.

"Eighth—That notwithstanding all the manifest errors, of omission rather than of commission, a vast deal of good work was done by medical officers, high and low, regular and volunteer, and there were unusually few deaths among the wounded and the sick.

SOME RECOMMENDATIONS.

Retired Army Officers and More Rigid Examinations.

Before proceeding to a specific description of the conduct and management of the war, the report gives comments and suggestions touching certain matters which came under consideration as a logical consequence of the inquiry pursued by the commission. Referring to the question of retired officers, the report says:

"Under existing laws the officers of the army are retired when they reach the age of sixty-four. We have had before us many suggestions made by officers on the retired list, who are men of experience and distinction, that this law should be so amended as to give to the president the right to call into active service any retired officer during the time of war. The right exists as to the retired officers of the navy, and it seems to us there is no reason why it should not be extended to embrace retired army officers.

"It does not appear reasonable that an arbitrary law should prevent during the existence of war, the use of experienced men merely on account of their age. We think it would be wise to make it discretionary with the president to use officers on the retired list for filling positions during war and not trench on the active organization that may be needed in the field. During the recent war many positions were filled by the appointment of civilians, to which retired officers could have brought professional training, valuable knowledge and large experience."

In the matter of regimental officers, the commission found that all volunteer commands officered by men of military experience and training fared much better than those officered by amateurs. The soldiers were more effectively cared for, enjoyed better health and were better fed and clothed.

The commission recommends for the future a strict examination into the qualifications of all officers appointed to the army, regular or volunteer. The establishment of schools of instruction for inexperienced officers taken from civilian life to meet the emergency created by the war is highly commended. Quite a number of regular officers assigned to the command of volunteer troops adopted this expedient and the results were eminently satisfactory. A most important criticism by the commission is as follows:

"The routine work in the departments, in our opinion, is far beyond what is necessary and each year seems to increase it. The methods employed make it almost impossible to transact business promptly. The heads of all departments, officers of large depots, chiefs of staff, departments, corps and divisions have necessarily been obliged to give attention to details which should have been given to matters of larger moment. No well regulated concern or corporation could transact business satisfactorily under such regulations as govern the staff departments, and the fact that every officer of each of the staff departments holding responsibility has been forced to ignore routine demonstrates the necessity of a new form."

Unwonted Glory.

The Plimleys entertained their pedro club a few evenings ago, and after tea Mr. Plimley put on his new dress suit.

Little Percy eyed him suspiciously while he was dressing, and finally said:

"Papa, you thaid you wath going to thay home thith evening."

"So I am, my dear boy," Percy's pa replied.

Little Percy clapped his hands, jumped up and down, and in great glee cried:

"Oh! And with that thuit on?"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

CAME FROM WASHINGTON.

Instructions Which Precipitated the Recent Battle.

Manila, Feb. 12.—Adjutant General, Washington: Reported that insurgent representative at Washington telegraphed Aguinaldo to drive out Americans before arrival of reinforcements. Dispatch received Hongkong and mailed Malolos, which decided on attack to be made about 7th inst. Eagerness of insurgent troops to engagement precipitated battle. Very quiet on lines from Caloocan on north to Pasay on south. Yesterday reconnoitering party twelve miles south fired on party, wounding two men; two insurgents with arms captured. Affair of 10th, McArthur's division, very successful. Enemy's loss considerable; have collected seventy dead bodies; more not yet discovered. Insurgents reported to be gathering in force, twelve miles north on railway, but evidently perplexed. —Otis.

A BATTLE IN A JUNGLE.

North Dakota Troops Do Some More Fighting.

Manila, Feb. 14. — Saturday afternoon a reconnoitering party of the Fourteenth infantry came upon a large body of the enemy in the jungle near Camp Dewey. The rebels were attacked and fell back upon the main line of the insurgents. The Fourteenth infantry, the North Dakota volunteers and the Fourth cavalry then engaged the enemy and drove them toward the beach, where one of the gunboats received them with a fusillade from automatic Colt guns. The enemy's loss is severe, and they scattered along the beach, seeking cover from the fire of the Americans. Privates Ransom, Hensel and Saunders, of Company F, Fourteenth infantry, and two troopers of the Fourth cavalry were wounded. The bodies of two members of the California regiment were subsequently found in the bush to the right of the line. They had been shot to pieces by the enemy. One of these bodies was identified as that of Private Abaepham, but the other has not yet been identified.

MINNESOTANS WOUNDED.

One Bullet Disables Privates Fitch and Hartley.

Manila, Feb. 14.—The heat Saturday knocked out many more of our men than did the Filipinos' bullets, especially in the marsh lands north of Malabon, where the Kansas regiment was stationed. Fully a score of them were taken to the hospital.

Among the incidents of the day it is cited that Privates Hartley and Fitch, of the Thirteenth Minnesota, were both wounded in the legs by the same bullet, and Private Mitchell of Company B, of the Kansas regiment, while assisting two men to the rear, was shot in the left arm. The railroad is now open to Caloocan and supplies for the troops are being forwarded by rail.

Early in the day the monitor Monadnock and the cruiser Charleston began dropping shells into the rebel camp between Caloocan and Malabon. The enemy's sharpshooters in the jungle on the American left had been particularly annoying since daylight, so the Third artillery drove the rebels out of the jungle at noon. In the meantime a few more of our men were wounded. Mr. Bass, an artist representing Harper's Weekly, was shot in an arm. The loss of the enemy is estimated at fully fifty killed and wounded to one American killed or wounded.

AT MANILA.

Manila, Feb. 14.—Gen. Otis regards the situation here as very satisfactory. The American forces now have a firm grip on the positions they gained in the three heavy engagements in which they defeated the insurgents during the week. The ultimate an complete defeat of the Filipinos now is merely a matter of time. Upon the arrival of reinforcements the Americans are confident of making their victory over Aguinaldo's forces complete. The apprehension that was felt over the possible cessation of the city's water supply has been entirely removed.

TWENTY-FOUR LIVES LOST.

A Disastrous Snowslide in Colorado.

Georgetown, Colo., Feb. 14. — In a snow slide at Silver Plume yesterday twenty-four lives are believed to have been lost. The dead are Italian miners, with their families. Eleven bodies have been recovered, only two of which have been identified.

Yesterday's slide was most disastrous ever known in Clear Creek county. It occurred at 8 o'clock in the morning. Starting two miles from camp, the avalanche came with terrific force, carrying with it huge boulders and immense trees. A short distance from the starting point the avalanche parted, one section coming down Cherokee gulch, taking with it two cabins occupied by Italians, and the shaft house of the Carry City mine. The other slide came down Willihan gulch, between the Pelican and the Seven-Thirty mines. This portion of the slide did the most damage. Settlements of miners, mostly Italians, were situated in both gulches. For a week or more the inhabitants have moved from place to place to escape the threatened disaster should the thousands of tons of snow start down the mountain sides. Some of the most venturesome lingered in their homes, and when the slide came escape for them was impossible. There is practically no hope for those under the debris.

A $250,000 Fire.

Albany, N. Y., Feb. 14. — Fire destroyed business property on South Pearl street valued at $250,000. Owing to scarcity of water and high wind the fire was not gotten under control for several hours.

Transport Aground.

Washington, Feb. 14.—The war department has been notified that the Minnewaska, which carried the Eighth cavalry to Neuvitas, is aground at that point. The transport is not damaged.

HAIL TO THE CHIEF!

THE COMING OF W. J. BRYAN TO THE NORTH STAR STATE.

St. Paul and Minneapolis Banquets to Our Noble Leader—The Week's Round Up at the State Capitol—Unprecedented Interest in State Affairs—Legislative Summary—A Few New Selections for Offices—Three Percent Interest Talk. Few New Important Bills Now in Sight—Note and Comment.

Democratic Reform Press Bureau.
St. Paul, Feb 6, 1899.

The coming of our great chieftain, W. J. Bryan, to Minnesota, as is ever the case when he can be seen and heard, easily overshadows all other topics at the state capital. The facts are these. The Ramsey county Jefferson club, finding it impossible to have Mr. Bryan at their desired date of Feb. 8, postpone the same till Tuesday evening, the 14th, for their banquet at the Metropolitan hotel, St. Paul. Minneapolis seizes on the presence of Mr. Bryan to go ahead with the Lind and Gray celebration, contemplated since the November victory, and make it a banquet at the West hotel on the next evening, that of Wednesday, the 15th. The Minneapolis event is under the auspices of the state League of Democratic clubs, N. J. Baldwin, president, which is to be in session at that time.

This bureau will give both programmes next week, and in the meantime bespeaks not only the determination of every member of the Reform Press to be present, but asks for the widest possible publication of the events. The meeting of the State Editorial association and that called for the Reform Press on the 15th, have largely influenced fixing the dates of the banquets. No equal opportunity has ever been before afforded our press for meeting and greeting our gallant leader. Let us one and all do all in our power to make the occasions successes, and to obtain from them encouragement and enthusiasm for the battle of 1900.

The administrative event of the week was the removal of James O'Brien, for years one of the managers of the prison board, and the appointment in his place of David Bronson of Stillwater, whose nomination was promptly confirmed by the senate.

In the face of what there is to attend to, who will think that Governor Lind is making haste slowly? In the face of events how many of the regular G. O. P. vote casters now believe that their party was right when all it could see to declare for in the state platform was "Good Roads," and how many of them are not now regretting that they followed the banner of Eustis in his "Hurrah for the boys at Manila and other state issues!"

The Wilson-Jacobson investigation of binder twine and grain inspection is now set for a regular Wednesday matinee. Designed at first for a farce, if the testimony continues, and our farmers really come to the front and tell what has been going on, the play is likely to be high tragedy for the G. O. O. before the curtain is rung down.

At the last hearing some of the unimpeachable testimony offered in the campaign was given, the substance of the Clay county cases, of false weights, excessive dockage and under grading. Racy additional features bore on senatorial politics, going back to the election of Knute Nelson, as senator, in 1895. It was charged that the army of grain inspectors holding commissions under the Nelson administration were called in to work for Nelson, and inexperienced men, in their places temporarily, did the farmers great harm in handling their grain. It was also claimed that the grain and warehouse department was "used" in the recent campaign. Of the former no corroborative testimony is needed, as everyone familiar with the election of Nelson knows how the entire machinery of the state was used for his benefit. Of the other assertion, probably the cart has been placed behind the horse. The testimony is abundant that early in the grain season of 1898 farmers were "pinched" shamefully, but that as election time approached the word was passed to give them a better show; large grain shippers so account for the better grades and better treatment. Indeed the very week following the exposure made by the Democratic committee through this bureau, scores of reports were received that better grades were being received and less being stolen through weights and dockage.

The lesson is the same as in the prison case. The people must know how the business in the grain department is conducted, as well as in the other departments, and this they must hope to learn through the administration of Governor Lind. They may rely on it that they shall "see the books," if courageous determination can accomplish it.

Few important new bills are now appearing, but quite as many minor ones as usual. Among new bills are:

Placing telephone and telegraph lines under jurisdiction of the railroad commission.

Revision of laws governing the practice of medicine and surgery, touching all schools.

Extension of experiment station at Crookston.

Monuments for Sioux Indians faithful to whites in 1862.

To relieve certain state's bondsmen from liability for deposits in broken banks.

To protect from contagion, in importation of diseased sheep.

Prohibiting Sunday theatrical performances.

To establish boards of appeal for grain inspection at Minneapolis and Duluth.

A primary election law.

Hennepin county—A. T. Ankeny, normal board, and N. P. Olson, assistant labor commissioner.

Ramsey—C. H. Goodrich, dental board; A. L. Graves, assistant labor commissioner, and L. J. Lundgren, in state capitol.

St. Louis—Alfred McCallum, factory inspector.

Washington—David Bronson, prison board.

Brown—Francis Baasen, assistant adjutant general.

Goodhue—Miss Emeline Season, stenographer to adjutant general.

Wabasha—A. G. Glover, dairy inspector.

Watonwan—W. S. Hammond, normal board.

Stearns—J. D. Kowalkowski, oil inspector.

In the additional appointments Governor Lind has preserved the standard of high character, ability and political division, as well as locality. Mr. Ankeny, for the normal board, is chosen for his able connection with Minneapolis educational interests which well nigh made him the governor's choice for superintendent of instruction. The exchange of Prison Manager O'Brien for David Bronson is universally commended. The assistant adjutant general, Francis Baasen, worthily recognizes Minnesota's first secretary of state.

In selecting N. P. Olson and A. L. Graves for assistant labor commissioners, that department has been given two of the best men who could have been found for the department. Mr. Olson is editor and publisher of the Minneapolis Democrat, which he founded after the murder of the Penny Press, with the editorial staff of which he was connected. Mr. Graves has long done herculean work with his St. Paul "Broadaxe." Thus the governor and Commissioner McHale have secured a good and able man, and followed the policy of rewarding our editorial workers wherever possible.

Discussion of taxes and interest, and gross earnings, has developed many advocates of reduction of the legal tax rate to three per cent. The progress of the discussion, and the result with the legislature, will be watched with interest.

It seems from Warden Wolfer's continued statements to the committee, that the prison sold 151 car loads of twine in 1898, which of course went to dealers, while 1200 separate orders for small amounts were on hand unfilled, when the board "shut down" on filling small orders, in June. That's about the way the farmers have been telling the story.

In discussing reduction of interest on land sales the other day, "Leader" Jacobson of the house, informed his Republican colleagues that interest has got to come down, in order "to keep pace with other old country matters." Of course Jake means the gold standard level of prices, labor and all else, and Jake is right. Lower interest, lower prices, smaller profits, less and less return on investments and finally paralysis of industries attend the gold standard. Money being unprofitable for investment piles up in the banks, breeding Wall street craze, which will rage today and breed the panic of tomorrow. We notice from Comptroller Dawes' national bank report current, such piling up of money almost beyond belief. In 10 months loans and discounts (the measure of business activity increased but $16,000,000 in the United States, while deposits increased over $213,000,000. On Dec. 1, of the total circulating medium of the country $2,245,000,000 were deposited in the 3,590 national banks remaining out of the total of 5,152 organized.

The few men still holding down state jobs who would like to keep them, are said to be studying the financial question to beat the band. One not a mile from the governor's office is said to have read Coin Harvey half way through, and to talk single and double standard in his sleep.

A Twin City G. O. P. paper remarks that this legislature is free from woodchucks, while the writer of the comment possesses one such "chuck" in a $5.00 a day committee job, in addition to his regular pay as reporter. Of course only the newspaper man has the capacity of working hard all day for his paper and all of the same day for the state.

This is the way reform is working, in cutting off the customary newspaper appropriation of $150 each for the "official" reporters. A dozen such reporters hitherto, would receive $1,800. Half the number or less, representing the "loil" (real reform) papers, get grafts of $150 each, and the rest get nothing but the meager pay for common newspaper work, said to be as high, in some cases, as $1.50 per day, in these gold standard times. As matter of fact only the Pioneer Press, Minneapolis Tribune and Journal have as yet obtained the $150 graft. These three reporters will thus receive $1,350 of the state's money, or enough to give $150 each to nine just as faithful workers. Great is reform that does not reform.

News of the national work is in every way encouraging. Hon. W. H. Harvey who has been in charge of the ways and means bureau, Chicago, has taken the field as lecturer to raise committee funds, and the bureau is in charge of Colonel Sam B. Cook, formerly chairman of the Missouri state Democratic committee. Both are said to be doing admirable work. From such headquarters it is learned that Colonel Tom M. Bowers has started a new paper at Austin, Tex., with the significant name of Cannon. Whenever it goes off it will be heard all over the nation and each shot will be for Bryan!

ON THE OPEN TRAIL.

This paltry earth and the low hung sky,
Like a little tent around it,
Too cramped I find to feel at home,
Too cramped I always found it.

Since I was ever a vagabond,
A vagrant-foot and rover,
Oh give me the width of the skies to roam
When my earthly days are over!

Let me out where worlds the milestones are,
Where the unresting stars walk my way—
Out, out, where a man has elbow room
To travel his old time highway!

And when the journey is done God grant
That one lone inn I find me
Where I may enter and greet but her
And close the door behind me!
—Arthur J. Stringer in Ainslee's Magazine.

A LAKE PILOT'S LEG.

How It Solved the Mystery of the Wreck of a Steam Propeller.

"We are never amazed when vessels go aground and are wrecked on Lake Erie during the gales that are common on that treacherous water, for we expect such things then," said a lake skipper, "but when one is grounded on a clear day and wrecked on a course as clear as the day in the hands of a pilot that knows the ground like a book, we naturally wonder a little and want to know the whys and wherefores. Such was the case of the propeller Susan E. Peck that went aground near Bar point and was lost with a $20,000 cargo.

"The captain of the Susan E had sailed successfully hundreds of times between Point Pelee and Bar point and in all kinds of weather, and this time he had a wheelman who was known from one end of the lake to the other as one of the most expert navigators in the lake business. He had been lying up a long time, for the very good reason that owing to an accident to one of his legs that leg had to be amputated to save his life. The lost member was replaced by an artificial leg, and then the pilot was ready to take his post at the wheel again. His first service after his misfortune was this trip of the Susan E. Peck, and he ran her aground.

"The puzzle to everybody was how it was possible for the propeller, handled by a man of such skill and experience, on a straight course only 40 miles long and with every sailing condition favorable, to leave her course. The pilot was the most puzzled and astounded person of all. He soon got another vessel, and this one he ran in such an erratic manner, but fortunately with no disastrous result, that he was compelled to give her up, and his usefulness as a pilot was gone. He and others went to investigating to see if they could discover what was wrong with his seamanship.

"After awhile they discovered what they believed was the trouble. In the pilot's artificial leg a great deal of steel had been used in the joints and other places. Sitting close to the binnacle, as he did while steering, this steel deranged the compass so that it threw the wheelman way off his reckoning and led to the wrong piloting that had wrecked the Susan E. Peck and endangered the other vessel that the wheelman navigated subsequently. This was what they argued, and to demonstrate the correctness of the theory the pilot took charge of a vessel without wearing his false leg. Everything worked to a charm. The mystery of the Susan E. Peck was solved, and the pilot was restored to his old place in the confidence of Lake Erie skippers and vessel owners."—New York Sun.

South America's Suicide Wind.

In Brazil and other parts of South America the natives know and fear a certain condition of the air which they call "suicide wind."

It is not a superstition, but an actual condition of the atmosphere which seems to drive the people to madness, and during its continuance self inflicted deaths are numerous.

Criminologists and scientists all over the world are interested in this peculiar atmospheric influence, which is indicated by a soft, moist, warm air that settles heavily on the earth.

The climatic condition known as the "suicide wind" is greatly dreaded in that part of the country.

Statistics prove that suicides and other crimes occur together or in waves as they are described.

The Moral Is Plain.

"Once upon a time," says the Houtzdale (Pa.) Journal, "a man got mad at the editor and stopped the paper. In a few weeks he sold his corn at 4 cents less than the market price. Then his property was sold for taxes because he didn't read the sheriff's sale. He paid $10 for a lot of forged notes that had been advertised two weeks and the public warned against them. He then rushed to the printing office and paid several years' subscription in advance and had the editor sign an agreement that he was to knock him down if he ordered his paper to be stopped again."

Wanted a Chance.

A Scottish preacher who found his congregation going to sleep one Sunday before he fairly began suddenly stopped and exclaimed: "Brethren, it's nae fair. Gie a mon half a chance. Wait till I get alang, and then if I nae worth listening to gang to sleep, but dinna gang before I get commenced. Gie a mon a chance."

An Expert.

"Do you carve?"

"I should say I did!"

"And what are your specialties?"

"Sausage and omelets."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

It is a sober truth that people who live only to amuse themselves work harder at the task than most people do in earning their daily bread.—Hannah More.

The Mad Poet's Retort.

Many stories are told of McDonald Clarke, known 50 years ago in New York as the "Mad Poet," which show that he had a vein of great shrewdness, such as is often possessed by people who are counted insane.

One day he was seated at a table in a New York hotel quietly eating his simple dinner when two young men took their seats at the same table. They were not gentlemen in the best sense of the word, and it occurred to them that they might have some sport with the poor poet. Consequently one of them said in an unnecessarily clear tone:

"I have seen almost everything and everybody in New York except McDonald Clarke. I have a great admiration for his poems, and I would give a great deal to see the man."

When he paused, the mad poet leaned forward and said with evident gratification:

"Sir, I am McDonald Clarke, whom you say you wish to see."

The young man stared at him with much rudeness for a moment, and then, drawing a quarter from his pocket, he laid it on the poet's plate, saying, "That's for the sight!"

Clarke looked at the coin for an instant, and then, placing it in his pocket, he took out a "York shilling," 12½ cents. This he handed to the young man, saying gravely, "Children half price."—Youth's Companion.

A Decidedly Novel Claim.

A claim once made on the explorer, Cameron, in the neighborhood of Gaboon, Africa, shows the peculiar workings of the native African's mind. Some of Cameron's possessions proved unduly attractive to a native, and he determined on transferring the ownership to himself. He accordingly paid another native $200 to procure for him the coveted goods.

The assistant took the money and did his best to earn it, but Mr. Cameron had perversely locked up the very articles that the fellow's employer had set his heart upon. The man could not carry out his bargain, and neither did he feel that he could part with the money. Therefore he ran off with it. What more logical than that the man who was the loser by $200 should expect the explorer to make the loss good? This he assuredly did expect.

He went to Mr. Cameron and told him the story, demanding in the first place the $200 which he, Cameron, by locking up his goods, had compelled the complainant to lose, and, secondly, the actual price of the goods themselves, which, but for these arbitrary measures, would now have been in his possession. It is not stated that his expectations were realized.—Watchman.

Sterne's Destitution.

Laurence Sterne, the writer, was the victim of the intensest poverty. A little time before his death, being in a state of destitution, he went one evening to borrow £5 from his friend Garrick. Upon arriving, he heard music and knew that a party was going on. He heard the merry laughter, and, gently replacing the uplifted knocker, retraced his steps.

We never feel our miseries so keenly as when contrasted with the joys of others, and it is only then that we realize Wordsworth's picture:

And homeless near a thousand homes I stood
And near a thousand tables pined for food.

Another story of this writer does not evoke so much sympathy. It was known that Sterne used his wife very ill, and in talking with Garrick one day in fine sentimental style of conjugal love and fidelity he said, "The husband who behaves unkindly to his wife deserves to have his house burn down over his head."

"If you think so," said Garrick quietly, "I hope yours is well insured."

A Malay Sultan's Letter.

In the cover there were three inclosures—a formal letter of extreme politeness, written by a scribe; secondly, a letter written in my friend's own hand; and thirdly, another paper, headed, "Hidden Secrets," written also in the sultan's own hand. At the top of the first page of the second letter is written, "Our friendship is sealed in the inmost recesses of my heart." Then this, "I send this letter to my honored and renowned friend" (here follow my name, designation and some conventional compliments). The letter then continues: "You, my dear friend, are never out of my thoughts, and they are always wishing you well. I hear that you are coming to see me, and for that reason my heart is exceedingly glad, as though the moon had fallen into my lap or I had been given a cluster of flowers grown in the garden called Benjeruna Sri, wide opening under the influence of the sun's warm rays."—"Unaddressed Letters," by Swettenham.

An Antenuptial Understanding.

"There is one question I want to ask you, dearest," said the beautiful girl as she toyed with the diamond ring on her third finger. "When we are married, will you expect me to bake my own bread?"

"You can do as you like about it, darling," he replied, "but I certainly shall insist upon your not baking mine."—Chicago News.

Unhappy Hindoo Women.

The Hindoo holy books forbid a woman to see dancing, hear music, wear jewels, blacken her eyebrows, eat dainty food, sit at a window or view herself in a mirror during the absence of her husband and allow him to divorce her if she has no sons, injures his property, scolds him, quarrels with another woman or presumes to eat before he has finished his meal.

A Newcastle (England) man wrote this to the editor on a postal card: "What ho, Mr. Editor, what price this? If the mouth is the window of the intellect, toothache must be a sort of window pain."

The Army and Navy.

Have covered themselves with glory during the war. The Army and Navy vest pocket memorandum book published by the Northern Pacific is a compact digest of information relative to the navies and armies of Spain and the United States at the beginning of the war. It has a map of Cuba, illustrations of naval ships, glossary of navy and army terms, translation of Spanish words, etc. Send ten cents to Chas. S. Fee, general passenger agent, N. P. R., St. Paul, Minn., for a copy.

How Doctors Differ.

"For ten solid years," said a New Orleans broker, "I lived in perpetual apprehension of sudden death. A doctor in Texas told me—confound his picture—that I had valvular heart disease, and if I wanted to stay on earth I must avoid every species of excitement. I did my best to follow his advice, but that miserable specter was at my elbow day and night and embittered my whole existence. I don't believe I am a coward, but the thought preyed on me until I began to fear for my sanity.

"At last, after all these years of infinite precaution, I went to a first class specialist to find out how much longer I'd last and was assured that I hadn't one single symptom of the malady. Talk about removing a mountain from a man! That assurance knocked off an entire range. It changed the color of the universe in a twinkling, and I was so happy I wanted to just throw up my hat and yell.

"That was a couple of years ago, and I have enjoyed myself tiptop ever since up to one day last week, when I happened to be chatting with the specialist and remarked that I'd like to murder that sawbones in Texas. 'I don't blame you,' he said. 'That man had no right to tell you that you had heart disease. If I had found you right at death's door, I certainly would never have let you know it.' Now, by Jove, I don't know who or what to believe and am drifting back to the old state of uncertainty. I wish I lived in a cannibal island and had never heard of doctors."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Milk and Mathematics.

When Thomas drove up to deliver the usual quart of white mixture, the gentleman of the house kindly inquired, "Thomas, how many quarts of milk do you deliver daily to your customers?"

"Ninety-one, sir."

"And how many cows have you?"

"Nine, sir."

The gentleman made some remarks about an early winter and the state of the roads, and then asked, "Thomas, how much milk per day do your cows average?"

"Seven quarts, sir."

"Ah, um!" said the gentleman, as he moved off.

Thomas looked after him, scratched his head, and all at once grew pale as he pulled out a short pencil and began to figure on the wagon cover: "Nine cows is nine, and I set down seven quarts under the cows and multiply. That's 63 quarts of milk. I told him I sold 91 quarts per day. Sixty-three from 91 leaves 28 and none to carry. Now, where do I get the rest of the milk? I'll be hanged if I haven't given myself away to one of my best customers by leaving a big cavity in these figures to be filled with water!"—London Sketch.

Italy in London.

Many Londoners have visited the Italian district, which lies in the neighborhood of Theobald's road and Hatton Garden, and some with inquiring minds have strolled up Leather lane and watched the Italian ice cream venders and fortune telling women with pretty love birds, intermingled with the dirty, noisy street hawkers, common to all London slums. It is amazing to learn how these Italians crowd together in the poky little houses of the courts and alleys. Generally a house is hired by an old padrone, who sublets to as many of his countrymen as he can respectably squeeze in. The cellars are utilized as sleeping apartments, and in the morning as many as 20, even 30, men will emerge from the bowels of the earth, blinking and winking in the daylight after a night spent in the cellars under one small dwelling house. A whole family, consisting of a husband and wife and eight or nine fanciulli of various ages, often sleep in one small garret or cellar.—Ludgate Magazine.

A Crusher.

Legge, bishop of Oxford, who had not youth as his excuse for his vanity, asked his friend Canning to come and hear his first episcopal sermon. They dined together afterward, and from the politician's silence the other ought to have known better than to push him, but being rather nettled he exclaimed, "Canning, you have said nothing to me about my sermon." "Well, it was short." "Oh," said the bishop, "it is better to be short than tedious." "But," replied Canning, "you were that too."

Athletic Missionaries.

Two English home missionary workers were recently introduced by the Rev. A. J. Robinson to a Birmingham audience in these words:

"You Birmingham chaps have a lot of athletics, and quite right too. The two missionaries are both old athletes, you will be interested to learn. One, an old chum of mine, was in the Cambridge eight, and the other was famous among his fellows as a jumper. He could jump as high as his head."—Liverpool Mercury.

Why Maud Blushed.

Bobby (at the breakfast table)—Maud, did Mr. Jules take any of the umbrellas or hats from the hall last night?

Maud—Why, of course not! Why should he?

Bobby—That's just what I'd like to know. I thought he did because I heard him say when he was going out, 'I am going to steal just one,' and— Why, what's the matter, Maud?—London Fun.

Steel Balls.

The largest center in the world for the manufacture of steel balls for ball bearings is situated at Schweinfurt, in Bavaria. A couple of factories there, owned by one firm, produce close upon 300,000,000 balls annually with the labor of 600 men working ten hours daily. The total production of Germany is stated to be about 650,000,000, while England and France combined turn out only about 70,000,000 additional.

Time Allowance.

"Waiter," said the bicyclist at the little country inn, "bring me three eggs and boil them four minutes."

Fifteen minutes elapse, and the waiter returns with one egg.

"Very sorry, sir, our eggs is out. This is the only one we had left—but we boiled it 12 minutes, sir."—Harper's Bazar.

MASQUERADE BALL.

The most sanguine expectations of the promoters of the masquerade ball were more than realized Saturday evening despite the unfavorable weather. At nine o'clock the hall was crowded to its utmost capacity with (no one knew whom.) Music was furnished by the Friend orchestra of Red Lake Falls. J. B. O'Brien managed the floor and J. Q. Adams directed the dancers, calling many new, and interesting changes. The dance was started by the grand march which furnished much amusement for the spectators, the maskers trying to disguise their walks and long practiced steps in dancing. Many were the antics played by the different characters. Ray Sorsoleil, as the "Irish Cop" did good execution in keeping the unruly ones in order; Mike Rosenberg as the "big Injun" having to receive the most attention. The typical German was well carried out by Martin Hall, the only thing he lacked was practice in walking. A. R. Mattes played the "Yellow Kid" so well every body knew him. L. J. Stranahan found his element in representing the bashful girl upon her first introduction into society. John Knowles caused much amusement in representing an up-to-date "coon." Editor Soll had Chauncey M's. face well represented to match the prison stripes on trousers and vest with a "bull-frog" green coat. During the merriment there was a sudden lull and all eyes turned toward the door when the "King's Fool" entered. Many guesses were made as to whom it was but without avail; when masks were removed, C. G. Rapp was the person. He played that part as Charley only can. Wilbert Taylor impersonated Uncle Sam so well that one would think that gentleman was present in person. The ladies in white were represented by Mr. Nelson and sister. So well did Mr. N. appear in female attire that his recognition was not revealed until the masks were removed. Mr. Nolan's trousers were marked "25 lbs. short." "Little Girls in Blue" were numerous and typical in every way but size. Grace Bell attracted the most attention and admiration being attired as the "Spectator Girl." Angie Bell's pop corn suit was much commented upon. Miss Mabel Knowles took the part of "Little Red Riding Hood" and Miss Mousseau of a typical "English lady." Mrs. Nolan was "Grand-ma" and acted out her part to perfection. "Miss Columbia" was present in the person of Phena Dainard. The floor was in possession of the maskers until eleven o'clock when they were requested to choose partners and march around the hall to be inspected by the Judges, Messrs. Bell, Mereen and Holmes, who awarded the prizes. The winners were Grace Bell, Mrs. Nolan, Martin Hall and Wilbert Taylor. After the masks were removed congratulations were extended and received then the floor was turned over to the dancers. Space forbids us giving any more special mention. Suffice to say all the characters were prepared with care and furnished much amusements and pleasure. A very delicious repast, prepared by the young ladies, was served at twelve o'clock. After supper dancing was indulged in to an early hour in the morning. To much credit can not be given to the young ladies for their success in getting up the Masquerade Ball.

NOTES.

Harry Ives came home decorated with souvenirs, a blood red heart pinned on his coat sleeve and for the first time in his life a blue ribbon tied in a button hole of his coat. His associates looked surprised.

H. H. Zaiser, Joe Pouliot, Joe Sally and J. G. Brady of Red Lake Falls were visitors and said many pleasant things about the Masquerade.

Mr. Rapp would like to know who tried the three times and then failed to take off his mask.

The Greatwestern clothing store was locked at 1 o'clock. Mike went to Minneapolis. Nit.

Did we read the story, did some one tell it to us, or did we dream it? A woman had seven husbands; they all died, and she buried them in a row. She erected a tombstone in the corner on which she wanted to say, as briefly as possible, that all of them were in heaven. She had a hand cut in the marble pointing aloft, at the end of which were the words, "Seven-up!"

Wolf Bounty.

The increase of wolves, esspecially in the northern portion of the state, has prompted the senate to pass a wolf bounty bill, provision of which are as follows: Any person killing a full-grown wolf during the months of January, February, March, April or May shall be entitled to a bounty of $5, and for killing a wolf at any other season of the year, to a bounty of $3, for killing a cub at any season of the year, to a bounty of $2—one third of said bounties to be paid by the county in which the wolf is killed and two-thirds by the state. To obtain the bounty, the person killing the wolf must take the head complete to the county auditor within thirty days, make out a certificate stating time and place of killing, and affirm that he allowed no wolf to escape which it was in his power to kill. The auditor must then destroy the head and issue an order for the payment of the bounty. Any person attempting to secure a bounty by fraudulent means is liable to a fine of from $25 to $100 or to a corresponding period of imprisonment. The bill now goes to the house, where further amendments are among the possibilities. The above is a complete outline of the bill as passed. The provision relating to securing the bounty by going before the supervisors with the head, has apparently been stricken out at the last minute, and the bill says that it must be taken to the county auditor.—Crookston Times.

An editor died, says an anonymous writer, and slowly wended his way down to where he supposed a warm reception awaited him. The devil met him and said: "For many years thou hast borne the blame of the bad spelling that printers have gotten off on thy paper. Thy paper has gone for one dollar and also the dollar has failed to come in. The printer has bedeviled thee for wages when thou hadn't a farthing to thy name. People have have taken thy paper without paying for it and cursed thee for not getting out a better sheet. Thou has been called a dead beat by the railroad conductors when thou hast shown thy pass to their envious gaze. All these wrongs thou hast borne in silence. Thou shalt never enter here." And as the editor turned and walked away, Satan muttered "Heaven is his home, and besides, if I should let him in here he would have been dunning his delinquent subscribers and thus created discord in my kingdom.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

Regular Correspondent.

The sentence of six years suspension from rank and duty, which was put upon Gen. Eagan by the President, isn't half so bad as it sounds. During the next six years, or until he reaches the age for retirement, in January, 1905, Eagan may engage in any occupation that may please his fancy, go wherever the notion strikes him to go, and continue to draw the salary of a brigadier general. Had the sentence been suspension from rank, duty and pay, it might be considered a hard one, but Eagan ought to consider himself lucky as it is, and he doubtless does, although of course, he and his friends may be expected to let out a few yowls about how severely he has been treated—given six years leave on full pay, $5,500 a year.

The bill for the increase of the regular army is believed to be as dead as it deserves to be. It is understood that notice has been served upon the administration Senators that they will not be allowed to pass the Hull bill, or any other bill proposing to give the President authority to maintain a standing army of 100,000 men, at the present session. If a vote could be had, the administration might get its bill through, although it is by no means certain that it could; but the minority has the power to prevent a vote, and will not hesitate to exercise it. An informal offer has been made to agree to an amendment to the regular Army appropriation bill, authorizing the maintenance of the war strength of the regular army—62,000—for one year from the first of next July, and, unless there are decided changes of opinion, that is about all the army legislation, that will get through at this session of Congress.

Mr. McKinley has given out an edited edition of the report of the War Investigating Commission, which contains no surprises and will not convince a single individual that Alger has not been a misfit from the beginning of the war, and that beef unfit for use was not issued to the army, nor that Miles deserves censure for calling public attention to the bad meat. Great stress is laid by the administration and the friends of the gentlemen who served on the Commission on the fact that the report is in keeping with the evidence, and that it was signed by them all, except Col. Sexton, who died last week. Such a claim is unnecessary, because the facts are generally admitted. What is objected to and what makes the report so much waste paper, is that no evidence was sought, although it might have been had in abundance, except that which would conduce to a whitewashing report. The money that the Commission has cost, and it is a considerable sum, has been absolutely wasted; not one single good purpose has been served by its expenditure.

Czar Reed has allowed it to become known that he intends to prevent the House passing a Nicaragua Canal bill. The friends of the Canal, among whom are about four-fifths of Congress, have set their wits to work to beat the Czar. One way to do it, which is now being considered, is for the Senate to put the Hepburn bill, which has been reported to the House as a substitute for the Morgan bill, passed by the Senate, in the River and Harbor bill, as an amendment.

Locomotor Ataxia and Paralysis Can be Cured.

These extreme nervous disorders were treated with wonderful success by the discoverer of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, previous to his discovery being offered to the public generally. This remedy is the only known specific in many diseases that, until recent years, were pronounced incurable. Here is the proof:

James Crocket, a sturdy old Scotchman living in Detroit, Mich, at 83 Montcalm St., was cured of Locomotor Ataxia by these pills. For many years he has been a chief engineer of one of those big passenger palace steamers plying upon the great lakes. This is a position of great responsibility and the anxiety causes a great nervous strain. Mr. Crocket says: "For fifteen years I watched the big engines and boilers without a single accident, and only noticed that I was getting nervous. Suddenly without warning I was taken sick, and was prostrated. I had the best of physicians but grew gradually worse. At a council of doctors, they said I had nervous prostration, and had destroyed my whole nervous system and would never recover. For three years I was unable to move from my bed. The doctor said I had locomotor ataxia, and would never be able to walk again.

"The pains and suffering I experienced during those years are almost indescribable. The friends that came to see me bid me good-bye when they left me and I was given up. The doctors said nothing more could be done. My wife kept reading to me articles about Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. We finally decided to try them. The first box gave me relief. I continued to use them for about two years before I could get strength enough to walk. I am nearly seventy-five years old and there is not a man in this city that can kick higher or walk further than I can and to-day I owe my present good health to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People for they saved my life."—Detroit Evening News.

Cakes Without Eggs.

Observing housekeepers quickly learn that Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder is far superior to all other brands from the fact that its use always insures the finest, daintiest and most wholesome pastry, and if they wish to be economical they can dispense entirely with eggs and use a much less quantity of butter for shortening purposes. The advantage is not alone the saving effected, but the avoiding of trouble and the frequent difficulty in securing eggs that are fresh.

Cakes of every kind from the informal Griddle to the stately Bride Cake can be made with thus insuring their being light and delicious. When used in Griddle Cakes they can be produced in the shortest space of time and are always tender and delicious, and may be eaten hot with impunity by dyspeptics and persons with weak digestions. Cakes of other kinds made with Dr. Price's remain moist and sweet for a much longer time than if any other baking powder is used.

Nothing so decisively settles the superiority of Dr. Price's over all other baking powers as the bestowal upon it of the Highest Medal and Diploma by the World's Columbian Exposition (Chicago, '93) and the Special Gold Medal and Diploma by the California Midwinter International Exposition (San Francisco, '94).

THE BACHELOR GIRL.

TELLS A FEW PLAIN TRUTHS ABOUT HERSELF.

Why She Works for a Living—It Isn't Because She Likes to Do It nor to Satisfy the Longings of an Artistic Soul.

She was the sweetest thing in the world and she knew it, says the New York Evening World. To this very satisfactory state of affairs she endeavored to bring a pleasing personality, which, according to her lights, simply meant to gush all over every one. This combination is to be resisted only by those who are vulgarly strong-minded. Now, the Bachelor Girl was strongminded when that indefinite something had a marketable value. At other times she didn't care a fig if she was weak or strong minded, or if, indeed, she had any mind at all. This is a state of mind brought about by an industrial system condemned by sociologists. When the Sweetest Thing in the World saw the Bachelor Girl she charged on her with all the frills of her elaborate gown set as prettily as the sails of a ship at sea. The big fluffy feathers of her hat nodded in a friendly fashion as she gushed forth immediately after the introduction. "Oh, you dear, clever thing! I've heard so much about you, and I think you are just too strong and brave and noble and all that sort of thing, don't you know. Do tell me, there's a dear, how you happened to become a bachelor girl?"

"Well, I was born that way—at least I grew into one," explained the Bachelor Girl. "Of course. How stupid of me! And you've come to this great metropolis all by yourself? Oh, I just think you're splendid!" And the Sweetest Thing beamed with enthusiasm into the Bachelor Girl's eyes.

"Yes, but they're not like you. They work in dirty old factories and sell things in shops, or some such thing. You paint beautifully; every one says so."

"Not so well as you do, I think." And the Bachelor Girl's critical eyes measured the exact shade of rose on her tormentor's cheek.

"Oh, I'm sure you do!" protested the flattered one. "And you've a cunning little studio 'way up in the top of some tall building, where you live with your high ideals and give free rein to your aesthetic ideas and have too lovely a time for anything. Do tell me how you happened to come here and leave all the luxuries of a happy home. It was just ambition, and the desire of an artistic soul, wasn't it?"

The Bachelor Girl was tired and she flared angrily. She didn't like Sweet Things very well, anyway, for she was plain herself. "No, it wasn't," she retorted in self-defense. "I came here to get rid of the squabbles at home and to rest my eyes from the never-ending view of smashed crockery thrown at my father by my mother's unerring hand. I was tired, too, of having a tribe of young brothers and sisters ransacking my most precious belongings, and of making over gowns and bonnets for three successive seasons. I came"—the Bachelor Girl resolved to free her mind for once—"I came because I was tired of the never-ending quarrels at home, of angry words and unprovoked scoldings. I was afraid if I didn't get into the way of making my own living that I might be tempted to marry some man to make a living for me, and be as unhappy as my mother and all of the other women whom I know. It was not to liberate aesthetic ideas—I haven't any; nor to satisfy the longings of an artistic soul. I prefer broiling a steak any day, but you see I must earn the money to buy the steak and the other things, if my victory of peace is to remain a victory."

"Gracious!" said the Sweetest Thing.

NO CURL PAPERS NOW.

Not Fancy Pins Are Used to Crimp Beauty's Locks.

Curling-iron manufacturers won't begin to believe it, but there are quite a few women left who curl their hair on hairpins or curl-papers over night, says the Philadelphia Inquirer. That's all right, as long as a woman's single, so the married ones assert, but they do say that this method won't do at all after a woman is married. Why? Because there is nothing that the average man dislikes more than curl papers, unless it is the horns which appear after a woman has skewered up her front hair on a lot of barbed-wire-fence hairpins. An inventive genius has made it possible for woman to do her hair up, as the over-night curling process is called, and at the same time to enhance her beauty, if anything. This is done by the use of a set of hairpins and small rods and a few bits of baby ribbon. The hair is wound in and out on a hairpin and a piece of ribbon which has its two ends left out. When this is completed the ends of the ribbon are tied in a pretty little bow, the hairpin slipped out, and there you are with your hair done up on ribbon. The rods are used to wave the hair in the much-desired pompadour style, and there are other little instruments in the outfit which make the most natural curls on the forehead and neck. Think how much more comfortable, as well as becoming, to sleep with the hair done up on ribbon than on steel wire. And, then, it is mere child's play to accomplish, for the outfit is simple and perfect as well as inexpensive.

In Operation.

"That motor you are interested in never worked, did it?" "Of course it worked," was the indignant reply. "It never pulled any cars or moved any machinery, but it made money for its owners, and that's more than most inventions do."—Washington Star.

It Hangs On

If it was only health, we might let it cling.

But it is a cough. One cold no sooner passes off before another comes. But it's the same old cough all the time.

And it's the same old story, too. There is first the cold, then the cough, then pneumonia or consumption with the long sickness, and life trembling in the balance.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral

loosens the grasp of your cough. The congestion of the throat and lungs is removed; all inflammation is subdued; the parts are put perfectly at rest and the cough drops away. It has no diseased tissues on which to hang.

They were on their way home from a visit to relatives, when the husband was taken ill, and they had to leave the train and go to a hotel.

"I think I shall die," gasped the husband, as he lay groaning in bed. But his wife was not exactly sympathetic.

HEALTHY MATERNITY.

Two Grateful Women Tell of the Help They Have Received From Mrs. Pinkham.

The climax of life force in woman is capable motherhood.
The first requisite for a good mother is good health.
Health of body means health of the generative organs.

Read what Mrs. G. A. NONNAMAKER, Bluffton, Ohio, says about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and how well it prepared her for maternity:

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM.—I must say a word in praise of your Vegetable Compound. I used three bottles of it when I was pregnant, and labor was not nearly as long as it was with my other babies; and my baby is so healthy to what the others were. I think every woman should use your Compound when pregnant, it will save them so much suffering and misery. I cannot say enough in praise of it. If ever I need medicine again, I shall use your Compound."

The most successful tonic known to medicine for women approaching maternity is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It is a safeguard for every woman who uses it, and the fullest benefit comes from its use with Mrs. Pinkham's advice freely offered to all women. Her address is Lynn, Mass.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I am a great believer in your Compound. I was almost despairing of ever again being well, as I was a great sufferer, and had been for years. I suffered from womb trouble, and had terrible blind fits. After writing to you I tried your Compound. The result was astonishing. I have used it and advocated it ever since. In childbirth it is a perfect boon. I have often said that I should like to have its merits thrown on the sky with a search-light, so that all women would read, and be convinced that there is a remedy for their sufferings."

A Million Women have been Benefited by Mrs. Pinkham's Advice and Medicine

How He Stood.

A story was told the other night of Lord Beaconsfield, which relates to an early period of his life, when, as Mr. Disraeli, he was a parliamentary candidate for High Wycombe. His opponent, a man of county family and influence, declared that he stood for parliament upon the constitution of the country, upon the broad acres of his fathers, upon law and order and property. A man in the crowd cried out:

"What does Mr. Disraeli stand on?"

"Oh," said Mr. Disraeli, "I stand on my head."—Household Words.

Cured by "5 DROPS" After Physicians and all Medicines Fail.

SWANSON RHEUMATIC CURE CO., CHICAGO: Gentlemen—This is to certify that "5 DROPS" cured my wife of a very severe case of Rheumatism. I had used various liniments and patent medicines, and had the best physicians in West Texas on her case, all with no effect. She grew worse all the time and got so she had to be turned in bed, had no use of herself and one side, the arm, leg, etc., looked as though it never would be restored. This looks pretty "thin," but it is a fact and if any one doubts it affidavit can be made as to its truth. Should any one wish to know about this God-sent remedy let them write me, inclosing self-addressed stamped envelope, and I will prove it.

Gratefully, JOHN OLIVER, Huckabay, Texas.

FRANCE HAS A NEW PRESIDENT

EMILE LOUBET ELECTED, ACCORDING TO EXPECTATION.

He Receives a Large Majority in the National Assembly and Asks Premier Dupuy to Remain in Office With His Cabinet—Election Greeted With Applause Mingled With Violent Protests—Hostile Demonstrations Greet the New President in Paris—Serious Disorders Occur, in Which a Number of People Are Injured—Several Arrests Made.

Paris, Feb. 21. — Emile Loubet was Saturday elected president of France by the national assembly, which met at Versailles.

M. Loubet, president of the senate, and presiding officer, arrived in a carriage at 10 o'clock. Friends surrounded him when he entered the gallery of busts and he said: "If you love me, I hope you won't vote for me." Various political groups held meetings, at one of which M. Cochery announced that M. Meline had definitely withdrawn his candidacy. The Nationalists and Anti-Semites decided not to vote for M. Loubet. The assembly met at 1 o'clock. M. Loubet declared the sitting open, amid the applause of the Leftists, during which M. Loubet proceeded to draw for tellers. At 2:40 the ballot was completed. M. Meline loudly announced that he had voted for M. Loubet. The Progressists insisted on voting for M. Meline, although he had withdrawn his candidature in favor of M. Loubet, which explains the vote cast for him. The votes not given to M. Loubet or M. Meline were divided among M. Cavaignac, Gen. Jamont, Gen. Saussier and others. Meline when he voted. When the sitting of the assembly was resumed the public galleries were crowded. The tellers entered by M. Charveaux, who announced that M. Loubet had been elected by a vote of 483 to 270 cast for M. Meline, amidst the applause from the left and center groups. Fifty scattering votes were cast. Senator Charveaux announced:

Received an Ovation

"M. Loubet having received an absolute majority, I proclaim him president of the republic." The announcement was greeted with prolonged applause, mingled with violent protests from the Rightests and the Leftists shouting "Vive la republique!" M. Charveaux then declared the sitting closed.

The newly elected president has promised to devote his best efforts to fulfilling the wishes of the country and to "reunite the Republicans who have drifted asunder by the current of unhappy events." President Loubet's remarks brought forth lively applause from his hearers.

The premier, M. Dupuy, then formally transferred the executive power to M. Loubet and congratulated him upon his election. The president, in thanking M. Dupuy, expressed the hope of having the support of the cabinet. The senators and deputies then filed past and shook hands with the president, who afterward received a deputation of newspaper men, and through them appealed to the whole press of the country to work in union and appeasement.

Opposition Demonstrations.

M. Loubet left the palace in a carriage, accompanied by M. Dupuy and followed by the ministers. The crowd along the route acclaimed President Loubet with cries of "Vive la republique," "vive l'armee," "vive Loubet."

President Loubet arrived here from Versailles at 5:08 p. m., and was received with military honors. Amid renewed acclamations from the crowds the president proceeded to the Elysee palace in order to pay a tribute of respect to the remains of the late President Faure. He then went to the foreign office, where he received the high officials of state and the diplomatic corps.

The Nationalists gathered about the statue of Joan of Arc and M. Deroulede made a fiery address to them. The crowd then marched to the boulevards and stopped in front of the Libre Parole office. There the Nationalists yelled themselves hoarse with cries of "Vive l'armee," and "Spit upon Loubet." The appearance of President Loubet in a carriage was the signal for hostile demonstrations and cries of "Panama, Panama." Partisans of the president raised cries of "Vive Loubet." At this stage of the demonstration a detachment of mounted police appeared and cleared a passage for the president's carriage.

VIOLENT DISORDERS.

Several People Injured and a Number of Arrests Made.

Paris, Feb. 21.—Police measures for the maintenance of order have been taken on an extensive scale and the city is quiet. M. Loubet did not quit his residence at the Luxemburg until 6 o'clock last evening. Toward 7 o'clock demonstrations occurred in front of the residence of Sebastian Faure's anarchist paper, the Journal de Petit, on the Boulevard Marte, for and against Loubet. Several persons were injured. The partisans of the newly elected president were worsted and moved off to the Cafe Brevet, where they were again attacked and dispersed. Many arrests were made. Similar encounters occurred at 9 o'clock at the office of Libre Parole, and more serious disorders at the Bazaar Belvidere, on the Boulevard Montemarte, where several women were injured and trampled. Serious disorders also occurred at the Cafe des Panoroma, where blows were freely exchanged. At 11 o'clock an enthusiastic crowd was demonstrating in favor of M. Zola. Toward midnight crowds broke windows of the Rothschilds offices and another group wrecked the office of the Anti-Jufis. Minor disturbances took place in various parts of the city, but at midnight quietude had been almost restored. M. Dupuy will ask the chamber of deputies to vote $32,000 for the obsequies to M. Faure. This was the amount voted for President Carnot's funeral. President Loubet, following the precedent set by President Casimir-Perier, will attend the obsequies. M. Loubet will preside at the first cabinet council of the new administration to-morrow.

A VIGOROUS CAMPAIGN.

One is Necessary at Once in the Philippines

Washington, Feb. 21. — Gen. Otis cabled as follows from Manila:

"In the cable of the 11th, list of First Montana wounded, James W. Kennedy and William Kennedy, Company G, are identical, the latter name being an error, shot right thigh, severe. Lieut. Gardenshire, First Montana, wounded, is William Gardenshire, formerly private Company G. —Otis."

Washington, Feb. 21.—The reports of such skirmishes as those noted above and the stories of frequent firing by concealed natives upon the American outposts have conveyed the impression to the officials here that Gen. Otis is being rapidly brought to a pass where he must assume a most vigorous offensive campaign. Although no instructions have yet been sent to him, it is assumed that he will feel justified soon in doing this to prevent the demoralization of his troops and also to make his position tenable in the approaching wet season. The nature of the country around Manila favors the tactics adopted after learning that they could not face the American soldiers in the open field, and it doubtless will be Gen. Otis' task, just as soon as his reinforcements reach him, to clear them away. Half a dozen natives concealed in the jungle and firing at long range at intervals could make life unbearable for a whole company of regular troops until they were dislodged. Military officers who have had experience in this kind of fighting say that men become panicky and lose their nerve under this treatment.

SHELLED BY THE BUFFALO.

Insurgents Are Driven From Their Trenches.

Manila, Feb. 21.—The California volunteers abandoned the Guadalonpe church at 3 o'clock yesterday morning, which has since been set on fire, and retired to San Pedro Macati. The insurgents still hold the country in the vicinity of Guadalonpe, Pasig and Patero, despite the efforts of the gunboats to dislodge them. The heat is increasing daily. Under present conditions it is impossible to provide shade for the troops in certain parts of the line, particularly McArthur's division. King's brigade is also exposed. In view of the fact that the enemy was concentrating on the American right flank, preparations were made last night to give them a warm reception in the event of an attack. Gen. Overshine's line, consisting of the North Dakota volunteers, Fourteenth infantry and two troops of the Fourth cavalry, was reinforced by two battalions of Oregon volunteers and three troops of the Fourth cavalry. The Buffalo's searchlight discovering the rebels unusually active about 10 o'clock in the evening, signaled the flagship for permission to fire upon them, and this being granted, bombarded the enemy's trenches for about twenty minutes. The only effect of the fire was apparently to drive the rebels further inland. Beyond a few ineffectual volleys from the trenches which were returned, the enemy made no demonstration and all is quiet along the rest of the line. Scouts claim to have seen Gen. Pio de Pilar, who commanded the rebels at Paco, with his arm in a sling, directing the troops. Gen. Montenegro, the insurgent commander-in-chief, is reported to be personally conducting the movements in front of Gen. King's line at San Pedro Macati. The signal corps is arranging signals with the navy for future operations on the left. With the exception of the port of Iloilo, trade with the Philippine ports is still blockaded.

UNDER A CLOUD.

Episcopal Grand Vicar of Quebec Suddenly Leaves Town.

New York, Feb. 21. — A dispatch to the Press from Quebec says: Rt. Rev. R. U. Norman, Episcopal grand vicar of Quebec and rector of the English cathedral here, suddenly left the city last night after sending in his resignation as grand vicar. It is said he is going to Europe. Scandalous allegations are made against him. Mr. Norman was prominent as a high churchman.

Spokane, Wash., Feb. 21. — The Great Northern east-bound flyer was wrecked near Wilson creek, between this city and Wenarhe. Three men were injured.

Professor Found Guilty.

Easton, Pa., Feb. 21—Prof. Stephens, who has been on trial charged with setting fire to Party hall, Lafayette college, was found guilty, the jury being out only an hour.

Killed by Gas.

Philadelphia, Feb. 21.—Mrs. Charles Fahrenkamp, her two children and an unknown woman were found dead in a room in Mrs. Fahrenkamp's house. The gas was turned on and they had apparently been dead several hours.

The Fox Is a Dandy.

Portland, Or., Feb. 21.—The torpedo boat Fox, built here, was given her official trial trip on the Columbia river. The trial was successful in every particular, the Fox making an average of 23.18 knots for two hours.

THE LEGISLATURE

Business Transacted by Minnesota Solons.

St. Paul, Feb. 15.—Col. William Jennings Bryan addressed the house of representatives briefly yesterday, upon an invitation extended to him by that body in consideration of the high place he occupies in the attention of the American people. He said he appreciated the compliment of the invitation, coming from his political opponents, and he showed that he meant what he said by a most scrupulous observance of the proprieties of the occasion, confining himself to some general observations on the relationship between members of a representative legislative body and the people. When he had finished, a recess of ten minutes was taken to allow members of the house and others to meet Col. Bryan.

The following bills were passed:

Relating to the powers of villages with respect to laying out and grading streets, providing sidewalks, sewers, etc., requiring the consent of three-fourths of the owners instead of a majority of the frontage. — Relating to damages for death by wrongful act, allowing a husband to maintain an action for the death of his wife. — Requiring railroad companies to construct platforms for the loading of grain, live stock, etc. — Providing that railroads may not increase their charges for the transportation of grain, live stock, coal and lumber without the approval of the railroad commission. — Requiring railroads to furnish passes to shippers of live stock. — Making Christmas, New Year's day and Fourth of July legal holidays. — To punish illegal voting at school elections. — To exempt bicycles from execution.

The following bills were introduced:

Relating to the bounty for arrest and conviction of horse thieves. — Empowering councils of cities of 5,000 population to grant franchises to street railway companies for a period not exceeding twenty-five years. — To authorize county commissioners to grant street railway companies rights to use the highways. — To provide for printing the annual reports of the Minnesota State Horticultural society.

The Senate.

A short session of the senate was held yesterday afternoon, following the long adjournment over Sunday. Several new bills were introduced, but few of them were of general interest. Most of the time was spent in committee of the whole, with Senator Benedict in the chair, in consideration of bills on general orders.

Among the more important of the bills introduced were the following:

To regulate the sale of butter. — To provide for a constitutional amendment for local option in counties. — To amend the laws of 1897, relating to the capture and killing of game and fish. — To authorize the board of managers of the state reformatory to discharge prisoners in certain instances; time may be less than the minimum fixed by law. — To amend the Statutes of 1894, relating to assessments for village improvements.

St. Paul, Feb. 16. — The senate adjourned at noon yesterday in order to give the committees an opportunity to catch up with their work, and, as a result, much work of a routine nature was crowded into a few hours' time.

Following bills were passed:

Defining the crime of forgery in the third degree. — Relating to the addition of territory to all incorporated villages of 1,000 inhabitants or over. — Relating to change in county seats. — Relating to the rate of interest. — To amend section 1, chapter 181, General Laws of 1895, relating to teachers' university certificates.

The following bills were introduced:

To regulate the sale of binding twine at the state prison. — To regulate the manufacture and sale of binding twine at the state prison. — To regulate the marking or branding of convict-made goods. — To amend the laws relating to the taxation of freight lines. — To regulate the practice of dentistry. — To provide for the incorporation of savings associations. — To amend the Laws of 1895 relating to banks of discount and deposit. — To regulate the operation and establishment of drains in streams of the state. — To amend the laws relating to state aid for public schools. — To amend the laws regulating the incorporation of savings banks.

The House.

The pig iron bounty proposition was up in the house in committee of the whole for some time yesterday, and there appeared to exist a disposition in favor of the main proposion, although some questions of detail remain to be settled, and the fate of the bill may turn on these details.

The following bills were passed:

Amending the Probate Code so as to allow an appeal from final decrees of the probate court. — Relating to the discharge of patients from the hospitals for the insane.

The following bills were introduced:

Providing for the collection of taxes in certain cases. — To provide for the appointment of a commission to revise the tax laws and to appropriate money therefor. — Relating to the assessment and collection of taxes. — To facilitate the purchase and condemnation of land for the Itasca state park. — To provide for the submission to the people of the several counties the question of whether liquor licenses shall be granted. — Relating to the taxation of sleeping-cars, etc.

St. Paul, Feb. 17.—The question of whether or not the state shall encourage the establishment of furnaces within the state for the reduction of the iron ore produced on the northern ranges, by a bounty of 50 cents per ton on pig iron manufactured within the state, was fought to its conclusion in committee of the whole in the house yesterday afternoon. The Laybourn bill, amended in several particulars, was finally recommended to pass by a vote of 64 to 30, on a roll call secured in the open house on the adoption of the report of the committee of the whole.

The following bills were passed:

Directing the county surveyor of Hennepin county to superintend all road and bridge work. — Regulating the levying of the taxes in Hennepin county. — To fix the salary of the judge of probate of counties having a population of more than 30,000. — Fixing the time of holding general terms of the district court in Nobles county.

The following bills were introduced:

Authorizing the prison managers to lease quarries and to employ prison labor to crush rock for use on public highways. — To provide for the care of the chronic insane by counties. — To prevent gambling in grain. — To abolish bills for discovery and to provide for the examination of parties before trial. — Defining what shall constitute public stock yards, and regulating charges. — To appropriate $2,000 annually for the salary of the second assistant attorney general.—To amend the General Statutes of 1894, relating to the state board of equalization. — Relating to earnings exempt from garnishment, attachment or execution.

The Senate.

The senate yesterday in committee of the whole recommended for passage the Greer bill providing for the appointment of a state tax commission to revise the general tax laws and report to the next legislature.

The following bills were passed:

To fix the times for holding terms of the district court in Nobles county, of the Thirteenth judicial district. — To amend the act establishing a probate code; passed as amended by the house.

The following bills were introduced:

To amend the law relating to public parks; Itasca state park and sanitarium. — Authorizing the governor to designate arbor and bird day. — Appropriating $2,500 to erect a monument to commemorate the great forest fire in Pine county. — Relating to dams causing overflow of streams. — To prevent occupants gaining possession of public highways through adverse possession. — Fixing amount of wages exempt from garnishment. — For appointment by the governor of a committee of three of the next legislature to investigate public institutions and report to next session. — Amending insurance laws. — Providing for a state temperance commissioner.

St. Paul, Feb. 18.—The pig iron bounty bill was adopted in the house yesterday by a vote of 51 to 62. The vote was reached after a long-drawn-out debate. A message from Gov. Lind was read vetoing the bill appropriating $19,975 to pay the claims for bounty for the manufacture of beet sugar under chapter 205 of the Laws of 1895. The governor in his message takes a very decided stand in opposition to the question of bounties. It is claimed by the friends of the iron bounty bill that the reading of this message just at the time the vote was to be taken on that bill caused its defeat.

The greater part of the day that was not exhausted in the iron discussion was devoted to discussion in committee of the whole of Mr. Foss' bill taxing mortgages. The committee of the whole voted for its indefinite postponement by a vote of 64 to 22.

The bill providing for the taxation of sleeping car companies was recommended to pass.

The following bills were introduced:

To appropriate $1,500 for the relief of Cass county. — To regulate and control the sale of nursery stock and prevent the introduction of San Juan scale. — Memorial to congress relative to the sale of pine land on the Indian reservations.

The Senate.

Senator Wilson of Hennepin yesterday introduced a bill of immense importance to the State of Minnesota. It is a memorial to congress asking that body to set aside and retire from sale until after Jan. 1, 1902, the 2,000,000 acres of pine forest land comprising the Leech Lake, Winnibegoshish and Chippewa Indian reservations, with a view to trying to induce the federal government to set aside a part of these lands for a national park, and, if this fails, to have the state acquire the lands for this purpose. Senator Wilson stated the purpose of the memorial and on his motion it was passed unanimously under suspension of the rules.

The senate spent the greater part of the day in committee of the whole and a large number of bills were acted upon. The following bills were introduced:

To regulate the government of cities, relating to water and light bonds in cities of 8,000 population or less. — To provide for the issuance of bonds for sites and schoolhouses in independent school districts. —Relating to the inspection of illuminating oils. — To regulate the incorporation of religious societies. — To amend the Laws of 1895 relating to justices of the peace. — To amend the Statutes of 1894 relating to the tax levy rate. — To provide for the care of insane in county hospitals for insane. — Placing the state oil inspector and his deputies on a fee basis.

St. Paul, Feb. 20.—The house Saturday passed the bill appropriating $19,975 for the payment of the beet sugar bounty over the governor's veto by a vote of 84 to 22. A rather spirited debate preceded the vote, in which some of the members severely criticised the governor's message.

The following bills were introduced:

To authorize the purchase of machinery to build roads in certain cases. — To reimburse soldiers of the Spanish-American war while on sick furlough. — To amend existing laws relating to duties of supervisors. — To amend existing laws relating to admission of children to public schools. — To enable holders of real and personal property to deduct 25 per cent of their indebtedness from taxable value of property. — To amend existing laws relating to bounty on beet sugar. To amend existing laws relating to issuance of licenses for the sale of intoxicating liquors. — To legalize co-operative associations and to validate proceedings made by such associations. — To provide for the incorporation of bridge companies.

The following bills were passed:

To authorize cities of 50,000 or more population to transfer funds heretofore accumulated for the construction of any city wagon bridge or bridges across any river within the limits of such city to any other fund for the construction, maintenance, improvements or repairing of any bridge or bridges in said city. — To repeal Special Laws of 1889 relating to salary of county treasurer of Wright county. — Memorial to congress relating to forestry reserve on certain Indian reservations. — To provide for the assessment, taxation and collection of taxes of sleeping car companies.

The Senate.

The senate held a half-day session Saturday and adjourned until 2:30 o'clock this afternoon. Among the bills introduced was one by Senator McGowan to tax sleeping car companies and concerns operating dining cars, parlor cars and drawing room cars, telegraph and telephone companies and express companies.

The following bills were introduced:

Relating to construction of land roads. — Amending laws relating to public schools. — To repeal law relating to powers of trust companies. — Taxation of sleeping cars, dining room cars, telephone and telegraph companies, etc. — Legalizing village bonds for erection of armories. — Providing for an investigation of Sunday labor. — Amending laws relating to county fairs. — Amending law relating to barbering. — Amending laws relating to life insurance.

THE SHERIDAN SAILS.

Transport Loaded With Soldiers for the Philippines.

New York, Feb. 21. — The United States army transport Sheridan pulled out from her pier in Brooklyn at 3:30 yesterday afternoon on her way to Manila by way of the Suez canal, with 1,385 enlisted men and officers and their wives and families, to the number of ninety persons. The Sheridan is considered the best appointed of the three army transports which have sailed from Brooklyn. The expedition is in command of Lieut. Col. J. H. Smith, of the Twelfth United States infantry, all of which is on board. Four companies from the Seventeenth and about twenty-five men left behind from the Sherman expedition completed the military complement.

Murder Through Jealousy.

Gardiner, Me., Feb. 21. — Bradford Knights has been arrested on a charge of murdering his sister-in-law, Miss Mamie Small, Friday evening. Miss Small was shot and instantly killed as she was walking on the street. It is said that Knights was very jealous of the girl, who had repelled his attentions. Miss Small was twenty-two years of age and Knights forty-four.

First Diploma to Woman.

London, Feb. 21. — A Berlin correspondent of the Observer says: "The Prussian government and the senate of the university have given way to the importunity of the women students and Fraulein Elsa Numann received a diploma with the degrees of master of arts and doctor of philosophy."

Anxiety for Tourists.

Brunswick, Ga., Feb. 21.—The Mallory line steamer City of Antonio, which left New York last Sunday afternoon, has not been sighted. She is reported to have on board over a hundred tourists from Boston and New York for Florida and is now over two days over due.

Cabinet to Resign.

Budapest, Feb. 21.—The Hungarian premier, Baron Banffy, has announced to the unterhaus that the ministry has decided to resign after the adjournment of the parliamentary session. The Liberal members of the Unterhaus gave the premier an ovation.

Sentenced for Selling Liquor.

Sioux Falls, S. D., Feb. 21.—Judge Carland, of the federal court, sentenced John Donein to pay a fine of $100 and serve thirty days in jail for selling liquor without a government license. Donein pleaded guilty.

Grocery Stock Damaged.

Sioux Falls, S. D., Feb. 21. — Fire caused damage to the estimated amount of $1,000 to $1,500 to the grocery stock of Ransom & Newell in the Syndicate block, in addition to some damage to the building.

Republican State Convention.

Dubuque, Iowa, Feb. 21.—C. T. Hancock, chairman of the Republican state committee has issued a call for a meeting at Des Moines for the next state convention. Sioux City, Council Bluffs, Des Moines, Dubuque and Davenport want it.

Gunboat Disabled.

Suez, Feb. 21. — The United States gunboat Princeton, which sailed from New York Jan. 11, for Manila, and proceeded from Suez a few days ago, has returned here with one blade of her propeller broken. She is being repaired.

Farmers Institute.

Madelia, Minn., Feb. 21—O. C. Gregg, superintendent of farmers' institutes, with a coterie of attendants, has concluded a two-days' institute. The attendance was exceptionally large. The institute was a success in every way.

Farm House Burned.

Hunter, N. D., Feb. 21. — The residence on the Beard farm, about a quarter of a mile from the city, was destroyed by fire. Part of the contents were saved and the loss is partially covered by insurance.

Hitchcock Ready for Duty.

Washington, Feb. 21. — Hon. Ethan Allan Hitchcock, who is to succeed Secretary Bliss at the head of the interior department, has arrived. The new secretary will commence his work at the pleasure of the president.

Peru's Commercial Status.

Lima, Peru, Feb. 21.—The Peruvian government is about to publish an English pamphlet giving the synopsis of the commercial status of Peru during the last three years. It shows a 50 per cent increase in exportation.

Killed One Man.

Telluride, Colo., Feb. 21. — A snow slide 100 feet deep and a quarter of a mile wide came down the side of Yellow mountain near Ophir, killing one man and partly destroying a concentrating plant.

No Chance for Orleans.

London, Feb. 21. — According to a Rome correspondent the Duc d'Orleans, realizing the impossibility of anything favorable to him happening in France, has left Turin for Milan.

Democratic Reform Press Bureau.
ST. PAUL, Feb. 13, 1899.

It is safe to predict that the spirit and earnestness of the political campaign in Minnesota for 1900 will be largely due to the effect of the two great banquets in St. Paul and Minneapolis the coming week, and the key notes sounded on those occasions by the distinguished leaders present. Hon. W. J. Bryan and Governor Lind will appear at both. The whole Northwest will receive from our great national leader the national battle cry, while the state will receive from her popular governor the line of action to be followed in further working out the good of the commonwealth. The two programmes are thus summarized:

For St. Paul, Tuesday evening, 14th, at Hotel Ryan. It is under the auspices of the Democratic City and County Organization, Hon. Humphrey Barton, chairman and toastmaster; Judge J. W. Willis, chairman of the banquet committee. The 12 wards and country representation will first be presented, followed by a representation of the Jefferson club by Dr. A. J. Stone, when Governor Lind speaks to "Our State." Hon. David S. Rose, mayor of Milwaukee, follows, when Mr. Bryan speaks for "Democracy." The care of banquet guests will be in charge of John L. Townley, Esq. Hon. John W. Willis and National Committeeman T. D. O'Brien head the committee of reception. Music, Second Regiment band. Floral and decorations by May.

For Minneapolis, West Hotel, Wednesday evening, 15th. Under auspices of the State League of Democratic Clubs, William Baldwin, president, toastmaster. Designed originally for celebration of the signal victories, state and city in November, Governor Lind and Mayor Gray are the principal speakers, preceding Mr. Bryan and Hon. Charles A. Towne. Also, to emphasize the union of forces through which final victory must be obtained, the third, or Peoples party wing, will be represented by Hon. Spurgeon Odell of Marshall.

The State League extends invitation to the editors of our Reform Press, to be present at the Minneapolis banquet, as guests of the League. As stated last week, this will be the best opportunity for meeting and greeting Mr. Bryan that has ever been afforded our editors.

Our state dailies, Duluth Herald, St. Cloud Times, Winona Herald, Moorhead News and Mankato Review, and also the Minneapolis Times, on Monday printed the best piece of political news of the year, National Chairman James K. Jones' analysis of the senate on the silver question, for 1900. It was from the National Bureau, through this, and was not entrusted to the Associated Press, for obvious reasons.

The statement shows that should the bimetallists succeed in electing the president in 1900, they will unquestionably have a clear working majority in the United States senate.

Like the weather, political events at the capitol have been of the short and crisp order. As both coal and per diems held out the legislature has jogged along. Few additional appointments have been made. They are:

Benjamin S. Cook of Steele county on state public school board, vice C. S. Crandall, term expired.

John D. Brady, St. Louis, surveyor general of logs, Fifth district, vice William Getty, term expired.

Dr. Pierre A. Hilbert, Stearns, board of medical examiners, vice Dr. O. C. Strickler, term expired.

New bills introduced last week cover the following subjects:

Street railways under state control.
Investment of school and university funds.
Taxing premiums of insurance companies.
Stock amphitheater at fair grounds.
Change of narrow guage to standard railroads.
Express company 5 per cent gross earnings tax.
Substitute electrocution for hanging.
To have all executions at Stillwater.
To close this session March 31.
Railroad rates for coal, grain and potatoes.
Prohibiting dealing in options.
Investigation of board of control plan.
State board of civil engineers.
Prohibiting Sunday theatricals.
Taxation of timber and mineral lands.
Normal school for Duluth, $45,000.
First district hospital at Anoka.
Second district hospital at Hastings.
Substitute bill on binder twine.
Board of appeal for grain inspection.

Senator Young of Appleton, author of several Hastings and Dakota reform bills that didn't "reform," is very tender about being connected with Russell Sage land grab interests. The senator is credited with being the only man of this chamber who can draw an H. and D. bill so skillfully that no one can tell whether it is for relief of settlers or relief of Russ.

Governor Lind, when in congress, obtained a decision securing 50,000 acres of the H. and D. land. It was a state Republican administration (the last) which surreptitiously deeded back to Sage the last valuable remnant of such lands.

The bill for the increase of the gross earnings tax to 4 per cent—another of Governor Lind's message recommendations, jogs along toward becoming a law.

A Republican member has introduced a bill to place all "common carriers" under control of the railroad commissioners. Have owners of wheelbarrows and baby carriages no right which Republicans are bound to respect?

The most novel temperance measure yet is Representative Wheaton's (colored) to allow colored men to enter saloons. But the theory that the whites may stay out may not be correct. Lo will be there after alcohol, anyhow.

Republican Leader Jacobson, in pressing his gross earnings tax bill, showed that the market value of railroad property in Minnesota in 1897 was $290,000,000, but were taxed only on a valuation of $18,000,000! The average tax rate on other property was over 24 mills, and of railroads less than 8 mills. Freight and passenger rates in vogue enabled the roads to pay nearly 7 per cent on the total value of $290,000,000, and netted $19,000,000 besides. All the roads of the state paid in 1897 but $1,127,000 taxes. All right. But did any one hear a word of this in last fall's Republican campaign? What did the Republican board of equalization do with efforts to have these injustices corrected?

The reform contention is this. For taxation purposes the railroads get the Republican officials to value the road at $8,000 per mile; they are stocked and bonded at, say, $10,000. They are then assessed at one-half or one-third the valuation, but railroad rates are kept such as to pay interest on the bonds and dividends on the stock, otherwise the bondholders will foreclose and stockholders rip things up the back. This difference between the actual value of the roads (claimed to be what they can be reproduced for, as in the showing made by the Twin City Rapid Transit company) and what the people pay returns on by the freight and passenger rates which they pay, the reformer calls by various names, "watered stock," bogus or counterfeit wealth. It is the real, Simon-pure, no-fund money! The defender of the existing system calls himself a "sound money" man, considers himself one of the gold standard anointed, votes for the G. O. P. ticket and hurls epithets of the foulest sort at his more honest neighbor. The reformer asks either that the corporation pay its fair share in state taxes or reduce the charges to the basis of actual or taxative values. Is there anything anarchistic about that?

A single witness in the grain investigation last week justified every charge made in the campaign against Republican management of the grain department. Excessive dockage, under weight, under grading, theft by sweepers, and official proof cited from a state weigher, if he can secretly testify, of robbery by grades. Thus, two cars of the same wheat were shipped, one to Minneapolis, grading No. 1 Hard, the other to Duluth, grading there No. 1 Northern. The latter was there graded out of the elevator for shipment to Buffalo as No. 1 Hard. Who couldn't get rich in the elevator business with that kind of a snap?

Everybody knows that there is a large business done in wheat screenings. But not everybody knows that under the present Republican system of grain inspection the farmer gets nothing for that part of his product, but practically makes a gift of it to the interested (third) parties.

An august (December) senator, who has acquired the habit of public dozing, from long waits in church and Sunday school, was acting as questioner of a witness before his committee, when his habit overtook him. The chairman called out, "Are there any more questions?"

"Oh yes," said the senator recalled to earth. "I simply shut my eyes to hear and think better."

"Excuse me," said the chairman, "I thought you were asleep."

And the committee thought so too. It reminds one of the times when he has fallen asleep during the long prayer and roused up in the midst of the doxology.

Republican "leader" Staples has recognized another of Governor Lind's message recommendations, in proposing a commission to investigate the board of control plan, to report in 1900.

And here is "leader" Jacobson recognizing another of Governor Lind's commendations (direct legislation) in his railroad taxation bill, which is to be submitted to the people for approval or rejection. Say initiative and referendum to these G. O. P. advocates and they deride you. But they will apply the much hooted principle whenever they get a chance, if they think it won't be noticed.

The substitute binder twine bill liable to become a law provides that twine shall be sold to consumers only, at cost, with freight added, up to May 1, after which, 500,000 pounds being still reserved for consumers, dealers may buy, but they must contract to sell at 1 cent per pound profit, to actual consumers. Sales to be apportioned through the agricultural counties, and none sold out of the state until after July 1. If this is not satisfactory to farmers they should speak out in meetin' at once.

Along in January, two months after Eustis' defeat, a state Republican official received a letter from John Goodnow, from faraway China, which ran like this:

"By the time you get this Eustis will be in, and will be ripping everybody up the back. Tell me how the boys take it."

A few days ago John wrote: "Say, when I heard Eustis was not in, but Lind, I was struck dumb."

No doubt about it. And John got out of Minnesota just in time.

With Algerism approved, General Miles condemned, embalmed beef found to be the thing, our soldiers set to killing off liberty loving Filipinos, the G. O. P. is marching to the Waterloo of 1900 at the double quick. G. S. O.

Elisabeth Cromwell.

Cromwell legends are so ubiquitous in England that it is a real relief to lay one's hand upon a bit of solid fact relating either to the protector or his family. Elizabeth, the second and favorite daughter of Cromwell, married John Claypole of Northborough, and appears to have spent a considerable portion of her 12 years of wedded life in his substantial fourteenth century house. Carlyle asserts Elizabeth Claypole to have been "a graceful, brave and amiable woman," and of her home that it is "now ruined—patched into a farmhouse."

The second statement is not characterized by his usual accuracy, and the first probably needs some modification, for Elizabeth Claypole is credited with some turning of her head over her father's elevation, and at a wedding feast is reported to have exclaimed, when asked why the wives of the major generals were absent, "I'll warrant you, washing their dishes at home, as they used to do." Not a particularly "amiable" sentence that.

Cromwell seems to have had some insight of her little weakness. "Tell her," he wrote once, "to take heed of a departing heart and of being cozened with worldly vanities and worldly company, which, I doubt, she is too subject to." It is agreed by most authorities that John Claypole himself was little enough of a Puritan, but let it stand to his credit that, after Oliver died, he provided a home for his widow for the rest of her life in this manor house.—Cincinnati Commercial Tribune.

Barbers on the Ocean.

One of the most important persons on board a well equipped ocean liner is the barber. If he is gifted with a good business instinct, he is in a position to make a good deal of money.

To the average man shaving while at sea is a difficult and hazardous operation. He therefore calls into requisition the services of the ship's barber, a man who by long training is qualified to wield the razor with skill and safety, no matter how much the vessel rolls or pitches.

He is always one of the most heavily "tipped" officials on the ship. If the ship travels on a route with interesting ports of call, the ship's barber makes it his business to lay in a stock of native knickknacks and curios of all kinds.

The inexperienced traveler is naturally a little suspicious of the native peddlers who swarm on board with their wares directly the ship is at anchor. He prefers to purchase his mementos of foreign travel of the barber, who, having bought his stock at wholesale rates, is able to retail the various articles to passengers at prices little if at all higher than those charged by the native tradesman.—Exchange.

Goldsmith's Actor.

Lord Nugent was one evening very eloquent to Goldsmith in praise of M. (a bad actor). "But, my lord," said Goldsmith, "you must allow he treads the stage very ill—he waddles." "Waddles!" said Lord Nugent. "Yes, he waddles like a goose. Why, you know we call him Goose M." "Well, and then, you know, when he endeavors to express strong passion he bellows." "Bellows?" said Lord Nugent. "To be sure he does—bellows like a bull. Why, we call him Bull M." "Well, then," continued Goldsmith, pursuing his triumph, "his voice breaks and he croaks." "Croaks!" said Lord Nugent. "Why, the fellow croaks like a frog. We call him Frog M. But M. is a good actor."

"Why, yes," said Goldsmith, "barring the goose, and the bull, and the frog, and a few other things I could mention, and not wishing to speak ill of my neighbors, I will allow M. is a good actor."—"Memoirs of the Earl of Nugent."

The Sea Gull and the Fisherman.

In the fishing village of Auchmithie (the Musselcraig of Scott's "Antiquary") you may frequently witness sea gulls flying into the houses of the fishermen and partaking of food from their hands. One of these sea birds was in the habit of staying in a fisherman's house all the year round except at the breeding season, when it left. Quite recently, while the gull was away, the fisherman removed his home from Auchmithie to Arbroath (the Fairport of Scott's "Antiquary"), distant some 3½ miles from the former place, taking up his residence in South street of Arbroath. The fisherman never expected to see his old friend the gull again. It was therefore much to his astonishment that he beheld a fortnight later the sea bird come walking into his new residence with stately steps to resume his old familiarities and household ways with his housekeeper.—London Lady.

The Better Drawer.

"Your money or your life!" cried the robber.

"Ha, ha!" laughed the artist, and drew a pistol. The artist had no money, and, according to the critics, not much life, but that was not why he laughed. He laughed because he belonged to the school which draws rapidly and boldly rather than the school which draws laboriously, with great attention to detail.—Detroit Journal.

London Landlords.

There is perhaps no tenant who is so completely at the mercy of his landlord as the occupier of a house in London which belongs to one of the great ground landlords. He is an absolute prisoner within the four corners of his lease. The slightest deviation is accompanied with pains and penalties, but, on the other hand, the landlord reserves all kinds of privileges to himself.

Very little furniture is used in the bedrooms of Turkish houses. Rarely is a chair seen in any of them. A few mats adorn the room, and the bed is stretched on the floor.

His Mongoose Experience.

"Although I sold tickets in a red circus wagon for years," continued the dime museum man, "I was badly fooled once in an animal deal. I mean by this that I fooled myself. I got a letter from a collector, who wanted to know if I would buy a mongoose. I wrote back to have it shipped at once, and it was to be in the museum ready for exhibition one Monday morning. I had a rather hazy idea of what the beast looked like, but I was sure that it was something big, with tusks, and I told our artist to go ahead on that idea and spread himself.

"He did. The picture he evolved would catch anyone's eye at any range. He took a whole frame of canvas and painted for a background a tropical island, with the mongoose chewing up sailors on the shore.

"The picture was finished Sunday, and I couldn't help but rub my hands when I looked at it. The moment it was hung out people flocked around it, and the early morning attendance Monday was remarkable. The doors were opened before I got down, and as I went up stairs I could hear a subdued growl.

"'That's the mongoose,' I said to myself. 'The idiots haven't fed it!'

"It wasn't the mongoose. It was the crowd growling like a Roman mob behind the scenes. They had been lured by the picture, and when they got to the cage labeled 'Mongoose' they could not see the beast at all. It had buried itself in the straw."—Chicago Tribune.

The Leopard and the Pan.

One day a worthy Kulu housewife came out from her cooking and, standing on the ledge of rock at her door, emptied a pan of boiling water into the rank herbage growing below. It fell, splash, on the back of a sleeping leopard, who jumped perpendicularly into the air as high as the roof of the hut. What might have happened next? Who can say? But the astonished woman dropped the pan with a clang upon the rock, and the leopard took one leap down hill. The pan followed, and the leopard's downward leaps became longer and swifter as the pan bounded after it from rock to rock.

When last seen the leopard had just achieved a leap of about 350 feet to the very bottom of the ravine, thousands of feet below, and the pan had whirled about 500 feet over it on to the opposite side. The leopard would have eaten the old woman with pleasure, but a pan which first scalded half the hide off him and then bounded clanging in his wake from the top of the Himalayas to the plains below was something which he could not face.—Good Words.

Is Your Name Here?

A contributor has been amusing himself by trying to answer the question or series of questions, What man in the history of the world whose name began with A—and after that every other letter of the alphabet in order—exerted the greatest influence upon the thought and conduct of mankind?

Of course there are some letters which are not very prolific in the names of great men, but we think most of our readers will be surprised to see how many of the most illustrious names in history are included and how few are excluded.

In some cases the compiler seems to have selected names quite as much with a view to comprehending in the list men of many countries, as because the name given was that of the greatest man of his time. The list follows:

Aristotle, Bacon, Confucius, Darwin, Ezra, Franklin, Goethe, Homer, Isaiah, Justinian, Kant, Luther, Mohammed, Newton, Ossian, Plato, Quintillian, Rousseau, Shakespeare, Tasso, Uhland, Virgil, Washington, Xavier, Young, Zoroaster.—London Globe.

Dangers of Laughter.

It is surprising to learn from the highest medical authority in England that laughter may be injurious.

Laughter in itself, says the British Medical Journal, cannot very well kill, but it may do harm. Hysterical girls and boys with kindred nervous affections are often given to immoderate laughter, which tends to increase nervous exhaustion.

Dr. Feilchenfeld relates an instructive case in which a little girl suffered from very definite cardiac symptoms after immoderate laughter. The patient was 13 years old and had previously been free from any sign of heart disease. After laughing on and off for nearly an hour with some companions she suddenly felt stabbing pains in the chest and was seized with fits of coughing, followed by cardiac dyspnoea, very well marked. Feilchenfeld believes that the cardiac disease directly resulted from immoderate laughing.

Defending His Profession.

"Now," said the attorney for the defense, "let us take up the bill presented by the plaintiff in this case for alleged services rendered to my client. I say alleged services, gentlemen of the jury, because these figures show every indication of having been doctored."

"Would it not be better to say lawyered?" asked an indignant physician who was serving as one of the jurors.—Chicago Tribune.

Scotland's Strange Birds.

From the small island of St. Kilda, off Scotland, 20,000 young gannets and an immense number of eggs are annually collected, and although this bird lays only one egg per annum and is four years in obtaining its maturity its numbers do not diminish. Obviously such birds must reach a great age, or they would long ago have been exterminated.

The deserts of Arabia are specially remarkable for their pillars of sand, which are raised by whirlwinds and have a very close resemblance in their appearance to waterspouts.

It is said that so difficult is the art of cutting gloves that most of the principal cutters are known to the trade by name and by fame.

The Army and Navy.

Have covered themselves with glory during the war. The Army and Navy vest pocket memorandum book published by the Northern Pacific is a compact digest of information relative to the navies and armies of Spain and the United States at the beginning of the war. It has a map of Cuba, illustrations of naval ships, glossary of navy and army terms, translation of Spanish words, etc. Send ten cents to Chas. S. Fee, general passenger agent, N. P. R., St. Paul, Minn., for a copy.

He Obeyed Orders.

Years ago, when Clemenceau was the mayor of Martre and at the same time a deputy, he opened a dispensary in the quarter, where advice was given free, for Clemenceau is a specialist in skin diseases. One day he noticed that he had just one hour in which to get his luncheon and go down to the chamber, where he had to interpellate the government. He called his assistant and said, "How many more patients are there waiting?"

"Six," replied the man.

One after the other had his case diagnosed, and Clemenceau, after another glance at his watch, said, "Tell the other two to undress at once, as I have only two more minutes to wait." One entered, and Clemenceau wrote out a prescription in the twinkling of an eye.

The last man came in as naked as the day when he was born. Clemenceau eyed him for a minute and then said: "You are suffering from no skin disease. What have you come here to worry me for?"

The man looked at him aghast for a minute and replied: "Skin disease? I never said I had a skin disease. Your man came in and told me to undress, M. le Depute, and I did so. All I wanted to ask you was to use your influence to get my sister a place in the post-offices in Algeria."

How Far Can Quail Fly?

A number of sportsmen have been discussing the question of how far a quail can fly. There are a good many contingencies to be considered in arriving at a definite conclusion of the question, the which cuts no inconsiderable figure in the distance one of these birds can fly. If there is a stiff wind blowing and the bird's course is with the wind, a full grown quail could certainly go more than a mile with ease and doubtless a much greater distance.

Those who have noticed quail trying to fly across the Missouri river, where the distance is about a mile, recall that not all the birds make the trip safely. They usually pick a spot where they can make a halt on a sand bar in midstream, and thus cross the river in two flights. But sometimes they make the distance at a single flight, and this seems to be their full limit under normal conditions, for when they alight they are completely exhausted.

It is generally believed that on an average a mile is about the limit of the flight of a quail where it is neither favored nor retarded by the wind. It happens very often that in crossing the Missouri river at a single flight quail drop exhausted into the water. Probably these are young birds.—St. Louis Republic.

Raising His Fare.

A certain board school teacher is responsible for the following little story, which is not without its pathetic side. He was endeavoring to explain the term "booking" as applied to our railway system.

"Now," he was saying, "can any of you tell me the name of the office at which railway tickets are sold?"

"The booking office," replied one of the lads.

"Right," responded the teacher.

At this moment his eye fell on a small boy at the end of the class, who was evidently paying very little attention to what was said.

"Did you hear that, Dowser?" he demanded.

"Wot, sir?" asked that youth innocently.

"As I thought, you were not listening. We will suppose that your father decided to have a day's holiday and visit the seaside. What would he have to do before he could take his seat in the train?"

Without a moment's thought the youngster electrified his teacher by replying, "Pawn his tools."—London Standard.

An Odd Collection.

One of the most remarkable collections of souvenirs ever made is a collection of male opera hats by one of the actresses of a London company. She owns no fewer than 216 of these articles, for it was her whim to make every young man who was introduced to her give her his opera hat as a souvenir. She not only keeps them in their pristine condition, but converts them into all sorts of other things, such as photograph frames, workbaskets, and some are even used for the purpose of holding flowerpots.

Golden Silence.

A man who once met Ralph Waldo Emerson at the house of a friend tells of the characteristic way in which the Concord philosopher blunted the edge of a compliment.

"Oh, Mr. Emerson," said a young woman of the party, "it must be so delightful to know that people all over the country are grateful for the things you have said!"

"Thank you," said Emerson slowly, "but it is for some of the things I have not said that I feel most grateful."

A Story of George IV.

In Lady Gregory's newly published reminiscences she says of George IV's trip to Ireland in 1821: "The king arrived after a good passage, during which much goose pie and whisky had been consumed. Word had just come of the death of Napoleon at St. Helena. The story goes that 'Sire, your enemy is dead,' were the words he was greeted with. 'When did she die?' was his response. But the queen was indeed also dead."

The Gambling Bacillus.

Successful sports know that in the highways and byways are countless idiots who skimp their families, borrow, beg and even steal in order to bet on horse races at odds of 4 to 1 against them in the long run, on stocks at 20 to 1, on slugging matches at everything to nothing. The gambling bacillus infests every legitimate sport and soon rots it.—Criterion.

The postoffice department has decided that children going to and from school shall not be allowed to get their parent's mail, so do not blame the postmaster if your children are refused the mail. The post office habit among the children is a nusiance both to the public and the postmaster, and the department has done wisely in making this decision.—Atlantic Telegraph.

Don't blame the postmaster if you don't get your paper—especially where it occurs three or four weeks in succession. The newspaper man is perhaps to blame, and again perhaps you may owe him three years on subscription. He may be getting tired of doing that kind of business. To such people, we would say, come around and see how your account stands.

The following from the Roseau Times is good logic and it fits all towns, especially small ones: If some people would give the same amount of consideration to their own business which they devote to their neighbors it would not only redound to their credit but would undoubtedly add materially to their social and financial welfare.

A newspaper to meet the approval of the public must be devoted to the interests of the community it represents, accord kind treatment to all and promote harmony. A newspaper with a sore head is about as pleasant as is the company of a man with the toothache.

Sometime ago it was reported from some unreliable source that the gang saws were to be taken out of the St. Hilaire Lumber Company's mill to be put in at Crookston. How the report gained a foothold is hard to determine. Instead, new and improved machinery is being put in and especially in the planing mill so as to increase the capacity in order to handle the large stock of lumber they expect to manufacture this season. St. Hilaire has one of the best and latest improved mills in this state as well as elsewhere and when any machinery is taken out it will be replaced by something better.

NOTABLE WEDDING.

Miss Louise Mozeur and Benjamin Rosenberg were the Contracting Parties—The Groom from St. Hilaire, Minn.—A Wedding Supper Given at Post Hall.

A notable wedding in Jewish circles occurred at 5 o'clock Sunday afternoon Feb. 19th, at the Jewish synagogue at Fourth street and Sixth avenue N. Miss Louise Mozeur of 519 Second street N, and Benjamin Rosenberg, a prominent merchant of St. Hilaire, Minn., were the contracting parties. The synagogue was tastefully decorated and the ceremony was performed in the presence of several hundred friends of the interested parties.

The bride dressed in white and the groom were preceded up the aisle by little Flora Berman and Rebecca Rosenberg who scattered flowers in their path. Joseph Mozeur, a brother of the bride, acted as best man assisted by Robert Rosenberg, Ezra Berman and L. Cohen. The bridesmaids were Miss Sarah Berman, Susie Roberts, Gertie Schulman and Paulina Cohen. L. Mozeur the brides father, gave away the bride. The ceremony was performed by Rabbi Lass assisted by Rabbi Jaffe.

The ushers were Messrs. Al. Schaefer G. L. Wade, Edward Harris, Louis Nathanson, E. Bergman and G. F. Yore

Following the ceremony a wedding supper was served in the Morgan Post Hall at Nicollet avenue and Third street to which several hundred guests where bidden. A pleasant dance program which included a cake walk which resulted in considerable merriment, followed the supper. The cake walk was won by Aaron Berman and Miss Val Erickson.—Minneapolis Times.

Ike and Ole Halverson returned to St. Hilaire last Thursday evening from the Black Duck country with the remains of their brother Halvor, who died the day before of inflamation of the lungs. Mr. Halvorson has been in that part of the country since November and had a large contract of logging. Sometime ago he was taken down with the la grippe, but still continued to work thinking on the morrow he would be alright. He let is run on and on without consulting medical aid until too late. The funeral occurred Saturday. The remains were intered besides that of his mother, who died less than a year ago, in the Swedish Lutheran cemetery.

A woman in town whoes husband made a practice of staying out late at night, adopted a most novel and effective cure. On hubby reaching the door wifey would whisper through the key hole: "Is that you, Will?" Will is not hubby's name, and he not only stays at home nights now, but keeps a loaded gun for Will's reception.—Ex.

March 2nd will be a red letter day in Red River Valley Pythianism. On that date a lodge will be instituted at Crookston with a very large charter membership, over fifty having already signified their intention of joining. A delegation of 150 of the Grand Forks braves will attend, also delegations from Fargo, Barnesville and Grafton. A special train will be run from the latter place, and if Crookston lodge isn't properly instituted the boys will know why.

The Grand Lodge from Minneapolis will come up in force and the new lodge will be given a send off that will keep it going for the next decade.

When the K. P.'s undertake anything they can be depended upon to carry it through, and Crookston is to be congratulated upon the advent of a local lodge.—Crookston Times.

Killing Weeds.

Under the head of Farm Topics I will give one remedy which will greatly assist the farmer in keeping down weeds and at the same time beautifying his farm, so that the fair gods will admire him as a tiller of the soil. First.—It is generally noticed that weeds, and especially Kinghead, grows most rank and abundent around fence corners, ditches and old buildings and at the headlands where the farmer cannot get at it to seed conveniently. Now why not (after your spring work is done) go twice around on the out side edge of your farm with your seeder and seed down timothy and sow it by hand where you cannot get at with your seeder and in most cases you can seed down the ditches which run on two sides of the average farm. It will not only be an aid in keeping down weeds, but will also give you plenty of room for your binder for the first round when you come to harvest your crop, and will also save the tramping through grain (either your own or your neighbors) when you go to cut the first round between yourself and neighbors. You will profit greatly by the above and have from four to six tons of timothy hay into the bargain. And when you leave this world and soar to realms above, and meet St. Peter at the gate who will look at you with one eye, and the other sighted on your farm below with its rich green bordered around about it, he will then surely say: "Well done good and faithful servant," etc., etc., etc.—Robert Foster, in Pink Paper, Bathgate N. D.

Tax Laws.

Following are the Minnesota tax laws in a condensed form. It should be posted in a convenient place for reference: All taxes are due on the first Monday in January of each year. Personal property tax must be paid before March 1. Real estate tax may be paid in two equal payments. Payment of the first one-half may be made on or before May 31. Payment on the second one half may be paid on or before Oct. 31. A penalty of ten per cent is added Nov. 1st if the second one half is not paid on or before Oct. 31 and said tax will become delinquent on the first Monday of January next, when an additional penalty of 5 per cent is added. Thirty cents is added to each description when delinquent list is ready for publication. Tax sales will take place on the first Monday of May following, and the amount of sales draws interests at the rate of one per cent a month until redeemed. If not redeemed within three years from date of sale all such lands become the property of state or purchaser.

A Valuable Refeaence Work.

The Year Book and Almanac issued by The Globe Company, of St. Paul, is the best work of the kind which has come to our notice. Complete in every particular, it combines history and facts, statistics and general information, properly classified and indexed in a manner which permits of instant reference. The statistics are most complete and admirably arranged for intelligent understanding. Sixty pages of the 500 which this wonderful book contains are devoted to Minnesota and the political information is the most comprehensive and valuable ever published in the state. We bespeak for this work the consideration of every intelligent person in the state, and we can say without hesitancy that it is valuable alike to Merchant, Farmer, Mechanic, Sportsman or Politician.

The price of the book is 25 cents, mailed anywhere, and, considering the amount of information it contains, it is worth fully three times that amount.

"Evil Dispositions Are Early Shown."

Just so evil in the blood comes out in shape of scrofula, pimples, etc., in children and young people. Taken in time it can be eradicated by using Hood's Sarsaparilla. In older people, the aftermath of irregular living shows itself in bilious conditions, a heavy head, a foul mouth, disordered kidneys, yellow eyes and skin, with a general bad feeling.

It is the blood, the impure blood, friends, which is the real cause. Purify that with Hood's Sarsaparilla and happiness will reign in your family.

Blood Poison—"I lived in a bed of fire for years owing to blood poisoning that followed small pox. It broke out all over my body, itching intensely. Tried doctors and hospitals in vain. I tried Hood's Sarsaparilla. It helped. I kept at it and was entirely cured. I could go on the housetops and shout about it." Mrs. J. T. Williams, Carbondale, Pa.

Scrofula Sores—"My baby at two months had scrofula sores on cheek and arm. Local applications and physicians' medicine did little or no good. Hood's Sarsaparilla cured him permanently. He is now four, with smooth fair skin." Mrs. S. S. Wesley, Farmington, Del.

IN CANADA'S FREE HOMESTEAD LANDS.

Wetaskiwin, Alta., April 5th, 1898.

W. F. McCreary, Govt. Immigration Commissioner, Winnipeg. Dear Sir:—I like the country very much so far; have seen a great number of farmers from the states and every one seen so far says they have done well and like it here far better than where they came from, and all claim it to be the best country for a poor man that they were ever in, and with good crops this season I predict a great rush. There are some nice claims to be had yet, but will not last the summer through. I do not find it any colder than in Iowa and am feeling much better than when I left there March 1st. I think this a great country for these who are suffering with throat and lung troubles. I have seen men that had as high as 51½ bushels wheat per acre and near 100 bushels oats, but they weigh from 45 to 51 pounds per bushel, but the general run is 25 to 50 wheat, 50 to 75 oats, and stock looking fine; some cattle running out were nearly in market flesh. I expect to return to the states late this fall for stock, etc.; will write you when I want to go. Thanking you all for past favors, I remain, most respectfully yours,

(Signed) Dr. D. E. Strevell.

SYRUP OF FIGS
NEVER IMITATED IN QUALITY.

THE EXCELLENCE OF SYRUP OF FIGS

is due not only to the originality and simplicity of the combination, but also to the care and skill with which it is manufactured by scientific processes known to the California Fig Syrup Co. only, and we wish to impress upon all the importance of purchasing the true and original remedy. As the genuine Syrup of Figs is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only, a knowledge of that fact will assist one in avoiding the worthless imitations manufactured by other parties. The high standing of the California Fig Syrup Co. with the medical profession, and the satisfaction which the genuine Syrup of Figs has given to millions of families, makes the name of the Company a guaranty of the excellence of its remedy. It is far in advance of all other laxatives, as it acts on the kidneys, liver and bowels without irritating or weakening them, and it does not gripe nor nauseate. In order to get its beneficial effects, please remember the name of the Company—

IS A STARTLING VICE.

PARIS' LATEST DEVICE FOR KILLING PEOPLE OFF.

Petroleum as an Intoxicant Bids Fair to Supersede the Green Devil in work of Degenerating a Nation—Sad State of Affairs Exists.

Petroleum is the new vice that threatens the brains, the strength and the purses of Parisians and Frenchmen, or, rather, it is the old vice, alcoholism, in a new and startling form, says the London Telegraph. Have we not heard of morphomania and even of the woebegone idiots who drink eau de cologne when they can get nothing more fiery? But petrolism is, in truth, a grim novelty almost without parallel. Nobody can say for certain what its origin was or what its future will be, but the competent authorities are painfully aware that the terrible habit has made considerable progress to Paris already. The excise and customs duties on alcohol of all kinds were lately raised, whereby it was rendered more difficult for the intemperate man to indulge repeatedly in his little glass. But this increase in the price does not explain the phenomenon, because the duties were raised a few days ago, whereas petrolism has, it seems, been going on for a considerable time. For one of the urban districts in the neighborhood of the bastille contains a respectable number of "petroliques," as the physicians term them, and in the outskirts of Paris many more ill-starred people are addicted to it. The taste for this disagreeable beverage grows upon the consumer, it is said, until it develops into an irresistible passion. The doctors have not yet had opportunities to study its effects, and their views, lacking a firm basis, are divergent. The consensus of opinion, however, maintains that the intoxication produced by petroleum is of a melancholy nature, which tinges things in gray. The petroleum drinker is sad, discontented, despairing. Unlike whisky, the mineral oil never bestows "Dutch courage" upon the quaffer, who is rarely quarrelsome or pugnacious. Moreover, his sleep at night would not seem to be very injuriously affected by it. Generally speaking, the "petroliques" sleep calmly enough, and even their general health is not as rapidly undermined as by the alcoholic beverages in common demand. Here, however, opinions differ. Some doctors hold that the gravest organic changes are caused by the use, which is also an abuse, of petroleum, and that the germs of mortal diseases are called into being. The manner in which the latest batch of "petroliques" was discovered is curious. A firm in the city furnished petroleum to certain retail shops. The head of one of the latter complained of short measure. The wholesale merchant denied the charge and proved that he was right. Then the retail dealer set himself to discover the clew to the mystery, but for a long time in vain. None of the liquid was removed from the premises or spilled, and yet it continued to disappear. At last it was discovered that the workmen drank it to raise their laboring power to the proper level.

SUPERSTITIOUS CELEBRITIES.

It surprises no one that dreamers and poets, or even philosophers, should be influenced by dreams and presentiments, but when men of practical minds, who are capable of directing the affairs of a nation, such men as Abraham Lincoln and Napoleon I., give heed to the signs of superstition, lesser men wonder and speculate and advance theories of their own to account for the phenomena.

The Bonapartes always were superstitious, especially the mother of Napoleon. She always had a presentiment that the rise and fall of her family would occur in the same century, that the glory which was prophesied for them would be followed by disaster. And the prediction was verified. She died in her eighty-seventh year, having lived long enough to see the downfall of all her children.

Napoleon I. always feared December 2 as an unlucky day, and it is related of him that before every important battle he would throw dice to ascertain if he were to lose or win. The "red men" whom he always saw going to battle with him was a delusion that caused him much suffering.

Among crowned heads Louis XI. of France was one of the firmest believers in superstition. He it was who had an unfortunate astrologer brought before him who told him that a beautiful woman, a friend of the king, would die, and Louis, enraged at the verification of the prediction, sent for the astrologer, and when he was brought before him ordered his courtiers to throw him out of a window of the palace. Before the order was obeyed he asked the astrologer, with a sneer, if he could tell him (the king) the hour of his own death.

"Sire," replied the quick-witted astrologer, bowing low, "I shall have the honor of dying just three days before your majesty."

Not only did the astrologer save his life then, but he was treated with the greatest care that his valuable life might be indefinitely prolonged.

Like Napoleon, Abraham Lincoln always believed he was a man of destiny. He thought he would rise to some lofty station in life, but that he would have a sudden fall. He was pleased, yet alarmed, at what he looked upon as a rent in the veil which hides the future from mortal sight, for the vision he saw was of glory and of blood.

CONSUMPTION

For Spraying Potatoes.

The Cornell University gives the following advice:

Directions for making Bordeaux mixture.—Directions were given in Bulletin 140 for making Bordeaux mixture. We have found that the ferrocyanide of potassium test is much simpler, and so the following directions are given:

Into a barrel of water suspend a gunny sack or other porous bag, containing two pounds of copper sulphate for every gallon of water in the barrel. If this is suspended near the surface of the water at night it will all be in solution by morning and ready for use. Into a water-tight box or other open receptacle place some fresh burned caustic lime, the amount to be determined somewhat by the amount of spraying to be done, but from 40 to 50 pounds of lime can be easily slaked at one time. Add sufficient water to thoroughly slake all the lime and keep well stirred so that the water may come in contact with all particles. This thorough stirring is important, and the lime should be carefully watched and stirred for several minutes, or otherwise it is likely to become dry and hard. After the lime is all slaked, cover it over with water and it is then ready for use and may be kept for any length of time desired if it is always kept covered with water. Ferrocyanide of potassium may be purchased from the drug store, and comes as a solid. One ounce of ferrocyanide of potassium dissolved in one ounce of water will be sufficient for testing many barrels of the Bordeaux mixture. When it is desired to begin spraying there should be provided two empty barrels. Into one barrel dip three gallons of the copper sulphate solution after it has been thoroughly stirred. This will provide the six pounds of copper sulphate in case two pounds were dissolved per gallon of water, and will be sufficient for making one barrel, or 45 gallons of Bordeaux mixture. Dilute the three gallons with ten or more gallons of water.

From the lime box dip from five to ten pounds of slaked lime into the empty barrel. Add water and stir thoroughly until the milk of lime is produced, after which dilute with some ten gallons more of water. Pour the milk of lime thus diluted through a sieve into the dilute copper sulphate solution. The quantity of lime to be added to the copper sulphate is to be determined by the ferrocyanide of potassium test. After adding a small amount of the milk of lime to the copper sulphate solution, add to the mixture a drop of ferrocyanide of potassium. If a brick red color is produced where the drop strikes, it indicates that more lime is needed. Continue adding the milk of lime until no reddish color will be produced when the ferrocyanide of potassium is used. A few trials will enable one to judge very accurately as to the amount of lime required. A little surplus lime will do no harm.

If Paris green is to be used it should now be added. Take 4 ounces of Paris green and place it in a dish and add water just sufficient to make a paste, and stir thoroughly until a homogeneous mixture is formed. Pour this paste into the mixture of lime and copper sulphate, and stir vigorously.

Pour the lime and copper sulphate mixture into the spray barrel, which should have a capacity of 45 to 50 gallons, and fill the barrel with water. If there is no agitator in connection with the pump, the mixture should be frequently stirred while being applied.

Cheesemaking in Wisconsin.

While many people know that considerable Swiss and Limburger cheese is made in this country, there are many others who believe that this is not so, hence it may not be amiss to quote the following from the Milwaukee Sentinel: "The cheesemaking season for 1898 has closed until next April or May. Prices have ruled rather low up to this time. They show some signs of improvement now, and the stock on hand is likely to yield greater profits than that already sold. The quantity has been greater and quality better this season than the average. The weather has been most favorable for the growth of good grass in pastures and meadows, and consequently the yield of milk was abundant and of good quality. The number of cheese factories in Greene county is 198, nearly all of which make the foreign or fancy kinds of cheese, the large, round Swiss, weighing from 70 to 250 pounds each, taking the lead; block, brick and Limburger follow closely next. As to the amount of cheese made at these factories, it is difficult to get absolutely correct figures. The product as given by the assessors' statistics for 1898 is about 6,000,000, but these figures are not correct, the total yield being about 10,174,400 pounds of cheese, or over 400 carloads of 25,000 pounds each. This great product is mostly shipped to the Pacific coast, and from there to Mexico and South America."

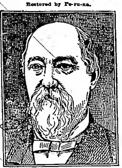
Turning Under Sod.—In breaking up land the sod should not be turned under deeply if the soil that is brought up is deficient in organic material. The depth to which the plow should be run depends on the quantity of decaying vegetation on sod in the soil. It should not go so deep as to make the percentage of this decayed vegetation, in the broken soil small for the requirements of a crop. The tendency of all soluble plant foods is to pass downwards, and whether the decayed sod or manure are to furnish the material on which the crop is to feed, the supply should be on or near the surface, or much of the value will be too far below the roots of the crop to be available. For this reason manure should generally be used as a top dressing.—Ex.

A Valuable Carnation.—A report of recent date from New York says: Thomas W. Lawson today bid $30,000 for the carnation that bears his wife's name and for the 6,000 plants which Florist Galvin has raised. The offer was accepted tonight. The $6,000 bid of Mr. Higinbotham of Chicago was first raised to $7,000 by Mr. Lawson and yesterday a New York firm made an offer of $15,000. Banker Lawson, desiring to keep the flower in Boston, at once doubled this, and after consideration Thomas F. Galvin accepted it.

The milker should be clean in all respects. He should not use tobacco and he should wash and dry his hands just before milking.

MISSOURI'S WAR GOVERNOR

Restored by Pe-ru-na.



Governor T. C. Fletcher.

Hon. Thomas C. Fletcher, the noted war Governor of the State of Missouri, is a great friend of Pe-ru-na. He writes:

The Pe-ru-na Drug M'f'g Co., Columbus, Ohio.

Gentlemen—For years I have been afflicted with chronic catarrh, which has gone through my whole system, and no one knows the torture and misery I have passed through. My doctor has prescribed various remedies, and I have never found any relief until I was persuaded by a friend to use Dr. Hartman's Pe-ru-na. After the use of one bottle I feel like a new man. It also cured me of a dropping I had in my throat, and built my system up generally. To those who are suffering with catarrh I take pleasure in recommending your great medicine. Very respectfully,

Thomas C. Fletcher.

Everything that affects the welfare of the people is a legitimate subject of comment to the real statesman. The statesman is not a narrow man. It is the politician who is narrow. The true statesman looks out on the world as it is, and seeks, as far as is in his power, to remedy evils and encourage the good.

Catarrh in its various forms is rapidly becoming a national curse. An undoubted remedy has been discovered by Dr. Hartman. This remedy has been thoroughly tested during the past forty years. Prominent men have come to know of its virtues, and are making public utterances on the subject. To save the country we must save the people. To save the people we must protect them from disease. The disease that is at once the most prevalent and stubborn of cure is catarrh.

No Resemblance.

A Pittsburg teacher of languages met one of his pupils on the avenue and greeted him affably, but the pupil did not respond as the teacher expected.

"I think you are m-m-mistaken in the p-p-p-person," said the pupil.

"Certainly not; I know you very well," said the teacher in surprise.

"M-m-must be some other p-p-person," persisted the young man.

"Nonsense! You are one of my pupils. Don't you know your teacher?"

"Perhaps it is my b-b-brother you m-m-mean. I d-d-don't know you."

"Well, the resemblance is very striking. You look just like him and talk just like him."

"N-n-no, I don't t-t-talk like him. He has an im-p-p-ediment in his s-speech, and I haven't."—Pittsburg Chronicle-Telegraph.

Rules for Long Life.

The figures and statistics of the census and the life insurance companies show, according to P. McArthur, in Ainslee's Magazine, that if one would live long one must follow Beecher's advice and be careful in the selection of your parents, especially long-lived ones; be born a female; be a genius with a leaning toward philosophy; be a Quaker; avoid financial worry; buy an annuity; make a happy marriage and live a moderate, temperate life between the thirtieth and fiftieth degrees of latitude. Even then some would question whether his life was worth living on these conditions. And if everybody bought annuities, who would provide them?

Pretty Full.

He stood on the rear platform of the street car and flung his arms, slapping his sides to keep warm.

Another passenger jumped aboard and, without waiting to peer through the frosted glass door, said:

"What's the matter? Why don't you go inside. Is it full in there?"

"Full?" the other replied in a tone that was laden with disgust; "my friend, it's so full that you can't even look into that car without overcrowding."—Chicago Daily News.

Man's Indebtedness to Insects.

According to Grant Allen, in the Strand Magazine, beetles and other insects anticipated man in the burial of its dead and manuring of his fields by devouring and burying dead animals, where they enrich the soil and promote the growth of vegetation. "There is," he says, "hardly a human trade or a human activity which does not find its counterpart in animal and vegetable life."

Time's Alterations.

"The New York police are always peculiarly handicapped in their search for big criminals."

"How is that?"

"Why, the suspected men get so old that when they are finally arrested nobody can identify them."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

More Economical.

"What style of tandem are you going to ride this year, Grumpey? I remember Miss Miggins objected to the one you had last year."

"I'm going to ride the same tandem, but with some other girl."—Chicago Tribune.

Not the Proper Thing.

"I hope you won't send a negative," commented Mr. Snaggs.—Pittsburg Chronicle-Telegraph.

Kept Her Word.

"What are you going to do with that silver-mounted revolver of mine?" asked the languid husband.

"I'm going to use it to drive the wolf from the door!" replied the energetic wife.

Whereupon he took it to the nearest pawnshop and got $2 on it.—Chicago Tribune.

"Getting accustomed to it, eh?"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Our Policy of Territorial Expansion.

Annexationists are advocating the addition of Canada to this country, and think it can be accomplished in a peaceful manner without exciting a quarrel with England. Such questions call for the wisest statesmanship, just as dyspepsia, constipation, liver and kidney diseases call for a reliable remedy like Hostetter's Stomach Bitters.

Suggestions for Women as to the Care of Dainty Underwear.

It is one thing to have pretty belongings, and another to keep them so. Of nothing can this be more truly said than of women's underwear, so generally ruined in washing with strong, impure soap, and by hard rubbing. Silk and woolen underwear should never be washed on a cloudy day. When ready to do the work, half fill a tub with warm water, in which dissolve a fourth of a bar of Ivory soap, and wash the articles through it with the hands, rinse in warm water and squeeze, but do not wring. Hang on the line and press with a hot iron while damp.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh That Contain Mercury,

As mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is tenfold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally, and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co. Testimonials free. Sold by Druggists, price 75c per bottle.

TUMOR EXPELLED.

Unqualified Success of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Mrs. Elizabeth Wheelock, Magnolia, Iowa, in the following letter describes her recovery from a very critical condition:

"Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—I have been taking your Vegetable Compound, and am now ready to sound its praises. It has done wonders for me in relieving me of a tumor.

"My health has been poor for three years. Change of life was working upon me. I was very much bloated and was a burden to myself. Was troubled with smothering spells, also palpitation of the heart and that bearing-down feeling, and could not be on my feet much.

"I was growing worse all the time, until I took your medicine.

"After taking three boxes of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Lozenges, the tumor passed from me.

"My health has been better ever since, can now walk quite a distance and am troubled no more with palpitation of the heart or bloating. I recommend your medicine to all sufferers from female troubles."

It is hardly reasonable to suppose that any one can doubt the efficiency of Mrs. Pinkham's methods and medicine in the face of the tremendous volume of testimony.

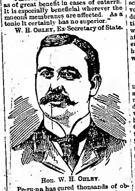
Public Statement From A Public Man

Hon. W. H. Ohley, Ex-Secretary of State of West Virginia, writes an open letter.

CHARLESTON, W. Va., Mar. 9, 1898.
To whom it may concern:

"I most heartily recommend Pe-ru-na as of great benefit in cases of catarrh. It is especially beneficial wherever the mucous membranes are affected. As a tonic it certainly has no superior."
W. H. OHLEY, Ex-Secretary of State.



Hon. W. H. OHLEY.

Pe-ru-na has cured thousands of obstinate cases of catarrh, and is perhaps the only efficient remedy in existence for catarrhal diseases; but there are countless multitudes of people who are still struggling with catarrh and need help. To such as these the unqualified recommendation of Pe-ru-na by Ex-Secretary Ohley is directed. Pe-ru-na is scientific and purely vegetable. All druggists sell it.

JACK AND HIS WILL.

A Special Act of the British Parliament Arranges That Matter.

Jack has the proud distinction of having had an act of parliament passed for the express purpose of deciding the way in which he must make his will, so that while all other Britons are lumped together in this matter under the wills act of 1838 sailors testamentary documents are made under the naval wills act of 1866. The most important proviso of this act is that all wills made by sailors or marines must be witnessed and attested by the chaplain or some other officer if they are actually made on board ship, and this is somewhat curious.

If a sailor likes to make his will on shore, any one can witness it for him. but on board ship the case is different. Needless to say they almost all to a man choose the latter course, as they know that things will be straighter for bearing an officer's signature. If, however, supposing that the vessel was in action and a man was to be struck down who had not previously made a will, if he had to do so before he died, even if it were not attested by an officer, the admiralty has full power to act on the merits of the case and to dispense with that or any other formality that it was impossible to comply with. Another thing—a sailor shares with a soldier the privilege of when on active service being the only man who can dispense with a written will and make a verbal one

In former times any one could make his will verbally if he so desired, but this, as may be supposed, opened the door to no end of fraud, and it was consequently repealed in the 1838 act. except in the case mentioned above On the night before a ship or a regiment goes into action there is no more pathetic sight than to see the men, young and old, laboriously writing their wills in case tomorrow should be their last day in this world, and what with witnessing wills and making them on the forms issued by the authorities for those who cannot write—and this class has now almost entirely disappeared from both the navy and the army—the officers have a very busy time.—London Golden Penny.

THE FIREMAN'S LIFE.

He Cannot Always Finish His Toilet Before a Mirror.

"Of course everything about the fire department interests us always," said Mr. Glimby, "but there is one little thing in particular that I've seen I suppose hundreds of times that appeals to me more every time I see it, and that is the firemen getting into their coats as they go along. You see this among the men on trucks and on hose wagons. The men on the engine have to use their hands to hold on.

"It's a simple enough thing in general to see a man putting on his coat, but here he isn't standing up in his room before a mirror, but he's jumped out of bed and taken his coat under his arm and slid down a sliding pole and is completing his dressing sitting on top of a rack of ladders going through the street like mad, drawn by three great horses at one end, with a man down at the other end steering this outfit with a wheel. This sight never loses its novelty or its interest. You may see the same thing on a hose wagon.

"But what set me to speaking about this now was seeing a man on a fire patrol wagon, sitting on one of their long seats, facing outward, pulling up the tops of his high boots—red wagon, galloping horses, banging gong, men in fire hats and rubber coats, the whole blooming outfit on the dead jump and this man sitting on the side seat reaching down for the tops of those boots and straightening up with each one as he got it and swaying back a little as he pulled it up into place, just as a man would sit on the edge of his bed at home to put on his stockings and slippers and just as cool and comfortable."—New York Sun.

Geography For Women.

The introduction to Parkenton's "Modern Atlas," published in 1815, has a reference to "the sex" which ought to be very interesting to our modern college girl. The learned author says:

Geography is a study so universally instructive and pleasing that it has for nearly a century been taught even to females, whose pursuits are foreign from serious researches. In the trivial conversation of the social circle, in the daily avidity of the occurrences of the times, pregnant indeed above all others with rapid and important changes that affect the very existence of states and empires, geography has become a habitual resource to the elegant female, as well as the profound philosopher.

Stopping a Big Steamship.

To stop the Etruria, whose displacement is 9,680 tons, horsepower 14,321 and speed 20.18 knots an hour, 3 minutes and 47 seconds are required, and during the process of stopping the ship will forge ahead 2,404 feet, or nearly half a mile. The United States cruiser Columbia, with a displacement of 7,350 tons, 17,991 horsepower and a speed of 22.8 knots an hour, can be stopped in 2 minutes and 15 seconds and within a space of 2,147 feet. In each case the vessel is supposed to be going at full speed and the stoppage produced by reversing the action of the propeller.

Dumas' Quick Wit.

Dumas found a man asleep in the Theatre Francais during the playing of a piece by his friend Soumet. "You see that?" said he, "that's your work."

Next evening a Dumas comedy was put on. The two friends looked in again and found a sleeper.

"You see, dear Dumas," said Soumet, "your works can produce sleep."

"Do you refer to that man?" replied Dumas. "Why, that's the man who was there last night. He's not awake yet!"—San Francisco News Letter.

THISTLE DOWNS.

Lighter and whiter than a flying flake
Of winter snows through wan air winnowing,
The thistle downs their sudden journeys take
O'er meadows while in vagrant wandering
No more shall they to earth reluctant cling
As a moss lined and slowly sinking stone
Left lying in an outer waste alone
Beside the edge of some remote morass,
But high they toss above the fields new mown,
Like disembodied spirits of the grass.

The drowsy atmosphere in lines opaque
Leans to the sun, that fast is gathering
The last faint dews, his fiery thirst to slack,
While swallows dip, on ever restless wing.
Across a dusty road the robins sing,
And bumblebees upon the clover drone,
While thistle downs in airy spaces lone
Along the skies in happy freedom pass,
Voyaging afar to mystic climes unknown,
Like disembodied spirits of the grass.

—Ernest McGaffey.

TRICKS OF A MIND READER.

The Simple Explanation of an Apparently Difficult Feat.

"Speaking of telegraphy," said a gentleman who takes an interest in occult studies, "reminds of an incident which created a great stir some years ago, but is now about forgotten. A New York lawyer who claimed to be able to project thought, had a committee of skeptics select a playing card at random and then wired a friend in San Francisco, asking him to think of a card and telegraph back what one came into his mind. The card selected was the five of spades and the reply was correct. All the parties were well known, and the experiment caused an immense sensation

"The newspapers discussed it by the column, and it was exploited as a positive demonstration of thought transference, but as a matter of fact the whole thing was merely a clever trick. I had it afterward explained to me by one of the people on the inside. It had been prearranged with the San Francisco man that the cue to the right card was to be the wording of the message. The denomination was indicated by the number of words in the second sentence. If, for instance, it was an ace, the sentence would be only one word, 'Answer,' if a deuce it would be 'Answer immediately,' and so on.

"As it happened to be a five the message ran, 'Telegraph reply quickly as possible.' The suit of the card was revealed by the signature. Signing the name in full meant hearts, the first only meant clubs, the last name meant spades, and the initials meant diamonds. The system was beautifully simple, and the message seemed on its face perfectly innocent. It was carefully examined to find a hidden word, but baffled the investigators. As far as I know, the truth about the affair has never been printed."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Diplomacy.

One day a gentleman was holding a conversation with his wife in the presence of their 5-year-old son, and among other things mentioned was "diplomacy."

"Pa," said the youngster when a break in the conversation allowed him to interfere, "what does diplomacy mean?"

"Diplomacy, my son," said the father, "is this—doing exactly the right thing at exactly the right moment."

"Then I suppose I used diplomacy when I got out of the pantry yesterday, dad, did I?"

"What do you mean?" was the reply.

"Why," said the son, "I got into the back yard with that meat pie just at the moment ma caught the cat in the pantry and told you to drown her for thieving."—Pearson's Weekly.

He Wasn't Proud.

The London Telegraph says that while a certain bishop was waiting for a train at Waterloo station, a porter, who often sees him into a compartment and shuts the door, in order that his lordship may be alone, came up to him in a state of excitement and asked

"Your reverence, do you see that gentleman standing in the doorway over there?"

"Yes," answered the bishop.

"Do you know who it is?" continued the porter.

"No," said his lordship.

The railway man then whispered: "It's the 'Coffee Cooler,' your reverence. Oh, he ain't proud! He'll shake hands with your reverence if you like."

The "Coffee Cooler" is a noted colored prizefighter

Ingrowing Nails.

To prevent an ingrowing nail a strip of cotton should be worked between the nail and the flesh, left large enough to cover the entire nail. A piece of cotton is then twisted into a long roll and placed on the other side of the nail groove over the sound skin. The space between is filled with lead nitrate, heaped up, and the larger piece of cotton folded over it, with more cotton outside, held in place with a moist bandage. This dressing is renewed every day, and in two or three the exuberance is reduced until the edge of the nail can be seen, and cotton inserted between it and the flesh beneath, when the nitrate can be discontinued.

Mormonism.

The good wife looked at her mending basket and sighed. If she hadn't seen them there she wouldn't have believed her husband could have worn holes in so many pairs of socks in so short a time.

"There are occasions," she said at last, "when I am almost ready to believe that it would be a good thing for a man to be a Mormon."

Then she went at the job she would willingly have shared with a few other wives.—Chicago Post.

DYED DIAMONDS.

Yellow Stones Can Be Made to Look Like Gems of the First Water.

"There are tricks in every trade" has grown to be an adage, and this proverb holds especially good with regard to the jewelry trade, which for "ways that are dark and tricks that are vain" fairly takes the palm for roguery.

Although a great deal of capital, time and labor have been devoted to counterfeiting the diamond, very little success has been obtained from a fraudulent point of view, as the diamond possesses extraordinary qualities of hardness and brilliancy, with which no imitation, up to now, can attempt to vie. "Paste" of all kinds can be tested by means of a sharp steel file, which scratches its surface.

A method of successful imposition with diamonds has, however, been discovered, and the originator of this swindle actually defrauded the pawnbrokers of London alone in one year of upward of [illegible]00,000.

The general public, as well as jewelers, are aware that diamonds of a yellowish tinge, or, as they are called in the trade, "straws," are worth very little. Large stones of this color, even when weighing from 10 to 100 carats, are quite common and will only fetch in the market from $5 to $20 per carat, the value, of course, increasing in ratio with weight. Diamonds of the same weight, if of the first water, or perfectly colorless, would be worth from five to ten times as much.

The methods of the individual referred to were as follows: He purchased a quantity of "yellow" stones, and then by a simple yet ingenious process succeeded in imparting to them an evanescent purity of color. This was done by procuring two ordinary glasses, a kettle of boiling water and a threepenny packet of mauve dye.

The "yellow" diamond, which was perhaps set in a gold ring or pin, was merely dipped in the glass containing the dye, and then in clean boiling water half a dozen times, and allowed to dry, when it presented all the appearance, even to the eye of an expert, of a magnificent stone of the first water.

The next move was to place the ring on the finger, and the well dressed diamond dyer would sally forth, enter a pawnbroker's and pledge the ring for at least three times its worth. Within 12 hours, however, the effects of the dye would have disappeared, and the pawnbroker could only wonder what on earth was wrong with his eyes when he advanced so much money on such a yellow stone.

Fortunately, owing to the magnitude of this individual's operations, the fraud was discovered, and now pawnbrokers, if they are suspicious of a diamond's color, immerse it in nitric acid, which destroys any dye that may be present without in any way injuring the stone.—London Mail.

GOOD MONEY FOR BAD NEWS

Paid to Learn That Sight Would Leave Him in Six Months.

Somehow it made me feel bad, this happening that I am about to relate. I was in the office of an oculist, one of the leading men in his profession in Pittsburg. A big, strong and healthy looking man entered. His appearance indicated that he had many years of life before him. He was well dressed, keenly intelligent and of pleasant countenance.

"Doctor," he said, "my eyes have been troubling me, and I would like you to make an examination of them and treat them."

After a few preliminary questions the doctor told him to strip himself to the waist. He took off his clothes and stood there, a magnificent specimen of manhood. The doctor examined him, paying particular attention to his back, for a reason of which I know nothing. Having finished, he said:

"Put on your clothes. I can do nothing for you. Your sight may last six months, but no longer. Treatment will do no good. Blindness is sure to come."

"What's the matter, doctor?" he asked quietly, with a faint tremor in his voice.

The doctor told him in technical language and then explained that the trouble came from the wasting of a nerve leading from the spine.

"What's your bill, doctor?" asked the man when he got his clothes on.

"Five dollars," replied the doctor.

He paid it and left the office without another word. In the fullness of life he walked out into the blessed light of day, doomed within six months to darkness until death. It was an incident to the doctor; to me it was a tragedy.—Pittsburg News.

Irving Didn't Read.

Sir Henry Irving appeared at the Theater Royal, Edinburgh, in 1857, and two years later he went to Linlithgow to give a reading there. He was delighted to see his name in big letters on the posters on arriving in the town. He went to the hall, but there was no crowd there—in fact, the caretaker had not arrived, having forgotten all about the reading. Irving went in search of him, and things were got ready; 8:30 o'clock arrived, but no one came to the hall—not even a small boy. In recalling the incident Sir Henry was wont to say, "I never slept better than I did that night."

Its Natural Effect.

"How many of these sheep got out of here?" asked the angry farmer.

"I don't know," replied the new hired man, rubbing his eyes. "After I'd watched five or six of 'em jump over the fence I seemed to lose the count. That always puts me to sleep."—Chicago Tribune.

Of No Avail.

"Prisoner," said the court, "have you anything to say for yourself?"

"What's the use?" replied the culprit; "you guys wouldn't believe me."—Philadelphia North American.

MANY SECRET MINES.

ENGLAND'S COAST STUDDED WITH THESE DEFENSES.

Their Locality, Approaches and Firing Points Are Mysteries That Foreign Spies Have Often Tried, but Always In Vain, to Solve.

England has the most formidable navy in the world, but she does not rely upon it alone in the event of war to prevent a foreign force from landing upon her shores. London Tit-Bits, in an article on the secret coast defenses of Great Britain, says:

In the event of war no alien army could approach our shores without imperiling its navy by encountering our explosive mines, scores of which surround our coasts at all places likely to be selected for attack by a foreign foe. The Thames is also carefully shielded by similar secret mines, one of these being in the vicinity of Blackwall. The precise locality of these mines is, however, for obvious reasons, kept a dark and inscrutable mystery, and the approaches to them are so cleverly constructed and concealed that no one save an expert would suspect their real character.

An innocent looking cellar at the basement of a certain tradesman's shop is the entrance to one important mine, but even the tradesman himself is not aware that the government rents his cellar, nor does he ever surmise the true nature of the operations carried on therein. The mines are equipped with explosives of the most potent kind and admirably connected with the secret chambers on shore by means of electric wires.

Each mine is controlled by a button, over which are printed particulars relating to the location and character of the mine. This button is placed in the wall of the secret chamber and covered by a double door, securely locked, the outer door so closely resembling the wall of the chamber that no one but those in the secret could detect its presence. The chambers are double locked and approached by passages protected in a similar manner.

Every lock and key is specially made for the government and is unlike any other. Only a few of the very highest officials are allowed to use these keys, and they are solemnly sworn to preserve their secret rigidly. No persons apart from those especially empowered may inspect or visit any of the secret chambers at any time except by express written permit personally procured from a certain high official. This is exceedingly difficult to obtain, and in fact is rarely ever granted.

Prior to such a permit being issued the officials assure themselves that the possessor of the document bears a blameless character, is British born and has no ulterior reasons for preferring his request. This settled, he is sworn to secrecy in the most solemn manner, blindfolded and conducted by a circuitous route to the secret chamber, where he is permitted to use his eyes, but not his tongue, no questions being answered by the attending officials.

Strange stories have been told of attempts made by foreign spies to penetrate the privacy of these mysterious mines.

A young lieutenant in the navy, whose honorable character won the confidence of his superior officers some years since, was accorded the privilege of guarding one of these secret mines and intrusted with certain information concerning its character.

Soon after his appointment he became engaged to a charming young French lady of whom he was desperately enamored. By some inexplicable means his fiancee got to hear of his appointment, and by alternate threats and persuasion induced him to take her to see the secret mine under his care.

On the evening arranged, after extracting a solemn vow of secrecy from his ladylove and getting her to don the dress of a naval officer for the occasion, he was about to set out on his secret mission when, to his surprise and alarm, he and his companion were arrested by detectives. In some mysterious manner the authorities had been enlightened as to the proceedings on foot and were in time to stop them.

For "breach of regulations" the young lieutenant was subsequently court martialed and reduced, while his charming companion, who proved to be a spy in the employ of the French government, was conveyed back to her own country, with a caustic caution.

On another occasion a German gentleman contrived to locate the entrance to one of the secret chambers and actually hired a member of the Bill Sikes fraternity to aid him in negotiating the double locks one dark November night. But so splendidly fitted and fortified were these appliances both the visitors were doomed to disappointment. Returning from the rendezvous, both the plotter and his accomplice were arrested and imprisoned.

Worth Waiting For.

During a performance at at the Tynemouth Aquarium, a couple from Old Hartley were among the audience. When half time arrived, an attendant placed on the stage a board inscribed with the word "Interval."

"W'at's that, Geordie?" asked the wife. Geordie spelled the word.

"I-n, in; t-e-r, inter; v-a-l, interval."

"But w'at is't?"

"Aa divvent knaa, lass. The foaks is nall gaanin oot; but we'll stop to see it!"—San Francisco Wave.

In 1666 the great fire in London burned over 430 acres, destroying at least $35,000,000 worth of property. In 1873 the Boston fire burned over 65 acres, at a loss of $1,000,000 an acre. If the same fire occurred today, it would cost, at the very lowest estimate, $100,000,000. In 1898 the loss on the 2½ acres burned over was over $350,000,000.

POPULAR PROVERBS

SOME THAT ARE FAIRLY BRIMFUL OF ABSURDITY.

Maxims Often Quoted and at Times Advanced as Argument Which Have Neither Wit Nor Wisdom to Commend Them—Contradictory Sayings.

There is a mistaken notion abroad, says a writer in London Tit-Bits, that proverbs are epitomes of wisdom, the concentrated experience of generations, and that to quote one of them in a discussion is to advance an unanswerable argument. And yet what is there to recommend many of them beyond their jingle? Take our familiar friend:

Early to Bed and Early to Rise, Makes a Man Healthy, Wealthy and Wise.—Obviously, the main idea was to find a word to rhyme with "rise," and "wise" was the unfortunate word chosen. And now, trustful little boys are persuaded to go to bed at unreasonably early hours in the hope of becoming a sort of Sandow-Rothschild-Solomon, though we all know milkmen and market gardeners who get up at 5 a. m. and are neither rich nor clever, and members of parliament who go to bed late and are, if not clever, at least not poor and infirm. Since the invention of gas and electric light this ridiculous old proverb has outlived its original modicum of truth, and proves we must not venerate proverbs on account of their hoary antiquity.

The Early Bird Catches the Worm.—The mistake made here is that it assumes we are all birds. But some of us are worms. If we were not, what would become of the birds? And, therefore, while the birds do well to be early, let the worms be late—the later the better.

The Pitcher That Goes Oft to the Well Is Broken at Last.—Note, it does not say "is broken first," but "is broken at last." Of course, every pitcher, whether it goes to the well or stays on the shelf, is broken at last, and the only result of this absurd proverb is to encourage lazy folk to do as little work as possible and unnecessarily keep out of harm's way.

If You Want a Thing Well Done, Do It Yourself.—There's shocking bad advice with which to start a youth on life's journey. If he wants a button well sewed on, he's to do it himself; if he wants his hair well cut, he's to cut it himself. He must mend his own chairs, shoe his own nag, darn his own socks. In short, from buying a horse to blacking his boots, he must do it himself. Poor fellow!

A Contented Mind Is a Continual Feast.—Can any one say what that means? Does it mean that the owner continually feasts on his contented mind or that the contented mind is continually feasting? Probably the latter, as we sometimes hear that "a hungry man's an angry man," and would know that a satisfied appetite is the source of contentment. Hence it is not the contented mind which makes the feast, as the silly proverb implies, but the continual feast which produces the contented mind.

There's No Rule Without an Exception.—This is not only a proverb, it is also a rule. But obviously there is no exception to this rule, because if there were a rule without an exception this proverb would be untrue. But the proverb is a rule which has no exception, which, as Mr. Euclid would say, is absurd. Which was to be shown.

Where Ignorance Is Bliss, 'Tis Folly to Be Wise.—For oracular stupidity this proverb may be classed with the one about the pitcher. Granting it true, the difficulty is to know where ignorance is bliss and of course the proverb gives no assistance where it is most needed. Most people quote it as "ignorance is bliss," in their blissful ignorance, but if a proverb gives rise to error it is not only absurd; it is also dangerous. When people say—

A Little Learning Is a Dangerous Thing—They make that a reason not for learning more, but for learning less.

Love Me, Love My Dog.—If I go a-courting, and my ladylove bids me love her scented, dyspeptic poodle, which is not necessary to her health and comfort, must I not much more love her glass eye and false teeth and hair, which are? Yet common sense revolts at the notion, and I therefore assume that a proverb which, logically treated, makes such unreasonable demands on my affections is wrong and absurd.

Seeing Is Believing.—How can any reflecting person repeat these words? For very often we believe we see what really we do not. If a conjurer were to take this proverb as his motto, every one would see its absurdity. A straight stick half submerged in water looks crooked. Fortunately, another proverb says, "Trust not to appearances." And this brings us to the exquisite absurdity of popular proverbs which run in contradictory pairs and support both sides of an argument. Thus one proverb says, "Look before you leap;" another, "Who hesitates is lost." Sometimes we hear that "Second thoughts are best;" at other times that "Delays are dangerous." The desperate man relies on "Nothing venture, nothing have;" the cautious man on "Never venture out of your depth till you can swim." The impatient matrimonial candidate believes that "Happy's the wooing that's not long a-doing;" the tardy one that one may "Marry in haste and repent at leisure." And so on ad infinitum. "Absence makes the heart grow fonder"—"Out of sight, out of mind," "It's never too late to mend"—"A fool at 40 will never be wise," "Too many cooks spoil the broth"—"There's safety in numbers" and "Two heads are better than one."

Therefore, let us examine our proverbial coinage before we pass it into the moral currency.

Change Wanted.

What some people need more than anything else is change—they have dollars, and they need sense.—Jewish Comment.

PEOPLE WHO GAMBLE.

Chinese and Italians Especially Addicted to Games of Chance.

Of all the nations of the earth who gamble—and they all do it more or less—the Chinese come in an easy first. Superstition and the gambling mania go in double harness, and while the mandarins fly kites to decide what should be done about Wei-Hai-Wei and Talien-Wan the humbler Celestials gamble for dear life to pass the time away. "The Chinese play night and day," says a traveler, "till they have lost all they are worth, and then they usually go and hang themselves," from which it would appear that the yellow danger is not so formidable after all.

The Chinese laborers in the United States squander their earnings in a game called "white pigeon's ticket." White, by the way, is the unlucky color for the gamer and the lucky one for the keeper of the gaming house. These gentry keep orange peel in a box, believing that it will bring them luck.

The Italians are no less superstitious, and they gamble persistently, the poor people especially, in the government lotteries. Everything has a number; a cat, a dog, a gondola, and the "Libro dei Sogno"—the lotto player's oracle—will tell you what the number is and the rules for interpreting the appearances in dreams. Visitors to Venice, which has always been a stronghold of gambling, may have seen the declaration of the winning figures from the Campanile of St. Mark's—the silent, eager crowd gathered in the square and the group of officials gathered round the boy with the bandaged eyes who draws the numbers from the cage.

There is a story told in Venice of a madman who hailed a gondolier from the window of the madhouse on the island to tell him the numbers he had dreamed. The man put his money on them and won, and from that day to this the gondoliers go near the window as they pass in the hope that the madman will call again. The story is true.—London Chronicle.

VORACIOUS LITTLE ROBINS.

Each Required Fourteen Yards of Angleworms Every Day.

A would be philanthropist relates his experiences trying to play mother to a nest of little robins, which had by some accident been deprived of their rightful mother's care. He diligently set to work digging angleworms, and supposed that he was fulfilling his whole duty, when one of the poor little songsters died. Upon examination of the body, which was reduced to skin and bone, the foster parent came to the conclusion that it must have died of starvation.

Deeply grieved at his shortcoming, he redoubled his efforts, determined to at least save the other two. It was not long, however, before a second one died, evidently of the same malady. The good man then resolved that, whatever the third one died of, it should not be starvation, and took off his coat and went to work in earnest. He kept on with the angleworm diet until he found that his one little bird was consuming from 14 to 18 yards of angleworms a day. This was too much for his patience, and he proceeded to substitute the more easily managed diet of bread and milk and other delicacies, which were, however, not nearly so much to Miss Robin's taste.

Wanting to discover whether he had been catering to a family of abnormal appetites, our friend took to watching the methods of a real mother bird and found that she fed her young every two minutes. He then consulted the learned books upon birds and discovered that 14 yards of worms a day, with meals every two minutes, is the average rate of feeding nedgelings. He has therefore decided that he does not care to take up raising birds by hand as a business.—Boston Transcript.

He Got the Ad.

"You're not on that horrid paper, are you," cried the girl who speaks her mind, "though I did once meet a reporter from it who was rather nice? He came to see about getting an advertisement— What! Not a reporter? Why, I thought he was. Well, anyway I had lost a dog, and he said he had heard of it and wanted to know if I didn't want to advertise in his paper for it. I told him I didn't believe I liked his old paper, and he said he didn't think much of it himself, but he thought it was pretty apt to reach the class of people who stole dogs. And so since he was so polite about it I thought I might as well advertise in it. But I didn't get the dog."—New York Commercial Advertiser.

Show Your Best Qualities.

Honesty does not require us to hang our oil paintings faced to the wall in order that our friends may see that they are made on coarse canvas. It is right to appear always at our best. Give the world your brightest thoughts, your most courteous speech, the outcome of your kindest impulses and purest motives, no matter if you are conscious that these things are above your ordinary level. God made the flowers show their colors, not their dull, fibrous matter; to load the air with their odors, not with the rankness of their sap.—Homiletic Review.

Romance Versus Reality.

The romanticist speaks: A realist is a man who takes his own vision of the world as true and the visions of all other persons as false.

The realist speaks: The romanticist is a man who has forgotten the origin and meaning of the nursery tales with which his head is filled.—New York Commercial Advertiser.

THE ROAD.

Pray, whither leads the road, fair heart?
Say, whither leads the road?
Across a rill, around a hill,
Beside a dell where rivers start,
Where bending nut trees shed their load.
Oh, thither leads the road, dear heart,
Oh, thither leads the road!

What matter where the road may lead,
So thou and I together go.
Companionship is all our need,
Division all our woe.

The pine tree tall on yonder hill
For years has watched the passersby.
When both are dust, we shall be still
Together, thou and I.

How hushed the afternoon! I dare
Not whisper love, but send the thought
In speechless message! All the air
In silence thrall is caught.

The wind dreams round their tall heads crept!
The drowsy leaves that [illegible] aloft
Stir like a child in sleep.

Young autumn's fire begins to burn
The brands to hurl at winter's brow,
The sun wooed leaves sigh low and turn
To crimson on the bough.

Pray, whither leads the road, fair heart?
Say, whither leads the road?
Across a rill, around a hill,
Beside a dell where rivers start,
Where bending nut trees shed their load.
Oh, thither leads the road, my heart,
Oh, thither leads the road!

—John Albert Macy in Chap Book.

Messieurs Mesurenr and Moron of the third subcommittee for the Paris World's exposition in 1900 have finished the herculean task of examining into the "new ideas" presented for realization at the coming event.

While it is true that most of the schemes spoken of in the newspapers are the very incarnation of idiocy, there are some which appear to deserve a less sweeping criticism than that exercised by the commission.

An amusing proposition of M. Benda is to fix a huge mirror to the top of the Eiffel tower which would present a mirage of the larger part of Paris. Another huge mirror is to be affixed to the base of the tower in such a position as to reflect the mirage of the top mirror. In this manner the visitors to the exposition would have the opportunity to witness Parisian life without the fatigue and expense of participating in it.

The Eiffel tower, by the way, has caused so many would be inventors to present fantastic schemes that to the latter the major part of the commission's report is devoted. M. Hunt proposes a six cornered building, 100 feet in diameter and 200 feet high, on the top of which sleigh races are to be held upon artificial snow. M. Banks has the idea of a gigantic candelabra whose three feet are to serve as promenades. M. Buffa advises the erection of two fountains, one representing a man and the other a woman at 200 times the average size, which would make this proposed inland pharos about 1,100 feet high. A patriot, M. Couchol, would have the Eiffel tower remodeled into a statue of France, the first two stories to serve as pedestal. M. Mazelaygue proposes a house 1,000 feet in height in order to ascertain scientifically to what height houses may be habitable without danger.

A pyramid of 1,200 feet height revolving around its center is the ideal of John Richardson. As philosopher and philanthropist Gustave Songeux proposes two colossal statues, "War" and "Peace," "whose contrast would cause all nations to declare in favor of peace."

For the sake of gallantry the proposition of Miss Josefa Hanse may be mentioned to revive the old wooden horse of the memory of the siege of Troy and to build a horse with "all the points of a blooded animal," which would have an interior capable of holding 1,000 people.

More prosaic and practical is the scheme of Mlle. Ralfe to construct a mechanical elephant for the children and a tea fountain for the adults. The idea of swings flying 400 feet high, submitted by M. Gauss and Mr. Farnshaw, is old. More original is a project of Axel Shoot to construct a screw 600 feet high, along the threads of which a car would conduct visitors to a restaurant at the top.

Worthy of mention is the proposition by Prince Della Rocca and by Fernand Han, the latter a Parisian journalist, to arrange an exhibit of religious art of all ages and also the project of Herr Fildermann to construct a miniature city under the protectorate of Hygeia, which is to be inhabited by people who are to live strictly according to hygienic rules in order to study public sanitation. Both projects are seriously conceived and deserving of consideration, which is acknowledged by the commission.

M. Moron, in a separate report, states that of 96 schemes examined by him 45 came from foreign countries, which shows the interest taken all over the world in the coming exposition. Of these schemes only two have been definitely adopted—one of an electric platform, with two degrees of velocity, for the transportation of visitors around the exposition grounds (which is probably similar to the moving sidewalk on the pier of the recent World's fair in Chicago) and another of a captive balloon of 60,000 cubic feet, which can keep 00 persons in an altitude of 2,000 feet, also an idea known from Chicago World's fair.

The commissioner divides the schemes examined by him into eight series, the first of which comprises aquariums, vessels, naval engineering, etc., including a giant aquarium with 180 compartments and a colossal structure containing a cataract, a lake, promenades, cafes, bicycle rings, etc. The building is to be lighted by electricity and is to have walls of red glass to produce the effect of a marvelous sunset. The author of this project, which alone would cover the space of the entire exposition grounds, is Herr Eichbaum, from St. Petersburg.—John Ehlers in Chicago Times-Herald.

Amusing Ignorance.

The written civil service examinations for policemen in New York have been spoken of as a part of a visionary scheme. The ignorance displayed by some of the unsuccessful applicants for appointment ought to have had free course to no official position, however, and to the public has now [illegible] been made. Extracts from what these applicants for police service wrote about Abraham Lincoln include some extraordinary statements. One wrote:

"He has been a Policeman of New York city." Another one claimed that in 1865 Lincoln was "inaugurated in place of Buchanan whose term of office expired in that year."

"Mr. Lincoln," according to another applicant, "had many engagements in war and was found to be victorious, especially at the battle of Gettysburg, when he swept all before him."

Of Lincoln's tragic death it was variously said that he was killed "at Chicago 1864," also that he "was assassinated in 1877 at Fords Theater Boston;" shot in "Ford's theater in Philadelphia," "died at his home in Long Branch." The assassin is spoken of as "Garfield," "Guiteau" and "Deeola."

One candidate said Lincoln "let the Darkey go free," another that he "freed all the negroes in the world." In general the applicants seem to have agreed, as one wrote, that "we have certainly had very few like unto Lincoln."—Youth's Companion.

"Old False Teeth Bought."

This is the sign which attracts the attention of visitors to the office of a certain dealer in dental and optical supplies who does business in Chicago.

"It's queer how people are attracted by that sign," said the owner of the establishment. "I never intended it to be prominent, because there are other lines in my business I am more interested in pushing, but it seems to fairly force itself into the minds of everybody who comes here, no matter what his mission may be, and 'old false teeth bought' is the only thing they can think or talk about.

"There's nothing audacious in dealing in secondhand false teeth, although I will admit the sign is an unusual one. It is a legitimate branch of our trade. With ordinary usage false teeth don't wear out and are just as good at the end of a few years as they were when new. The teeth themselves are valuable, and the gold work used in binding even the commonplace kind together is costly. People are forever getting new ideas about their teeth and keep the dentists busy changing or building over their artificial molars. Then, you remember that a whole lot of people who wear false teeth are dying every day.

"Ten years ago there was no way of utilizing this old material. It was all dead waste, so to speak. But now it is different, and people are more economical. False teeth, especially if heavily set with gold plates, are worth too much money to be cast aside when new ones are ordered or to be buried in a grave. Thus it comes that a trade of considerable proportions has sprung up in this line, and old false teeth are a staple in this market."

"Small dentists who are hard up financially and lack the inclination or facilities to clean up and build over the discarded sets, which they are sharp enough to retain from their patrons, are the main source of supply. Sometimes they make their patrons a little allowance for the old sets of teeth, but they get out of this whenever possible on the plea that they are worthless. Then we have poor folk who cannot afford to wear false teeth any longer come in here occasionally and offer them for sale. Undertakers? Well, that is a feature of the trade I don't care to talk about. I might be misunderstood, and some people are so squeamish, you know.

"Why, one woman came in here yesterday to buy an opera glass. She looked like a good customer and was inspecting some high priced glasses when I stopped to wait upon a man who frequently brings in some fine teeth. She saw me take a set from him and pay for them, and then, noticing probably his somber clothes and an end of black crape sticking out of one of his side pockets, she flounced away in a fury without a word of explanation. It is hard to please everybody, and as times are hard I have to be very careful."

"But what about your sales? Who takes these old grinders and incisors from you?"

"Principally a class of men who make a business of working over the sets. When the outfit is in reasonably good shape, it is given a thorough cleansing, brightened up, and then resold to dentists who have a cheap patronage. A little tinkering will make them fit after a fashion in the mouths of people who want to make a show of false teeth at small cost. Where the sets are not good enough to be used entire they are broken up, the gold either melted down or saved to be remodeled, and the teeth themselves remounted as they are needed for patients. It's a good thing for poor people, for many of them are thus enabled to get passably fair false teeth at a nominal price, when otherwise they would have to go without, owing to the great expense. Excuse me while I wait upon this man."

When The Inter Ocean man left the establishment, the merchant was dickering with an ample proportioned African "aunty" for a double set of teeth with heavy gold plates, which she said she had found in a hotel where she worked as chambermaid.

"Der genman' dou' go to 'ers pital," said aunty. "E's wuz so sick when dey tak' 'im way he don' car forgit 'is teet', an I doan' 'spec' he'll wan' 'em any more. Steal 'em? No, sah; no, sah! Boss, 'o say tak' ole frock 'way. I doan' want 'em 'round 'ere.' Ole truck—mumph, umph—why, dat's jes' like findin five dollahs."—Chicago Inter Ocean.

EXCITED BRITONS.

THEY ARE FORMING BIG KLONDIKE EXPEDITIONS

Views of a British Columbia Official—He Says the Dawson City Hardships Are Exaggerated—Situation on the Overland Route Will Probably Be Terrible.

"The eyes of all Europe are now centered on the Yukon," said Lieutenant Governor C. H. Mackintosh.

"South Africa has taken a back seat. Everybody of high and low degree, from duchesses to cab drivers, are talking about the Klondike, and they read every scrap of news that is published. I expect to see a great rush thither next spring from Europe.

"Lady Augusta Fane is one of those who have the fever, and she intends to make the trip to Klondike entirely through Canada. No doubt there will be others. I heard the other day of a banker who was thinking seriously of leaving a lucrative business to try his fortunes in the great goldfields."

The lieutenant governor of the northwest provinces of British Columbia while spending a month in England was besieged on all sides by capitalists and fortune hunters who were anxious to hear the details of the wonderful country.

A dinner was given in his honor, and when curiosity was expressed as to what a typical Klondiker was like the lieutenant governor brought out a six footer of fine proportions, who did not look the worse for hardship, but who in the presence of the distinguished personages blushed like a schoolboy. He was Frank Boucher, who made his pile and had returned to England on a visit.

"I think that the coming hardships at Dawson City have been greatly exaggerated, although it is probable that they will have a tough enough time of it and may be on very short rations. Compared with Dawson City, however, the situation along the overland route to the Yukon will probably be terrible, for, in spite of repeated warnings, many went in late, and they will not get much beyond the passes. Anticipating such an emergency, the Canadian government has already sent as many supplies as possible to Lake Tagish, and they will be forwarded in either direction as the demand requires. Police have been stationed along the way for prompt communication.

"I suppose that there will be between 5,000 and 8,000 people at Dawson City this winter. It will be very difficult, of course, to get any supplies up the Yukon to relieve the miners, but I understand the North American Trading and Transportation company and other trading concerns will do their best to get goods through, at whatever cost. Supplies have been accumulated at St. Michael's for this purpose. I realize the difficulty of carrying out such a programme, but if there should be a crisis there will be nothing else to do.

"Few people have any conception of the immense territory covered by these gold bearing streams. The Yukon is only one of many rivers. It is only 200 miles long, while the Lewes river, which is believed to be equally rich, is 500 or 600 miles long, and there are numerous unexplored streams which will be developed as rapidly as the facilities for reaching the country are furnished.

"The Canadian government, as well as English capitalists, is carefully considering the opening up of the country, and within a very short time some action will be taken. An English exploration company, with a very large capitalization, will be formed to conduct mining and possibly railroad operations. I cannot at present tell you who is back of it, but I presume that Lord Dufferin will be one of the chief men. He was formerly governor general of Canada and is well posted on the mining developments up to the present time. He is a very active man, and whatever he takes hold of is sure to be carried through.

"Now, in regard to the construction of a railroad, you may rest assured that there will be one within a very short time. The only delay now is due to the choice of a route. Three or four are under consideration. The most probable route is from Fort Wrangell, on the Pacific coast, to Stickeen river, a region which is open to the British as well as to the people of the United States under the Washington treaty.

"This river is navigable to Telegraph creek, the water being from four to five feet deep. Then there is a stretch of country 145 miles long to Lake Teslin, which presents no engineering difficulties and where a railroad can be constructed at moderate cost. That done, the water stretches emptying into the Yukon, which are all navigable, could be utilized as far as Dawson City and to other portions of the Canadian territory. This route to the Yukon is less than 1,000 miles long.—New York Herald.

He Knew Him.

Several travelers were waiting for a train on the veranda of a southwest Georgia hotel. It was a dismal, rainy day, and one of them remarked:

"This reminds me of one of Longfellow's poems, 'The Day Is Done.'"

At the mention of the name Longfellow a tall stranger leaned forward and said:

"Longfellow? Who air you know 'bout him?"

"Little," replied the first speaker, "except that he wrote books."

"An is he a-writin of books?" asked the tall man. "Why, the last time I heard of him he wuz runnin fer sheriff an makin of stump speeches."

"I fear you are mistaken in the man," said the first speaker, laughing.

"Not me," replied the tall man. "Don't I know him? Bill Longfellow—had a squint in one eye an a cut over the other. An jest ter think—the durn fool's took ter writin."—[illegible]

DUSKY NEW WOMEN.

Females of an Arab Tribe Who Go Unveiled While Their Men Cover Their Faces.

Many an Arab lady never leaves her house from the time she is married until she is carried out to be buried, says Pearson's Weekly. A woman of the middle class is allowed more liberty, and occasionally goes out for walks, accompanied as a rule by a servant. The poor creature is enveloped in masses of white drapery, which make her look like a walking bundle, and in front of her face she arranges a large black scarf embroidered with blue, red and white flowers. It falls low in front, and, even by holding up the ends, she cannot see more than a foot or two of the road before her. I often wonder that she does not get run over when she goes out alone, for I am sure she needs a dog to guide her quite as much as any blind man. Servants and other women of the lower classes wear pieces of black crepon wound tightly round their faces, leaving just a slit for their eyes to peep through, and they are equally muffled up in white draperies. Seen from a distance, they might be men with masks or thick black beards, as in Arab countries it is by no means easy to tell woman from woman at first sight. The older and uglier a woman is the more prudish she seems to be about covering up her face, which, after all, is rather considerate on her part. Even the greater number of negresses wear the yashmak, but the Bedouin women never do. Indeed, I am told that in the interior there is one Arab tribe whose men wear veils, and whose women go about with their faces uncovered. These are probably the "new women" of Africa.

A BOY HERO.

The Pittsburgh Youth Who Fought at Manila and Met Admiral Dewey.

One of the heroes of the battle of Manila is a 13-year-old boy, who is popularly called "Boots" by his comrades. "Boots" lately returned on the transport City of Para, and has had the distinction of having had a personal interview with Admiral Dewey, who gave him a free trip to Hong-Kong on the Olympia because of his services in the siege of Malate and the fight before Manila. He is the boy who came from Pittsburgh with the regiment. The men smuggled him aboard the transport, but he had hard luck, as he fell down the hatchway on the third day out and broke his arm. He was all right when Manila was reached, and in the trenches before Malate he carried water and ammunition and paid no attention to the bullets. As he said, "There was no chance to dodge 'em, they came so quick." He was among the first to enter Manila with a captured Spanish rifle, which he brings back with him. On August 15 he learned that the Olympia was to go to Hong-Kong, so he determined to make the trip. He boarded the ship and asked to be shown to the admiral's cabin. Dewey was sitting at a table with the captain of the ship.

"Boots" said: "I salutes and says: 'Admiral, I want to go to Hong-Kong,' and he says, pleasant like: 'Well, my boy, you come aboard and we'll take you.'"

He was 13 days on the Olympia. When he got back to Manila Col. Hawkins feared that he might catch the fever, so he sent the boy to New York on the transport.

FORMOSAN CITY ABANDONED.

Residents of Plague-Stricken Terkham Are Compelled to Leave It.

The Japanese government has ordered the destruction of the city of Teckham, Formosa, and the removal of all its inhabitants to a new location. The city is situated on the northwest coast of the island, and has been frequently subjected to pestilence. In 1896 and 1897 plagues visited Teckham with enormous fatality. This fact being called to the attention of the government, an investigation was ordered by sanitary experts, who reported that the city was built upon a swamp, whereupon an order was issued to the governor to select a new location as convenient to the old as possible, where the natural conditions were healthful. A new city was laid out, and each property holder in the old one was assigned a site that corresponded in area with the one he occupied at Teckham and was given 12 months to move his buildings and belongings. Sewers, railroads and sidewalks, public buildings, waterworks and all other public improvements were laid out by the government in the new city without expense to the people, but they were required to pay the cost of the removal of their own property. Most of the houses and other buildings in Teckham are built of very light wooden material.

First Weather Prophecy on Record.

The first attempt at scientific forecasting of the weather was the result of a storm which during the Crimean war, November 14, 1854, almost destroyed the fleets of France and England. A storm had raged several days earlier in France. Vaillant, the French minister of war, directed that investigations be made to see if the two storms were the same, and if the progress of the disturbances could have been foretold. It was demonstrated that the two were in reality one storm and that its path could have been ascertained and the fleet forewarned in ample time to reach safety.

Conjurer Brought to Book.

Mr. Maskelyne, the London conjurer, has been compelled by the courts to make good his offer of £500 to anyone who could imitate his box trick. He had made the offer with impunity for years, but when two young clerks took it up, refused to pay.

HAS TWO HEARTS.

Colored Man Generously Endowed by Nature Is a Puzzle to Medical Men.

Medical men of Plainfield, N. J., are deeply interested in the discovery of a man with two distinct and separate hearts and two breast bones, all of which he can move about at will.

The man who is thus generously endowed by nature is William King (colored), who claims to be 31 years old. His home is in New Bedford, Mass., and he has been visiting his cousin, Thomas Martin, the jail warden in New York city, for several days.

That he has two hearts Dr. M. B. Long, chief of the Muhlenberg hospital staff, says is undeniable. Dr. Long, together with several other prominent physicians, examined King and found the facts astonishing: that the man's statements were true. They found that King not only had two hearts, but that they were capable of displacement. Just to show that he had his hearts completely under control King moved them about.

Although the two hearts were thrown far apart on either side, they still beat in unison. Usually King keeps his hearts, one on the right and the other on the left side of his body. By a muscular movement he can suddenly move one heart to the lower part of his abdomen, while the other remains stationary.

When he had finished doing things with his two hearts King called attention to his breast bones. With a violent muscular movement he forced one breast bone lower and lower, until he had a complete wall of bone from his throat down.

ATTACKED BY A SAVAGE LION

Frank C. Bostock, Manager of a Zoo, Is Rescued from Death by a Woman.

Frank C. Bostock, manager of the Hagenbeck Zoo, which is wintering at Kansas City, Mo., was terribly bitten and lacerated by Brutus, the big lion which has already maimed several men. He was saved from being killed by the energetic action of Mme. Pianka, the lion tamer.

At the afternoon's rehearsal, just prior to the public performance, Mme. Pianka had trouble with Spitfire, a sulky lioness, and called Manager Bostock to her assistance. Bostock entered the cage cracking his whip and striking at Spitfire. As he did so Brutus, with a savage roar, sprang upon him, sinking his teeth to the bone in Bostock's thigh and lacerating the victim's back terribly with his claws.

Mme. Pianka fired several blank cartridges from her revolver full in Brutus' face and was about to fire the one ball cartridge when the beast loosened his hold. Mme. Pianka then threw her arms around the animal's neck and held him while Bostock was removed from the cage by attendants. Bostock, while dangerously hurt, will probably recover.

A GAY BEGINNING.

Lord Curzon of Kedleston, the new viceroy of India, and Lady Curzon start for India on December 16. They evidently intend to make a lavish beginning of their hospitality, as they have already ordered 10,000 ball programmes, 5,500 evening party cards, [illegible] garden party cards, 2,000 dinner party invitation cards, 5,500 "at home" cards and [illegible] menu cards.

It appears that before assuming the title, young Curzon called upon Baron Curzon, the title borne by Earl Howe, head of the Curzon-Howe family, and asked him if he objected to his so doing. The baron said he had no objection if Curzon undertook to be known as Baron Curzon of Kedleston and allowed the title to drop when he succeeds his father as Lord Scarsdale.

WEDDED ON A HIGHWAY.

Guests Asked to Wait While the Ceremony Takes Place in Another County.

William H. Webb and Miss Angeline Kensel were married upon the public highway near Farmer City, Ill., the principals sitting in a carriage, while W. C. McMurray, a justice of the peace, occupied a buggy near by. The bride's home is in Piatt county, and it was intended that the wedding should occur there. The groom, however, inadvertently procured the license in De Witt county, and, to be legal, the ceremony had to be performed in De Witt. The bride, groom and justice accordingly asked the assembled guests to excuse them for an hour, while they drove over the county line. As soon as the party reached the opposite county the horses were halted and the binding words uttered. The three then returned to the bride's home.

Pitiful Poverty in Russia.

Statistics just published show that in Russia only 347,2[illegible] families out of a population of about 130,000,000 souls have an income of over $500 a year, or that practically more than 80 per cent. of the whole population are constantly in a state of abject poverty and pauperism in their various degrees. The figures become appalling when one considers the case of the peasantry, which forms the overwhelming majority of the population. The average year's income of a peasant family consisting of six members ranges from $40 to $75 a year, out of which between $25 and $35 has to be paid to the government in direct taxes.

DRINKS IN OTHER DAYS.

The earliest mention of wine in the Bible is a reference to Noah planting a vineyard and getting drunk with the wine.

The Roman lover, when drinking to his lady, often drank as many cups of wine as there were letters in her name. Warm water was sometimes regarded by the Romans as an agreeable drink at the conclusion of the chief meal.

Famous among drinkers were the Vikings, whose liquors were ale, beer, wine and mead. Quaffing ale from the skulls of their enemies formed one of the chief attractions of the promised Valhalla.

The Egyptians, who have been ungallant enough to leave behind them delineations of the fair sex in a state of intoxication, had several kinds of wine more than 4,000 years ago, in addition to a beer called hega, made from barley.

A drink much in demand in the time of Chaucer was bracket, made of the wort of ale, honey and spices. By the time of Edward IV. drinking had become so productive of crime that few places were allowed more than two taverns. London had to be content with [illegible].

The drinks of antiquity were sometimes, to say the least, peculiar. The Greeks and Romans, whose customary drink was wine, often mixed it with sea water. Other ancient beverages were honey and rainwater, honey with water and vinegar, and a mixture of honey and myrtle seed.

Under the Stuarts drunkenness was at its height. Three bottles were largely taken, and a man's claim to [illegible] was largely due to his [illegible] capacity, while [illegible] of the court thought it no shame to become [illegible]. The three or five-bottle man was an object of envy to his fellows.

BOWS OF THE ANCIENTS.

The Greek bow was not more than [illegible] feet in length, but was so [illegible]

The [illegible]

While [illegible] the [illegible] of the bow varied with [illegible]. The Scythian bow was in form of the letter C and the bow of the Tartars, descendants of the Scythians, still keeps that shape.

It is said that the first Greek bows were made from the horns of a species of goat, the horns being united by means of a metallic band. Afterward other material was used in their manufacture, but they still retained their original shape. These bows were too short to be of much use, and, comparatively speaking, but a small portion of the troops were armed with them.

The [illegible] were [illegible] the finest in the world, and their skill decided the battles of Crecy, Poitiers and Agincourt. The bows used were of two kinds, the long bow and the arbalest or crossbow. The arbalest was made of steel or horn and was of such strength and stiffness that it was necessary to use some mechanical appliance to bend it and adjust the string. The arbalesters carried a quiver with 50 arrows and were placed in the van of the battle.

WHY?

Why isn't a telegraph line an outline?

Why aren't theatrical properties playthings?

Why isn't a lawyer's offer of marriage a legal tender?

Why do the hours slip by the man who is engaged in keeping them?

Why isn't it the darkest hour when we are unable to find the matches?

Why are the men who say women are delusions and snares always snared by delusions?—Chicago Daily News.

THE ENGLISH LIBRARIES.

In Canada the public libraries contain over 1,500,000 volumes.

There are 1,750,000 volumes in the library of the British museum and more than 30 miles of shelving.

In 1896 the United States, according to government statistics, possessed 4,026 public and school libraries, containing 33,051,872 volumes.

There are 341 public libraries in Australia, with 1,000,000 volumes, 298 with [illegible] volumes in New Zealand, 101 with [illegible] volumes in South Africa.

There are now about [illegible] public libraries in Great Britain, says Science. These libraries contain over 5,000,000 volumes and issue about 27,000,000 books each year. The annual attendance of readers is about 60,000,000.

THE ROAD.

Pray, whither leads the road, fair heart?
Say, whither leads the road,
Across a rill, around a hill,
Beside a dell where rivers start,
Where bending nut trees shed their load.
Oh, thither leads the road, dear heart,
Oh, thither leads the road!

What matter where the road may lead,
So thou and I together go,
Companionship is all our need,
Division all our woe.

The pine tree tall on yonder hill
For years has watched the passer-by.
When he is dust, we shall be still
Together, thou and I.

How hushed the afternoon! I dare
Not whisper love, but send the thought
In speechless message. All the air
In silence thrall is caught.

The wind dreams round their tall heads crisp!
The drowsy leaves that [illegible] aloft
Stir like a child in sleep.

Young autumn's fire begins to burn
The brands to hurl at winter's brow.
The sun wooed leaves sigh low and turn
To crimson on the bough.

Pray, whither leads the road, fair heart?
Say, whither leads the road?
Across a rill, around a hill,
Beside a dell where rivers start,
Where bending nut trees shed their load.
Oh, thither leads the road, my heart,
Oh, thither leads the road!
—John Albert Macy in Chap Book.

Messieurs Mesureur and Moron of the third subcommittee for the Paris World's exposition in 1900 have finished the herculean task of examining into the "new ideas" presented for realization at the coming event.

While it is true that most of the schemes spoken of in the newspapers are the very incarnation of idiocy, there are some which appear to deserve a less sweeping criticism than that exercised by the commission.

An amusing proposition of M. Benda is to fix a huge mirror to the top of the Eiffel tower which would present a mirage of the larger part of Paris. Another huge mirror is to be affixed to the base of the tower in such a position as to reflect the mirage of the top mirror. In this manner the visitors to the exposition would have the opportunity to witness Parisian life without the fatigue and expense of participating in it.

The Eiffel tower, by the way, has caused so many would be inventors to present fantastic schemes that to the latter the major part of the commission's report is devoted. M. Hunt proposes a six cornered building, 100 feet in diameter and 200 feet high, on the top of which sleigh races are to be held upon artificial snow. M. Banks has the idea of a gigantic candelabra whose three feet are to serve as promenades. M. Buffa advises the erection of two fountains, one representing a man and the other a woman at 200 times the average size, which would make this proposed inland pharos about 1,100 feet high. A patriot, M. Conchol, would have the Eiffel tower remodeled into a statue of France, the first two stories to serve as pedestal. M. Mazelaygue proposes a house 1,000 feet in height in order to ascertain scientifically to what height houses may be habitable without danger.

A pyramid of 1,200 feet height revolving around its center is the ideal of John Richardson. As philosopher and philanthropist Gustave Songeux proposes two colossal statues, "War" and "Peace," "whose contrast would cause all nations to declare in favor of peace."

For the sake of gallantry the proposition of Miss Josefa Humse may be mentioned to revive the old wooden horse of the memory of the siege of Troy and to build a horse, with "all the points of a blooded animal," which would have an interior capable of holding 1,000 people.

More prosaic and practical is the scheme of Mlle. Ralfo to construct a mechanical elephant for the children and a tea fountain for the adults. The idea of swings flying 400 feet high, submitted by M. Gauss and Mr. Farnshaw, is old. More original is a project of Axel Shoot to construct a screw 600 feet high, along the threads of which a car would conduct visitors to a restaurant at the top.

Worthy of mention is the proposition by Prince Della Rocca and by Fernand Han, the latter a Parisian journalist, to arrange an exhibit of religious art of all ages and also the project of Herr Fildermann to construct a miniature city under the protectorate of Hygeia, which is to be inhabited by people who are to live strictly according to hygienic rules in order to study public sanitation. Both projects are seriously conceived and deserving of consideration, which is acknowledged by the commission.

M. Moron, in a separate report, states that of 96 schemes examined by him 45 came from foreign countries, which shows the interest taken all over the world in the coming exposition. Of these schemes only two have been definitely adopted—one of an electric platform, with two degrees of velocity, for the transportation of visitors within the exposition grounds (which is probably similar to the moving sidewalk on the pier of the recent World's fair in Chicago) and another of a captive balloon of 60,000 cubic feet, which can keep 60 persons in an altitude of 2,000 feet, also an idea known from Chicago World's fair.

The commissioner divides the schemes examined by him into eight series, the first of which comprises aquariums, vessels, naval engineering, etc., including a giant aquarium with 180 compartments and a colossal structure containing a cataract, a lake, promenades, cafes, bicycle rings, etc. The building is to be lighted by electricity and is to have walls of red glass to produce the effect of a marvelous sunset. The author of this project, which alone would cover the space of the entire exposition grounds, is Herr Eichbaum, from St. Petersburg.—John Ehlert in Chicago Times-Herald.

Amusing Ignorancy.

The written civil service examinations for policemen in New York have been sneered at as a part of a visionary scheme. The ignorance displayed by some of the unsuccessful applicants for appointment might have had fair comment in an official position, however, and to the public [illegible] than [illegible] test [illegible]. Extracts from what these applicants for police service wrote about Abraham Lincoln include some extraordinary statements. One wrote:

"He was once President of New York city." Another stated that in 1865 Lincoln was "committed in place of Buchanan who's term of office expired in that year."

"Mr. Lincoln," according to another applicant, "had many engagements in war and was found to be victorious, especially at the battle of Gettysburg, when he swept all before him."

Of Lincoln's tragic death it was variously said that he was killed "at Chicago 1861," also that he "was assisinated in 1877 at Fords Theater Boston," "shot in "Booth's theater in Philadelphia;" "died at his home in Long Branch." The assassin is spoken of as "Garfield," "Guteau" and "Dreota."

One candidate said Lincoln "let the Donkey go fred;" another that he "fred all the nigers in the world." In general the applicants seem to have agreed, as one wrote, that "we have sertinly had very few like unto Lincoln."—Youth's Companion.

"Old False Teeth Bought."

This is the sign which attracts the attention of visitors to the office of a certain dealer in dental and optical supplies who does business in Chicago.

"It's queer how people are attracted by that sign," said the owner of the establishment. "I never intended it to be prominent, because there are other lines in my business I am more interested in pushing, but it seems to fairly force itself into the minds of everybody who comes here, no matter what his mission may be, and 'old false teeth bought' is the only thing they can think of or talk about.

"There's nothing audacious in dealing in secondhand false teeth, although I will admit the sign is an unusual one. It is a legitimate branch of our trade. With ordinary usage false teeth don't wear out and are just as good at the end of a few years as they were when new. The teeth themselves are valuable, and the gold work used in binding even the commonplace kind together is costly. People are forever getting new ideas about their teeth and keep the dentists busy changing or building over their artificial molars. Then, you remember that a whole lot of people who wear false teeth are dying every day.

"Ten years ago there was no way of utilizing this old material. It was all dead waste, so to speak. But now it is different, and people are more economical. False teeth, especially if heavily set with gold plates, are worth too much money to be cast aside when new ones are ordered or to be buried in a grave. Thus it comes that a trade of considerable proportions has sprung up in this line, and old false teeth are a staple in this market."

"Small dentists who are hard up financially and lack the inclination or facilities to clean up and build over the discarded sets, which they are sharp enough to retain from their patrons, are the main source of supply. Sometimes they make their patrons a little allowance for the old sets of teeth, but they get out of this whenever possible on the plea that they are worthless. Then we have poor folk who cannot afford to wear false teeth any longer come in here occasionally and offer them for sale. Undertakers? Well, that is a feature of the trade I don't care to talk about. I might be misunderstood, and some people are so squeamish, you know.

"Why, one woman came in here yesterday to buy an opera glass. She looked like a good customer and was inspecting some high priced glasses when I stopped to wait upon a man who frequently brings in some fine teeth. She saw me take a set from him and pay for them, and then, noticing probably his somber clothes and an end of black crape sticking out of one of his side pockets, she flounced away in a fury without a word of explanation. It is hard to please everybody, and as times are hard I have to be very careful."

"But what about your sales? Who takes these old grinders and incisors from you?"

"Principally a class of men who make a business of working over the sets. When the outfit is in reasonably good shape, it is given a thorough cleansing, brightened up, and then resold to dentists who have a cheap patronage. A little tinkering will make them fit after a fashion in the months of people who want to make a show of false teeth at small cost. Where the sets are not good enough to be used entire they are broken up, the gold either melted down or saved to be remodeled, and the teeth themselves remounted as they are needed for patients. It's a good thing for poor people, for many of them are thus enabled to get passably fair false teeth at a nominal price, when otherwise they would have to go without, owing to the great expense. Excuse me while I wait upon this woman."

When The Inter Ocean man left the establishment, the merchant was dickering with an ample proportioned African "aunty" for a double set of teeth with heavy gold plates, which she said she had found in a hotel where she worked as chambermaid.

"Der genman' dou' go to 'at 'orspital," said aunty. "E's wuz so sick when dey tak' 'im way he don' olar forgot 'is teet', an I doan' 'spec' he'll want 'em any more. Steal 'em? No, sah! no, sah! Boss, 'e say 'tak' ole truck 'way. I doan' want 'em 'round 'ere.' Ole truck—umph, umph—why, dat's jes' like findin five dollahs."—Chicago Inter Ocean.

EXCITED BRITONS.

THEY ARE FORMING BIG KLONDIKE EXPEDITIONS.

Views of a British Columbia Official—He Says the Dawson City Hardships Are Exaggerated—Situation on the Overland Route Will Probably Be Terrible.

"The eyes of all Europe are now centered on the Yukon," said Lieutenant Governor C. H. Mackintosh.

"South Africa has taken a back seat. Everybody of high and low degree, from duchesses to cab drivers, are talking about the Klondike, and they read every scrap of news that is published. I expect to see a great rush this winter next spring from Europe.

"Lady Augusta Fane is one of those who have the fever, and she intends to make the trip to Klondike entirely through Canada. No doubt there will be others. I heard the other day of a banker who was thinking seriously of leaving a lucrative business to try his fortunes in the great goldfields."

The lieutenant governor of the northwest provinces of British Columbia while spending a month in England was besieged on all sides by capitalists and fortune hunters who were anxious to hear the details of the wonderful country.

A dinner was given in his honor, and when curiosity was expressed as to what a typical Klondiker was like the lieutenant governor brought out a six footer of fine proportions, who did not look the worse for hardship, but who in the presence of the distinguished personages blushed like a schoolboy. He was Frank Boucher, who made his pile and had returned to England on a visit.

"I think that the coming hardships at Dawson City have been greatly exaggerated, although it is probable that they will have a tough enough time of it and may be on very short rations. Compared with Dawson City, however, the situation along the overland route to the Yukon will probably be terrible, for, in spite of repeated warnings, many went in late, and they will not get much beyond the passes. Anticipating such an emergency, the Canadian government has already sent as many supplies as possible to Lake Tagish, and they will be forwarded in either direction as the demand requires. Police have been stationed along the way for prompt communication.

"I suppose that there will be between 5,000 and 6,000 people at Dawson City this winter. It will be very difficult, of course, to get any supplies up the Yukon to relieve the miners, but I understand the North American Trading and Transportation company and other trading concerns will do their best to get goods through, at whatever cost. Supplies have been accumulated at St. Michael's for this purpose. I realize the difficulty of carrying out such a programme, but if there should be a crisis there will be nothing else to do.

"Few people have any conception of the immense territory covered by these gold bearing streams. The Yukon is only one of many rivers. It is only 200 miles long, while the Lewes river, which is believed to be equally rich, is 500 or 600 miles long, and there are numerous unexplored streams which will be developed as rapidly as the facilities for reaching the country are furnished.

"The Canadian government, as well as English capitalists, is carefully considering the opening up of the country, and within a very short time some action will be taken. An English exploration company, with a very large capitalization, will be formed to conduct mining and possibly railroad operations. I cannot at present tell you who is back of it, but I presume that Lord Dufferin will be one of the chief men. He was formerly governor general of Canada and is well posted on the mining developments up to the present time. He is a very active man, and whatever he takes hold of is sure to be carried through.

"Now, in regard to the construction of a railroad, you may rest assured that there will be one within a very short time. The only delay now is due to the choice of a route. Three or four are under consideration. The most probable route is from Fort Wrangell, on the Pacific coast, to Stickeen river, a region which is open to the British as well as to the people of the United States under the Washington treaty.

"This river is navigable to Telegraph creek, the water being from four to five feet deep. Then there is a stretch of country 145 miles long to Lake Teslin, which presents no engineering difficulties and where a railroad can be constructed at moderate cost. That done, the water stretches emptying into the Yukon, which are all navigable, could be utilized as far as Dawson City and to other portions of the Canadian territory. This route to the Yukon is less than 1,000 miles long.—New York Herald.

He Knew Him.

Several travelers were waiting for a train on the veranda of a southwest Georgia hotel. It was a dismal, rainy day, and one of them remarked:

"This reminds me of one of Longfellow's poems, 'The Day Is Done.'"

At the mention of the name Longfellow a tall stranger leaned forward and said:

"Longfellow? What do you know 'bout him?"

"Little," replied the first speaker, "except that he wrote books."

"An is he a-writin of books?" asked the tall man. "Why, the last time I heard of him he wuz runnin fer sheriff an makin of stump speeches."

"I fear you are mistaken in the man," said the first speaker, laughing.

"Not me," replied the tall man. "Don't I know him? Bill Longfellow—had a squint in one eye an a cut over the other. An jest for think—the durn fool's took ter writin."

DUSKY NEW WOMEN.

Females of an Arab Tribe Who Go Unveiled While Their Men Cover Their Faces.

Many an Arab lady never leaves her house from the time she is married until she is carried out to be buried," says Pearson's Weekly. A woman of the middle class is allowed more liberty, and occasionally goes out for walks, accompanied as a rule by a servant. The poor creature is enveloped in masses of white drapery, which make her look like a walking bundle, and in front of her face she arranges a large black scarf embroidered with blue, red and white flowers. It falls low in front, and, even by holding up the ends, she cannot see more than a foot or two of the road before her. I often wonder that she does not get run over when she goes out alone, for I am sure she needs a dog to guide her quite as much as any blind man. Servants and other women of the lower classes wear pieces of black crepon wound tightly round their faces, leaving just a slit for their eyes to peep through, and they are equally muffled up in white draperies. Seen from a distance, they might be men with masks or thick black beards, as in Arab countries it is by no means easy to tell a man from a woman at first sight. The older and uglier a woman is the more prudish she seems to be about covering up her face, which, after all, is rather considerate on her part. Even the greater number of negresses wear the yashmak, but the Bedouin women never do. Indeed, I am told that in the interior there is one Arab tribe whose men wear veils, and whose women go about with their faces uncovered. These are probably the "new women" of Africa.

A BOY HERO.

One of the heroes of the battle of Manila is a 14-year-old boy, who is popularly called "Boots" by his comrades. "Boots" lately returned on the transport City of Para, and has had the distinction of having had a personal interview with Admiral Dewey, who gave him a free trip to Hong-Kong on the Olympia because of his services in the siege of Malate and the fight before Manila. He is the boy who came from Pittsburgh with the regiment. The men smuggled him aboard the transport, but he had hard luck, as he fell down the hatchway on the third day out and broke his arm. He was all right when Manila was reached, and in the trenches before Malate he carried water and ammunition and paid no attention to the bullets. As he said, "There was no chance to dodge 'em, they came so quick." He was among the first to enter Manila with a captured Spanish rifle, which he brings back with him. On August 17 he learned that the Olympia was to go to Hong-Kong, so he determined to make the trip. He boarded the ship and asked to be shown to the admiral's cabin. Dewey was sitting at a table with the captain of the ship.

"Boots" said: "I salutes and says: 'Admiral, I want to go to Hong-Kong,' and he says, pleasant like: 'Well, my boy, you come aboard and we'll take you.'"

He was 13 days on the Olympia. When he got back to Manila Col. Hawkins feared that he might catch the fever, so he sent the boy to New York on the transport.

FORMOSAN CITY ABANDONED.

Residents of Plague-Stricken Teckham Are Compelled to Leave It.

The Japanese government has ordered the destruction of the city of Teckham, Formosa, and the removal of all its inhabitants to a new location. The city is situated on the northwest coast of the island, and has been frequently subjected to pestilence. In 1896 and 1897 plagues visited Teckham with enormous fatality. This fact being called to the attention of the government, an investigation was ordered by sanitary experts, who reported that the city was built upon a swamp, whereupon an order was issued to the governor to select a new location as convenient to the old as possible, where the natural conditions were healthful. A new city was laid out, and each property holder in the old one was assigned a site that corresponded in area with the one he occupied at Teckham and was given 12 months to move his buildings and belongings. Sewers, railroads and sidewalks, public buildings, waterworks and all other public improvements were laid out by the government in the new city without expense to the people, but they were required to pay the cost of the removal of their own property. Most of the houses and other buildings in Teckham are built of very light wooden material.

First Weather Prophecy on Record.

The first attempt at scientific forecasting of the weather was the result of a storm which during the Crimean war, November 14, 1854, almost destroyed the fleets of France and England. As a storm had raged several days earlier in France, Vaillant, the French minister of war, directed that investigations be made to see if the two storms were the same, and if the progress of the disturbances could have been foretold. It was demonstrated that the two were in reality one storm and that its path could have been ascertained and the fleet forewarned in ample time to reach safety.

Conjurer Brought to Book.

Mr. Maskelyne, the London conjurer, has been compelled by the courts to again pay his offer of £500 to anyone who could imitate his box trick. He had made the offer with impunity for years, but when two young clerks took it up, refused to pay.

HAS TWO HEARTS.

Colored Man Generously Endowed by Nature Is a Puzzle to Medical Men.

Medical men of Plainfield, N. J., are deeply interested in the discovery of a man with two distinct and separate hearts and two breast bones, all of which he can move about at will.

The man who is thus generously endowed by nature is William King (colored), who claims to be 103 years old. His home is in New Bedford, Mass., and he has been visiting his cousin, Thomas Martin, the jail warden in New York city, for several days.

That he has two hearts Dr. M. B. Long, chief of the Muhlenburg hospital staff, says is undeniable. Dr. Long, together with several other prominent physicians, examined King and found to their astonishment that the man's statements were true. They found that King not only had two hearts, but that they were capable of displacement. Just to show that he had his hearts completely under control King moved them about.

Although the two hearts were thrown far apart on either side, they still beat in unison. Usually King keeps his hearts, one on the right and the other on the left side of his body. By a muscular movement he can suddenly move one heart to the lower part of his abdomen, while the other remains stationary.

When he had finished doing this with his two hearts King called attention to his breast bones. With a violent muscular movement he forced one breast bone lower and lower, until he had a complete wall of bone from his throat down.

ATTACKED BY A SAVAGE LION

Frank C. Bostock, manager of the Hagenbeck zoo, which is wintering at Kansas City, Mo., was terribly bitten and lacerated by Brutus, the big lion which has already maimed several men. He was saved from being killed by the courageous action of Mme. Pianka, the lion tamer.

At the afternoon's rehearsal, just prior to the public performance, Mme. Pianka had trouble with Spitzer, a sulky lioness, and called Manager Bostock to her assistance. Bostock entered the cage cracking his whip and striking at Spitzer. As he did so Brutus, with a savage roar, sprang upon him, sinking his teeth to the bone in Bostock's thigh and lacerating the victim's back terribly with his claw.

Mme. Pianka fired several blank cartridges from her revolver full in Brutus' face and was about to fire the one ball cartridge when the beast loosened his hold. Mme. Pianka then [illegible] and held him while Bostock was removed from the cage by attendants. Bostock, while dangerously hurt, will probably recover.

A GAY BEGINNING.

Lord and Lady Curzon Arranging for Balls, and Evening and Dinner Parties in India.

Lord Curzon of Kedleston, the new viceroy of India, and Lady Curzon start for India on December 16. They evidently intend to make a lavish beginning of their hospitality, as they have already ordered [illegible] ball programmes, [illegible] evening party cards, [illegible] garden party cards, 2,000 dinner party invitation cards, 5,500 "at home" cards and [illegible] menu cards.

It appears that before assuming the title, young Curzon called upon Baron Curzon, the title borne by Earl Howe, head of the Curzon-Howe family, and asked him if he objected to his so doing. The baron said he had no objection if Curzon undertook to be known as Baron Curzon of Kedleston and allowed the title to drop when he succeeds his father as Lord Scarsdale.

WEDDED ON A HIGHWAY.

Guests Asked to Wait While the Ceremony Takes Place in Another County.

William H. Webb and Miss Angeline Kessel were married upon the public highway near Farmer City, Ill., the principals sitting in a carriage, while W. C. McMurray, a justice of the peace, occupied a buggy near by. The bride's home is in Piatt county, and it was intended that the wedding should occur there. The groom, however, inadvertently procured the license in De Witt county, and, to be legal, the ceremony had to be performed in De Witt. The bride, groom and justice accordingly asked the assembled guests to excuse them for an hour, while they drove over the county line. As soon as the party reached the opposite county the horses were halted and the binding words uttered. The three then returned to the bride's home.

Pitiful Poverty in Russia.

Statistics just published show that in Russia only 347,248 families out of a population of about 130,000,000 souls have an income of over $500 a year, or that practically more than 90 per cent of the whole population are constantly in a state of abject poverty and pauperism in their various degrees. The figures become appalling when one considers the case of the peasantry, which forms the overwhelming majority of the population. The average yearly income of a peasant family consisting of five members ranges from $20 to $35 a year, out of which between $25 and $35 has to go to the government in direct taxes.

DRINKS IN OTHER DAYS.

The earliest mention of wine in the Bible is a reference to Noah planting a vineyard and getting drunk with the wine.

The Roman lover, when drinking to his lady, often drank as many cups of wine as there were letters in her name. Warm water was sometimes regarded by the Romans as an agreeable drink at the conclusion of the chief meal.

Famous among drinkers were the Vikings, whose liquors were ale, beer, wine and mead. Quaffing ale from the skulls of their enemies formed one of the chief attractions of the promised Valhalla.

The Egyptians, who have been ungallant enough to leave behind them delineations of the fair sex in a state of intoxication, had several kinds of wine more than 4,000 years ago, in addition to a beer called hqa, made from barley.

A drink much in demand in the time of Chaucer was bracket, made of the wort of ale, honey and spices. By the time of Edward IV. drinking had become so productive of crime that few places were allowed more than two taverns. London had to be content with 40.

The drinks of antiquity were sometimes, to say the least, peculiar. The Greeks and Romans, whose customary drink was wine, often mixed it with sea water. Other ancient beverages were honey and rain water, honey, salt water and vinegar, and a mixture of honey and myrtle seed.

Under the Stuarts drunkenness was at its height. Hard drinkers were largely taken, and a man's claim to recognition was largely due to his bottle capacity, while ladies of the court thought it no shame to become inebriated. The three or five-bottle man was an object of envy to his fellows.

BOWS OF THE ANCIENTS.

The Greek bow was not more than three or four feet in length, but was so stout and stiff that it required considerable strength to draw and use it.

The Romans carried the bow to Britain, where it at once obtained favor, and during the next [illegible] years was extensively used, being an important element of the armies of that period.

While universally used by the ancients the form of the bow varied with different nations. The Scythian bow was in form of the letter C, and the bow of the Tartars, descendants of the Scythians, still keeps that shape.

It is said that the first Greek bows were made from the horns of a species of goat, the horns being united by means of a metallic band. Afterward other material was used in their manufacture, but they still retained their original shape. These bows were too short to be of much use, and comparatively speaking, but a small portion of the troops were armed with them.

The English archers were famous as the finest in the world, and their skill decided the battles of Crecy, Poitiers and Agincourt. The bows used were of two kinds, the long bow and the arbalest or cross-bow. The arbalest was made of steel or iron, and was of such strength and stiffness that it was necessary to use some mechanical appliance to bend it and adjust the string. The arbalesters carried a quiver with 50 arrows and were placed in the van of the battle.

WHY?

Why isn't a telegraph line an outline?

Why aren't theatrical properties playthings?

Why isn't a lawyer's offer of marriage a legal tender?

Why do the hours slip by the man who is engaged in keeping them?

Why isn't it the darkest hour when we are unable to find the matches?

Why are the men who say women are delusions and snares always snared by delusions?—Chicago Daily News.

THE ENGLISH LIBRARIES.

State of Minnesota, County of Red Lake —ss.

I, Adam Zeh, County Auditor, in and for said County of Red Lake, in the State of Minnesota, do solemnly swear that the above and foregoing list of real estate taxes and penalties for the year 1897, delinquent and unpaid on the first Monday in January, 1899, in said county and state, consisting of pages numbered from 1 to 182 both inclusive, is true and correct to the best of my knowledge and belief.

(Signed.) —Adam Zeh.
Auditor of Red Lake County.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 20th day of January, 1899.

—Joseph Perrault.
(Seal)

Filed in my office this 20th day of January, 1899.

—Joseph Perrault.

HARD TO EXPLAIN

If This Had Occurred Anywhere Else Than Grand Forks, There Might be Grave Doubts About It.

If this were published anywhere else than in Grand Forks, that is, if the statement given out below went the rounds of the press, readers in Buffalo or New Orleans would not believe it. In the very nature of things men and women will not believe that a simple pill will do so much for suffering humanity when the subject is in a serious condition. When it has that effect, when the party is a living witness, perhaps a neighbor at least, Grand Forks people cannot deny it—particularly so when investigation is courted. Now ask Mr. Benjamin G. Davis of 216 S. Third street, in the employ of the Grand Forks Foundry, and see if the following is not his experience with and opinion of Doan's Kidney Pills. He says:

"Fo ra long time my whole renal system was weak, particularly the kidneys. I wrenched my back taking off a shoe in the spring of 1898, had to quit work was laid up like a lame man, could not get out of bed in the usual way, and naturally longed for something to bring me relief. Just about this time I chanced to read notices about Doan's Kidney Pills, and although I could hardly walk I managed to get down to Trepanier & Co.'s drug store and procured a box. It was a great, yet welcome surprise to me, the quickness with which they put me back on my feet. Fuller particulars I will be pleased to give anyone interested. In the meantime I advise all my friends and acquaintances in Grand Forks if they suffer from over excited or inactive kidneys to procure Doan's Kidney Pills, take a thorough course of the treatment and the results will follow."

Doan's Kidney Pills, for sale by all dealers, price 50 cents. Mailed by Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y. Sole agents for the United States. Remember the name Doan's and take no other.

The ATLANTIC MONTHLY

No American agency of public information and intellectual guidance has done higher service in this most momentous period of national transition and opening of a new world epoch than THE ATLANTIC MONTHLY. In its point of view and treatment of events of the first national importance, it has stepped into the vacant place of a political review of clear insight, high purpose, wide knowledge, and bold conviction. It is doing for America some part of the work the serious political reviews always have done for Britain, and which it is the often baffled aim of the "Deux Mondes" to do for France. The time has now come for wide public attention to the illuminating discussion of which it is the medium.—From the New York Commercial Advertiser, Nov. 29, 1898.

The announcements for 1899 are of a variety, interest, and value greater than ever before. Upon receipt of ten cents a sample copy of THE ATLANTIC MONTHLY will be sent, together with an illustrated prospectus for the coming year.

Subscriptions received direct or through any established subscription agency.

Democratic Reform Press Bureau.
St. Paul, Feb. 20, 1899.

It has been one of the biggest weeks in matters of state politics that can be recalled by the traditional "oldest inhabitant." The presence of Bryan, for the national interest, the editorial gatherings for those of the state, and withal the event of the first veto of Governor Lind, marking one of the leading issues for which he and his supporters stand, that of "economy and equality before the law," mark a period long to be remembered.

Governor Lind's first exercise of the veto power, applied to the beet sugar bounty bill, was received with enthusiastic approval by editors and prominent citizens still at the state capital from the weeks' gatherings, many of whom personally went to the capitol to tender their congratulations. The response from the people will undoubtedly be equally appreciative, since the protest he entered against the action of the Republican house, was but the act of the people themselves through him. The veto, applying the principle of "equal rights to all, special privileges to none," will prove a regular old fashioned Dewey gun of the biggest calibre.

Governor Lind, clearly stating that the state must pay for the bounty already earned, yet insists that in doing so it should be made clear to what extent this bonus privilege is to be applied, if the law is to stand as it is. The Republican house as promptly passed the bill over the veto, so that it goes to the senate, where a two-thirds vote will be required to defeat the veto.

As was predicted, there never has before been so good opportunity for meeting our great leader, W. J. Bryan, as was afforded this time. All the arrangements were simply perfect. The state committees of Peoples and Democratic parties were in session, and the Silver Republicans were also present to the number of 50 or more. Mr. Bryan was able to attend the Democratic state central committee meeting, as well as the meeting of the reform press, to each of which bodies he gave talks of an hour or more, touching on the issues and mapping out the work to be done. He emphasized to our editors the importance of the part assigned to them, as interpreting the sentiments of the people themselves, from whom all inspiration comes. He expressed himself much as did National Chairman Jones some time since regarding the value of our press as a medium for reaching the masses of the people.

To the state central committee Mr. Bryan gave great encouragement in his review of the national situation. We have made, he pointed out, great progress since the campaign of 1896. He has no doubt of a united party, and of the uniting of all our forces in reaffirmation of the Chicago platform. He specially emphasized the value of the different allies, and said that while we had suffered some losses in 1898 in the elections, we had not suffered as much as might have been expected in the all absorbing issues of the war. It greatly pleased Mr. Bryan to find the allied forces harmonious, and steadfast for the restoration of silver and other planks of the Chicago platform. The issues which have been added by the war will, he is sanguine, make up an irresistible campaign which will be on now in a little more than a twelve month.

Within the year Mr. Bryan has changed but little, notwithstanding the strain to which he has been subjected, from continued addresses and lectures early in the year, from six months of camp life in the South with his command, and in the campaigning following, from the moment that his retirement from the service gave him leave to speak of the new issues. Maturer, he may seem to some, a trifle more grave perhaps, but there is more fire and spirit, if possible, under the noble promptings of his nature aroused by the outrages being perpetrated in the nation's name against human liberty. When he reaches his climaxes on that topic, it is the fire and spirit of that great day in Chicago, when he declared against the crown of thorns for labor's brow, and that mankind should not be crucified upon the cross of gold.

With intervening addresses between the Twin Cities and Washington, up to the 22nd inst., on Washington's birthday, at Washington he delivers an entirely new speech, the keynote of which may be imagined from his references to the tombs at Mount Vernon and Monticello, as places whereon to lay the blame for that spirit in the far distant islands of the sea which refuses the conquering yoke of America as it resisted the oppression and wrong of Spain.

What a burning shame is that miserable lie, spread wherever Bryan is to appear, that he only does so for hire. There was but one Republican paper, so far as we know, to print it, on the recent occasion, and that said that Mr. Bryan refused to come to St. Paul until the Ramsey county Democrats raised him $500. Humiliating as it was, at Minneapolis a commercial traveler who had heard the lie in so many places, nerved himself to learn the truth from Mr. Bryan's own lips, which he did in the presence of Mr. Winston, Mr. Ankeny, and Senator Brown, of Steele county. Mr. Bryan thanked the gentleman for his question and assurances that he himself knew it was false, and drew from his pocket a memorandum book in which cast up the amount he had paid out for railroad travel alone, which was $187 since the date of Jan. 12, all of which had not been refunded, not one cent. He had never received a dollar for political addresses in his life. Of course those who attribute sordid motives to Bryan are of the same cloth as those who called Lincoln a baboon, but the offense is still greater. Let this $500 a speech lie be nailed once and for all.

A very pertinent feature of the political functions of the week was the unmistakable sentiment toward that "prince" among us, Hon. Charles A. Towne. At any of the meetings all references to Towne, as to Governor Lind, were received with marked applause. Disappointed at the mishap (the storm) preventing his fulfilling the West hotel engagement, references to him there brought out tremendous applause, the same as greeted the sentiment he wired from Washington, which was as follows:

"The snow blockade unfortunately keeps me from your board. The party in power daily adds proof of the subserviency to force threatening the perpetuity of the republic. The tyranny of the money power and the despotism of the trusts are to be supplemented and perpetuated by military absolutism, made plausible by a colonial establishment. The Democratic parties and its allies remain true to the high principles of 1896, to the sublime greatness of the Declaration of Independence and to the steadfast faith of their fathers, all of which will be gloriously vindicated by the American people in 1900."

The Reform Press Association is a fixed fact, and it will occupy a Twin City office at the courtesy of the Merchant's Hotel in St. Paul. Among the papers participating are Appleton Press, Delano Gazette, McIntosh Times, St. Peter Journal, Montivideo Leader, Wheelock's Leader, Fergus Falls, Adrian Democrat, Hinckley Enterprise, Walnut Grove Rural Center, Sauk Rapids Free Press, Tracy Herald, Fertile Journal, Benson Monitor, Twin City Guardian, Carleton Gazette, Moose Lake Star, Brainerd Arena, Austin Times, Moorhead News, Sauk Center Avalanche, Norwood Times, Preston Republican, Waseca Herald, Litchfield Independent, Minneapolis Democrat, Kilkenny Times, Owatonna People's Press, Ada Herald, Fairmont Sentinel, Wheaton Footprints, Little Falls Herald, Albert Lea Standard, Long Prairie Leader, Minneapolis Irish Standard, "Microcosm," Hutchison Leader, Sleepy Eye Herald, Winona Herald and St. Cloud Times.

C. W. Stanton of the Appleton Press presided at the opening of the meeting, with H. I. Peterson of the Litchfield Independent, secretary, and the committee reporting the fundamental declaration adopted being Mr. Peterson, ex-Senator Hoard of the Montevideo Leader, and F. E. Barnum of the Sauk Center Avalanche. The officers elected for the ensuing year are:

President, George N. Lamphere, Moorhead News.

Vice president, D. C. Anderson, Carleton Vidette.

Treasurer, C. W. Stanton, Appleton Press.

Secretary, George S. Canfield, Democratic Reform Press Bureau.

Executive committee, George N. Lamphere, George S. Canfield, C. W. Stanton, F. E. Barnum and H. E. Hoard.

In response to numerous inquiries, and some comment by the state press, showing misapprehension as to the situation regarding the management of the Stillwater prison, the bureau would say:

No reference was made to the statements appearing, for the reason that the stories afloat as to what Governor Lind would do, had said, "promised," etc., were too ridiculous for notice. The governor personally stated all that had occurred in the matter, in substance that he had had no opportunity for knowing the situation, and no disposition to interfere with any one while satisfactorily discharging his duty; that there was any "promise" to Warden Wolfer, or others, was too silly to be denied, which applied as well to the retention of Warden Wolfer, as to increase of his salary.

Now the facts are these. The prison management and the selection of warden, is under the board of managers, the term of warden being "at will," or subject to removal at any time by the board and not by the governor. On the accession of Governor Lind the board was Republican, as follows: Frank Temple, Republican, Blue Earth City; B. F. Nelson, Democrat, Minneapolis; J. S. O'Brien, Democrat, Stillwater; M. O. Hall, Republican, Duluth; Edwin Dunn, Republican, Eyota; three Republicans and two Democrats. This was the situation when Warden Wolfer and Manager O'Brien "bore down" on the governor with that tempting "offer" from Connecticut. What was there for the governor to say, except that he had as yet no knowledge of the situation whatever. Then came the appointment of Mr. Weiss of Duluth in the place of Hall, term expiring, making the board Democratic nominally, with Mr. O'Brien the uncertain quantity. The removal of Mr. O'Brien for cause, and thus making the board stand reliably three Reform, to two Republicans, is where the matter now stands. For the first time is the situation such that there is opportunity to learn the manner in which the state's business is being conducted, and has been for all these years. If any one doubts that Governor Lind will make use of the opportunity, they do not know the man.

It has been a hard week of administration in the capitol, as may be believed from the fact that Governor Lind has been one of the principal speakers at each of the reform political functions, in addition to his daily cares and labors, which have been carried on as usual. It is a marvel how public men stand the strain to which they are subjected. To them all the nights are days, and even repose is labor.

The most important appointment of the week is that of insurance commissioner, J. A. O'Shaunessy, of Stillwater, vice Elmer E. Dearth. It is understood that the assistant commissioner will be Hon. Z. H. Austin, of Duluth. Mr. O'Shaunessy is considered peculiarly fitted for the position, and his appointment is made in the belief that it will keep the department up to the high standard that it has been under Republican Commissioner Dearth. Mr. Austin is editor of "Microcosm," and in his appointment the populists are further recognized, especially those of the Sixth district.

Few new bills for general legislation appeared last week. Among such are:

Prohibiting sale of "renovated" butter.

Vesting title to live game in the state.

Regulating safe deposit companies.

Bounties for arrest of horse thieves.

Increase of state aid to high schools from $400 to $1,000.

Taxation of fast freight lines.

Appropriating $30,000 for Itasca park.

State commission on claims.

Taxation of general corporations.

County option temperance bill.

Actions for libel, commenced within two years, reducing from six.

Monument to victims of Hinckley fire.

Non-partisan commission to inspect state institutions.

For stone road improvements, stone crushed by prison labor.

Another assistant to the attorney general.

Establishing the office of state temperance commissioner.

The marked courtesy and attention given Mr. Bryan by the legislature was one of the features of his presence in the Twin Cities. If only the doctrines he expounds did not fall upon such stony ground, in the majority!

Was ever so hard a one asked, as by an inquiry to the Jacobson committee investigating grain and binder twine administration, how it is that the great mills from Minneapolis and Duluth and Buffalo are turning out flour from No. 1 Hard when they buy comparatively none of that grade of the farmer!

Proofs of under grading and excessive dockage continue to pile up, although comparatively few of the farmers appear to have confidence enough in the sincerity of the "investigation" to come forward. On the latter score W. C. Nash, of East Grand Forks wrote the committee:

"You may obtain positive proof of this outrageous steal and it will not amount to a hill of beans. Next year the ring will have something new, or dress up an old steal of past years, and we will be robbed just the same as long as this wheat ring owns and controls our state officials."

The pig iron bonus bill is finding a rocky road to travel. It will shudder at the fate of beet sugar bonus.

The sign, "Divorces made easy," will not hang out in Minnesota.

The marked decrease in petitions for local option and other temperance propositions is a feature of this session.

There is considerable pressure for abolishment of the office of state fire warden, but likewise much objection, especially from the northern part of the state.

The foundations are being laid for large street railway extensions in and about Stillwater.

There is more and more talk of legislative as well as municipal reductions in street railway fares.

Captain Henry A. Castle has resigned from the Soldiers Home board, and when Governor Lind fills his place, as expected, by Hon. John Day Smith of Minneapolis, the board will be in shape to proceed to reorganization of the home management which is one of the fixed purposes of the administration.

The Minneapolis Tribune set afloat the statement that the Reform Press Association turned down, were afraid of, W. J. Bryan. The truth is that the Minneapolis Tribune had no representative at the association's meeting and either guessed at, or deliberatively misrepresents what occurred there.

Of the same character is the statement of the Slayton Gazette, that E. S. Corser, surveyor general, Minneapolis, was a member of the Guaranty Loan concern, along with Eustis.

IT WAS TOO OLD.

Labels on Cans Removed by Soaking Show Original Dates of 1888.

Bucyrus, Ohio, Special. — Adjutant Schaber, of the Eighth Ohio volunteer regiment, who, during the Spanish war, handled large quantities of the canned beef provided for the soldiers, says that all the cans bore labels with the figures 1898 printed on them. By soaking the cans these labels could be pulled off, showing an original wrapper with the date 1888 or some other equally ancient period marked on them.

AMERICANISM.

Rome Special. — The Observatore Romano publishes the text of a letter from Archbishop Ireland to the pope regarding the pontiff's letter to Cardinal Gibbons on "Americanism." The archbishop thanks the pope for this proof of his esteem and love for American Catholics.

Orleans Given a Hint.

London Special. — The Brussels correspondent of the Post says the Belgian government has requested the duke of Orleans to curtail his stay in Brussels in order to prevent misunderstandings. He will return to Turin.

THE LEGISLATURE

Business Transacted by Minnesota Solons.

St. Paul, Feb. 21. — Several bills of general interest were introduced in the senate yesterday. One of them provides for the election of aldermen in all cities of the state on a general ticket instead of by wards as at present.

Other bills introduced were:

To amend the laws relating to records of foreign courts. — Relating to marital liability for debt. — Giving city council the right to change grade of streets. — Relating to trials in district courts. — To prevent docking of horses' tails. — Amending laws relating to safe deposit and trust companies. — Amending mortgage foreclosure laws. — To provide for the condemnation of private rights of way by street railway companies.

The senate spent some time in committee of the whole and a number of bills were acted upon.

The House.

The house made up for the omission of its morning session by working until 6:30 in the evening, and making considerable headway with its general orders. The last hour and a half was a regular field day for the farmers, the time being devoted to the bill regulating the sale of the state prison binding twine. It was amended in four spots, none of the amendments being of vital importance, and recommended to pass.

Several other bills of minor importance were acted upon in committee of the whole.

The following bills were introduced: To amend the laws relating to the formation of mutual hail insurance companies. To encourage a better condition of the schools, and repealing certain laws in relation thereto. — Proposing an amendment to article 15 of the constitution limiting the sale of personal property in certain cases. — To amend the law relating to powers of boards of education. — To repeal section 20, subchapter 7, chapter 74, General Laws 1877, relating to the appointment of school examiners for independent school districts. — To regulate the sale of cut flowers and plants by state institutions.

St. Paul, Feb. 22. — The senate yesterday joined with the house and passed the beet sugar bounty appropriation bill over Gov. Lind's veto by a vote of 46 to 16. Three Democrats voted with the Republicans, namely, Johnson of Nicollet, Baldwin of Duluth and McNamee of Ramsey, the Duluth delegation voting as a unit in opposition to the governor. The only absent member was Senator Reeves of Pope, who was sick. Contrary to expectation there was no preliminary debate.

The following bills were introduced: To regulate primary elections, providing for direct primary elections. — To regulate and provide for the cutting of weeds and grass on public highways or streets in cities of less than 50,000 inhabitants; passed under suspension of the rules.

The House.

The following bills were passed: Allowing grain upon which there is a lien for threshing to be sold upon giving bond. — Amending the law governing the Childrens' Home society. — Providing that upon forfeited tax sale the amount received after the state tax is paid shall be prorated among the funds for which the original tax was levied. — Amending the statutes relative to admissions to practice law. — Providing for uniform teachers' certificates. — Putting village lock-ups under the supervision of the state board of corrections and charities. — Regulating the sale of binding twine manufactured at the state prison. — Fixing the time for holding general terms of the district court for the First judicial district in Goodhue county.

The following bills were introduced: To regulate bicycle riding. — To authorize city councils to fix the territory within which liquor may be sold. — To prevent the mutilation of horses. — For the protection of the public health in the slaughter of cattle, sheep and swine. — To appropriate $4,500 for an artesian well for the state training school and other purposes. — Providing for condemnation of right of way by street railway companies in certain cases. — To appropriate $23,000 for the state training school for each of the years 1900 and 1901. — To appropriate $5,000 for hospital and for other purposes at the state training school.

St. Paul, Feb. 24. — The senate put itself on record yesterday as being in favor of giving the McGowan eight-hour bill a fair shake, at least, by supporting the report of a majority of the committee on labor, which had transmitted the bill to the senate. After some debate the bill was placed on general orders.

The following bills were passed: To fix the salaries of judges of probate court in counties of not less than 28,000. — Establishing a board of equalization in cities having a population of less than 4,000, makes the board of aldermen the board of equalization. — To provide for a poll tax on dogs and constituting a fund for the liquidation of damages caused by the same and providing for a penalty for violation thereof. — To amend section 18, chapter 145, General Laws 1885, etc., and providing for the election of assessors in incorporated villages. — To encourage a better condition of village schools, and appropriating $50 for each school.

The following bills were introduced: To confer jurisdiction of district court in certain land cases in adjoining counties. — To legalize electric light and water works bonds voted on in cities of 10,000 or less, and issued under chapter 204, Laws of 1893. — To provide for the state inspection and condemnation of live stock to be killed for food. — To encourage the manufacture of sugar in the state. — To encourage the growing of sugar beets in the state. — To amend the statutes of 1894 relating to exemption from taxation. — To prevent boycotting, blacklisting any lawful business, or employment. — To amend the laws so that all public roads must be at least four rods wide. — To prevent the abandonment of side and spur tracks, stations, etc., without notifying the railroad and warehouse commission. — To authorize common councils to reduce and rebate assessments for local improvements in certain cases.

The House.

Interest in the house proceedings yesterday centered largely about the new bills which were introduced. The most important bill is a substitute for Mr. Pugh's bill which designs to pay the members of the national guard who assembled at Camp Ramsey last April and May, and were subsequently enlisted as volunteers, for the time that elapsed between assembly and muster, at the per diem provided by the state military code.

The following bills were passed: To amend the law regulating the practice of pharmacy. — To amend the law governing the soldiers' home so as to allow the admission of volunteer soldiers of the Spanish war. — To allow the consolidation of election districts in certain cases where the number of voters in two adjoining districts has decreased below 400.

The following bills were introduced: To authorize mutual insurance companies to organize stock companies. — To appropriate $1,000 for maintaining and improving the grounds owned by the state at Camp Release, Lac qui Parle county. — Conferring jurisdiction upon district courts in two counties in actions affecting title to land. — Relating to stopping passenger trains at county seats. — Providing for suits against the State of Minnesota in actions affecting the title of real estate. — Providing for refunding the amount which shall be paid by purchasers of property sold pursuant to chapter 290, General Laws of 1897, and by assignees of the interest of the state acquired by sale pursuant to said law with 7 per cent interest in certain cases. — To authorize the common council or other governing body of municipalities to reduce and rebate assessments for local improvements in counties where the provisions of chapter 290, General Laws 1897, have been made applicable. — To amend the laws relating to assessments and local improvements.

St. Paul, Feb. 25. — Senator Miller won a signal victory yesterday by securing the passage of his bill to give more force and effect to the findings of the state railroad and warehouse commission. The bill provides that in an appeal to the district court from findings of the commission or on an application of the commission to the courts to enforce its orders the appeal or application must be based on the record made before the commission. This is intended to give force and finality to the findings of the commission and to prevent the retrial of cases in the district court.

The following bills were introduced: Amending the law relating to exemption from garnishment. — Extending the time of right of appeal in district court. — Relating to the protection and propagation of game and fish. — To appropriate $2,000 to preserve the site of Fort Ridgely and the state monument thereon. — To provide for the free education of college students who went to war with the United States against Spain. — To amend the laws relating to practice in municipal courts. — To amend the laws relating to the insurance of bicycles against theft.

The House.

The members of the G. A. R. present in the city in attendance on the department encampment stormed the capitol in force yesterday morning and the legislature surrendered without a show of fight. The privilege of the floor of the house was extended to the veterans upon a resolution offered by Mr. Winston, himself an ex-Confederate soldier. At 11:30 the invading host appeared at the bar of the house. The members arose and received them with applause. Commander Mortimer and Senior Vice Commander Searles were escorted to the speaker's rostrum by Sergeant-at-Arms Fanning. The members of the house gave up their seats to the visitors, and then listened to a number of speakers, all of whom urged the restoration of the annual appropriation of $20,000 for the support of the soldiers' home, which was repealed two years ago.

The following bills were passed: To authorize the governor to designate a day to be known as arbor and bird day. — Providing that a mortgage drawing less than the legal rate of interest shall draw the same rate after foreclosure as before. — Providing for the changing of the boundary line of counties in certain cases. — Making the current tax upon timber and mineral lands a lien upon the timber and mineral. — Amending the election law so as to provide for but one day of registration in townships and villages of less than 2,000 population. — To prevent persons from jumping on or off moving street cars. — Authorizing officers, directors and stockholders of corporations to administer oaths and take acknowledgments of instruments wherein the corporation is interested. — To require the marking of process or renovated butter. — Requiring the printed matter of insurance companies to contain the words "Assessment Plan" or "Nonassessment plan" as the case may be.

The following bills were introduced: To provide for the erection of a building for the wives of ex-soldiers at the soldiers' home and appropriating $15,000. — To appropriate $10,000 for a site and monument to the memory of persons massacred by Sioux Indians in the town of Belmont, Jackson county. — To provide for the aid of non-resident paupers. — To amend the law relating to sugar bounty. — To create a system of district poorhouses. — Relating to plats for additions to cities and villages. — To amend section 1900, Statutes of 1894, relating to county physicians.

Killed by a Logging Train.

Mora, Minn., Feb. 28. — Frank Gose, a brakeman working on O'Neil Bros.' logging railroad, was run over by a car and horribly mangled. He died a few hours afterward. He was unmarried and resided in Stillwater.

A $100,000 Fire.

Monroe, La., Feb. 28. — The Planters' cotton seed oil mill was almost entirely destroyed by fire, together with the seed house, stock, etc. The loss is estimated at $100,000. Insurance is unknown.

NO CHANCE FOR ORLEANS.

French Royalists Give up All Hopes of Success.

Brussels, Feb. 28. — The duc d'Orleans, who came to Brussels six days ago to watch events in Paris, last evening took a train to Turin, confessing that he had no chance against the republic. In an interview he asserted that M. Deroulede had not acted on the royalist account, but, on the contrary, had blundered terribly and destroyed the royalist chances. During the whole of the duke's stay in Brussels, where he led a quiet, uneventful life, he was watched and followed step by step by French detectives, some in disguise, some riding bicycles and some on foot. One succeeded in passing himself off as a Parisian monarchial journalist, and interviewed the duke, who confided his hopes to him.

DUC D'ORLEANS.

Prince Victor Napoleon is considered here a much more serious pretender, because less impatient, more dignified and absolutely silent. He also is watched by French detectives. They learned that he often drives an automobile, and sometimes ventures a few miles into French territory. So they got an automobile from Paris to follow him in case of need. One notable feature of the stay of the duc d'Orleans is that although he went to the royal palace of the court of Flanders, he was neither received by the king nor the king's brother. He only received the visit of the duke of Vendome, and it is believed that the king directly advised him through the latter to prolong his stay in Belgium as little as possible.

ROYALISTS CAUGHT AT IT.

A Raid on Headquarters Produces Important Documents.

Paris, Feb. 28. — In consequence of the placarding throughout the city of the speeches of the Duke of Orleans, the royalist pretender, recently delivered in San Remo, and seizure of medals and scarf pins bearing the pretender's portrait, the chief of police was ordered by the government to make strict investigation into the recent proceedings of the Monarchist party. Last evening the prefect communicated the result of his inquiries to M. Dupuy, premier and minister of the interior, with the result that the minister decided upon vigorous action. Quantities of propagandist literature and medals of the duke, a list of members of the royalist committee and voluminous correspondence were seized at the headquarters of the royalist committee in the Faubourg St. Honore and at the residence of Comte Sanbrun de Pettives. The commissionaire who visited M. De Monicourt surprised him just as he had returned from Brussels with letters from Orleans addressed to royalist personages and instructions from the pretender to his supporters. All these were seized.

THE CZAR ILL.

His Condition Excites the Greatest Solicitude.

London, Feb. 28. — The Copenhagen correspondent of the Daily Mail says: Well informed persons here assure me that the health of Emperor Nicholas is far from good and his condition causes the greatest solicitude. His malady appeared shortly after the issuance of the proposition for a disarmament, and now has assumed a serious turn. This malady is of such a character as to forbid all intellectual exertion. His participation in the government is merely formal, confined to signing documents of whose contents he is ignorant. The Grand Duke Michael possesses the executive power and all government decisions are arrived at without the czar's co-operation or knowledge.

London, Feb. 28. — The Daily Chronicle's correspondent at Stockholm says that it is rumored there that Emperor Nicholas is ill and that the Grand Duke Michael is presiding over the government.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral

From the first dose the quiet and rest begin: the tickling in the throat ceases; the spasm weakens; the cough disappears. Do not wait for pneumonia and consumption but cut short your cold without delay.

Dr. Ayer's Cherry Pectoral Plaster should be over the lungs of every person troubled with a cough.

Write to the Doctor.

Unusual opportunities and long experience eminently qualify us for giving you medical advice. Write freely all the particulars in your case. Tell us what your experience has been with our Cherry Pectoral. You will receive a prompt reply, without cost.
Address, DR. J. C. AYER, Lowell, Mass.

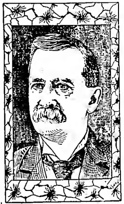
A CONGRESSMAN

Cured of Catarrh of Long Standing.



Ex-Congressman A. T. Goodwyn.

Ex-Congressman A. T. Goodwyn, from Alabama, writes the following letter:

The Pe-ru-na Drug Manufacturing Company, Columbus, Ohio:

Gentlemen—I have now used two bottles of Pe-ru-na, and am a well man today. I could feel the good effects of your medicine before I had used it a week, after suffering with catarrh for over a year. Respectfully,

A. T. Goodwyn.

Catarrh in its various forms is rapidly becoming a national curse. An undoubted remedy has been discovered by Dr. Hartman. This remedy has been thoroughly tested during the past forty years. Prominent men have come to know of its virtues and are making public utterances on the subject. To save the country we must save the people. To save the people we must protect them from disease. The disease that is at once the most prevalent and stubborn of all others is catarrh. Public men of all parties recognize in Pe-ru-na a national catarrh remedy of unequaled merit. Send to Dr. Hartman, Columbus, Ohio, for a free book on catarrh.

How Japanese Woo.

Japan is a long way off, and this charming story of how courtships are carried on among the elite of their society comes to us from this faraway land. In certain districts, in houses wherein resides a daughter of marriageable age, an empty flowerpot is encircled by a string and suspended from a window or the veranda. Instead of serenades by moonlight and other delicate ways of making an impression, it is etiquette for the Japanese lover to approach the dwelling of his sweetheart bearing some choice plant in his hand, which he reverently proceeds to plant in the empty vase. This takes place when he is fully aware that mother and daughter are at home.

This act of placing a plant in the flowerpot is equivalent to a formal proposal to the lady of his choice. The lover, having settled the plant to his mind, retires, and the lady is free to act as she pleases. If he is the right man, she takes every care of his gift, waters it and tends it carefully with her own hands, that all may see that the donor is accepted as a suitor. But if he is not the favorite, or if the stern parents object, the poor plant is torn from the vase and the next morning lies limp and withered on the veranda or in the path below.

Mellowing Superstitions.

Mr. Elbert Hubbard, speaking of Meissonier in The Philistine, says that the temperament of the painters' mother "was poetic, religious and her spirit had in it a touch of superstition—which is the case with all really excellent women."

Mr. Hubbard is right. A child cannot be handicapped more severely than by a mathematically precise, "clear headed," well informed, unimaginative mother. There are wretched households in which fairy stories are tabooed as "absurd," in which the "Arabian Nights" is pooh poohed, in which primers of science are forced upon little hands in which there is no Santa Claus, no stork, no werewolf, no goblin.

A superstitious mother sees signs and omens for her children. To find her throwing spilled salt over her shoulder or looking anxiously for the favoring position of the new moon is a more agreeable sight than to discover her in the act of teaching indisputable facts. We entertain a profound pity for men who sneer at old wives' fables. The testimony, the deepest feeling of the centuries, is against the scoffers and with them we do not care to clink glasses or do business.—Boston Journal.

Horseshoes.

In Japan most of the horses are shod with straw. Even the clumsiest of cart horses wear straw shoes, which, in their cases, are tied around the ankle with straw rope and are made of the ordinary rice straw, braided so as to form a sole for the foot about half an inch thick. These soles cost about a halfpenny a pair. In Iceland horses are shod with sheep's horn. In discussing this subject a writer in The Horseshoer's Journal says: In the valley of the Upper Oxus the antlers of the mountain deer are used for the same purpose, the shoes being fastened with horn pins. In the Sudan the horses are shod with socks made of camel's skin. In Australia horseshoes are made of cowhide. A German not long ago invented a horseshoe of paper, prepared by saturating with oil, turpentine and other ingredients. Thin layers of such paper are glued to the hoof till the requisite thickness is attained, and the shoes thus made are durable and impenetrable by moisture.

Landor's Retort at School.

One day in full school Master Landor had an apple of singular size and beauty. He had his Livy in one hand and this apple in the other and read and read and munched and munched till the sound struck the doctor. He espied the delinquent and ordered him to bring that apple to him. He put it on his desk, corsm populo, and then, half relenting, said: "There, sir. Now, if you want that again you had better go and sit down and make me a short line on the occasion." "Oh, I can do that and stand here," says Master Landor. "Do it then." The boy thought a moment, and soon obliged him with a pentameter, "Esuriens doctor dulcis pome rapit."

"Hum!" says Dr. James. "And pray, sir, what do you mean by a-so-riens doctor?" "The gormandizing doctor." "Take it, sir. You are too hard for me, you are too hard for me," said the doctor, delighted with his pupil.—"Rouse's History of Rugby School."

Chinese Back Scratcher.

No Chinese home is without a back scratcher, while many there be in otherwise happy American households who do not know its joys. Therefore are they compelled to hitch around on chairs to dislodge the itch.

The oriental does better. He shoves down his back an instrument which has a carved bone or ivory hand with sharp claws. This is mounted on a flexible handle of cane or bone, and with a few pushes the annoyance ceases.—Hongkong Correspondence.

For Bed and Board.

It is said that when John Jacob Astor was once congratulated for his wealth he replied by pointing to the bonds and maps of property, at the same time inquiring, "Would you like to manage these matters for your bed and board?" The man demurred.

"Sir," continued the rich man, "it is all that I can get."

Pretty Girls, These!

"The Huntzdale (Penn.) Journal says: "The ☞ of the Huntzdale girls are slender and delicately tinted, their ‡ ‡ ‡ are like , and they are without — in this or any other §. Their frowns are like †††, and their 123450 excite ||| of pleasure and a desire to m—— them. Read this ¶ closely, and do not ? its veracity."

Gun Cotton.

We had come into the storeroom of torpedoes at the Brooklyn navy yard, and the talk turned to high explosives.

"We have to keep a sharp watch on the gun cotton," said one of the gunners who were with me, "to see that it does not get dry and does not get too acid. There is never a day goes by on a battleship but careful inspection is made of the stores of gun cotton. Dip in a piece of litmus paper and see if it comes out blue. If it does, all is well but beware if it comes out red. That means acid, and acid means danger."

"What do you do when it comes out red?" I asked.

"Neutralize the acid. You see, gun cotton deteriorates a lot in an acid solution."

"Do you always keep the gun cotton wet?"

"Always. That's one of the first principles. When it's wet, it's safe; when it's dry, it isn't. Let it have all the water it will soak up, which is about 30 per cent."

"Suppose you were to touch off some gun cotton here on the ground, what would happen?"

"Nothing at all if it wasn't confined. You might burn a ton of it like cordwood in a bonfire. But pack it in a tin box, even a flimsy one, and you'll have fun. And, of course, the stronger the box the more fun you'll have."—Boston Globe.

Underground Paris.

The Paris of the pavement, gay, bright and exhilarating, is fairly familiar to us all, but underground Paris, dark, solitary and damp, extending for miles, is comparatively unknown. A part of this area is devoted to the catacombs—a valley of dry bones, a garden of the dead; the rest a garden still more vast, provides for the wants, or rather the luxuries, of the living—it is devoted to mushroom culture. These subterranean gardens extend for some 20 miles under the gay capital and are from 20 feet to 160 feet beneath the surface.

It is very difficult to obtain permission to visit them, and even when permission is obtained it requires some courage to avail oneself of it, for the only entrance is a circular opening like the mouth of a well, out of which a long pole stands. Through this pole, fastened at the top only, at fairly long intervals, sticks are thrust. This primitive ladder, the base of which swings like a pendulum in the impenetrable darkness below, is the only means of reaching the caves. "Here," again cried our guide, with a burst of cheerfulness, "see this door! On the other side are the catacombs—as full of bones as this place is of mushrooms." We smiled. We were not afraid of bones with an iron door between them and us.—Strand Magazine.

When Rosette Died.

Horace Walpole is a great lover of dogs too. Patapan, Tonton and Rosette (the last the legacy of Mme du Deffand) are certainly the most spoiled of the species, and run all over Strawberry after their master, to the detriment, one would have thought, of the prim gardens and the verth.

When Rosette dies presently, Horace sends the most touching epitaph on a dog ever written, perhaps, to my Lord Nuneham. "It has no merit," he says, "for it is an imitation, but it comes from the heart if ever epitaph did, and therefore your dogmanity will not dislike it."

Sweetest roses of the year
Strew around my Rose's bier.
Calmly may the dust repose
Of my faithful, pretty Rose.

The opening lines at least have the oddest unlikeness to the popular conception of Horace Walpole, if they have some affinity with the man who is the friend and playfellow of little children and can't find it in his heart to turn off an old servant or to give up an old ally.—Longman's Magazine.

How to Dissect a Mosquito.

A needle held in the left hand is passed through the thorax, the legs and wings are pulled off, and, if necessary, the scales of the body brushed off with a camel's hair brush. The tail is then lowered into a drop of water, salt solution or weak formalin placed on a glass slide, and with another needle held in the right hand the last two segments of the tail are partially separated and held down upon the slide. The left hand is then moved in such a manner as to draw away the insect.—Major Ross, I. M. S., in Indian Medical Gazette.

The use of coats of arms as a badge for different families did not come into practice till the twelfth century. The Germans are said to have originated it, while the French developed the science.

The Army and Navy.

Have covered themselves with glory during the war. The Army and Navy vest pocket memorandum book published by the Northern Pacific is a compact digest of information relative to the navies and armies of Spain and the United States at the beginning of the war. It has a map of Cuba, illustrations of naval ships, glossary of navy and army terms, translation of Spanish words, etc. Send ten cents to Chas. S. Fee, general passenger agent, N. P. R., St. Paul, Minn., for a copy.

Bloodhounds.

The gentleness of bloodhound disposition is probably accounted for by their not having been used to hunt and kill prey. One of the most ancient anecdotes of these dogs attributes the capture of a fugitive to the use of his own bloodhound. The name itself is probably a modern one, based on a vulgar error that the dogs only followed persons who were "red handed" from homicide or who had about them the smell of recently killed sheep. The ancient name was lyme dog or talbot, which latter appears to have been a white variety of bloodhound.

The Cuban bloodhounds, which were used for hunting slaves by the Spaniards and were imported into Jamaica, were not bloodhounds at all, but a cross between the mastiff and bulldog, or perhaps the "dogue" of Bordeaux. They were brindled, prick eared, and doubtless horribly savage. They were, however, used as "police," and, like the bloodhounds on the border, were maintained in every parish in Jamaica, where it was the duty of the churchwardens to keep them at the expense of the community.

Some of these dogs were kept in London during the early days of the zoological gardens. The stories of their ferocity are probably not exaggerated, though Lord Balcarres, who imported 200 of them into Jamaica to aid in subduing the maroons, never used them. He frightened the negroes into submission by circulating the stories current about the dogs.—London Spectator.

Took His Wife's Advice.

When the man whose haircut showed that his wife had peculiar notions as to the way a man should dress his hair quit giving advice, one of the listeners said:

"No man has more respect for a woman than I have, but I shall never take the advice of my wife again about money matters. She insisted upon my hiding my salary, so if I should be held up the highwaymen wouldn't get it. I draw my stipend at 6 p. m., and it is quite dark before I get home. She is a good hider in the house, but her talent in that line stops there. Now, she had the brilliant idea that I should put the envelope containing my money under the sweatband of my hat. Highwaymen would never look there and would never rob a man of his hat. After she had made this suggestion about 40 times I accepted it. I went home as usual on the elevated. I had a slight attack of vertigo in the car, and the man who always knows what to do said I needed fresh air and threw up the window. In doing so he knocked off my hat. I went home bareheaded and broke."—New York Sun.

The Brave Bull, the Cruel Spaniard.

The trumpet sounds again, and the espada takes his sword and his muleta and goes out for the last scene. This, which ought to be, is not always the real climax. The bull is often by this time tired, has had enough of the sport, leaps at the barrier, trying to get out. He is tired of running after red rags, and he brushes them aside contemptuously. He can scarcely be got to show animation enough to be decently killed. But one bull that I saw was splendidly savage and fought almost to the last, running about the arena with the sword between his shoulders, and that great red line broadening down each side of his neck on the black, like a deep layer of red paint, one tricks oneself into thinking.

He carried two swords in his neck and still fought. When at last he, too, got weary he went and knelt down before the door by which he had entered and would fight no more. But they went up to him from outside the barrier and drew the swords out of him, and he got to his feet again and stood to be killed.—Saturday Review.

She Let Him Off.

One night Green came home very late and found his wife evidently prepared to administer a Caudle lecture. Instead of going to bed, he took a seat, and, resting his elbows on his knees, seemed absorbed in grief, sighing heavily and uttering such exclamations as "Poor Watkins! Poor fellow!"

Mrs. Green, moved by curiosity, said sharply, "What's the matter with Watkins?"

"Ah," said Green, "his wife is giving him fits just now."

Mrs. Green let her husband off that time.—Liverpool Mercury.

Her Tongue.

They were talking of figures of speech.

"Have you ever noticed," said one, "how fond people are of vegetable metaphors when they are dealing with a woman? Her cheeks are 'roses,' her lips are 'cherry,' her hands are always 'lily' hands, her mouth is a 'rosebud,' her complexion is 'like a peach,' and her breath is 'fragrant as honeysuckle.'"

"You've forgotten one," said the cynic.

"What's that?"

"Her tongue. It is a scarlet runner."

A Considerate Lover.

Parent—Of course, as my daughter is of age, she can suit herself as to marrying you, but the day she does I will cut her off without a penny.

Suitor (after a pause)—Well, under those circumstances, sir, we will break our engagement. I could not think of depriving a young lady of her inheritance.—Harlem Life.

Love at First Sight.

"Do you believe in love at first sight?" she asked.

"Of course," answered the savage bachelor. "Do you suppose, if a man had the gift of second sight, he would fall in love?"—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Merely a Guess.

"Why do they call it the matrimonial yoke, I wonder?"

"Because there is generally a calf at one end of it, I guess."—Cleveland Leader.

State of Minnesota, County of Red Lake—ss.

I, Adam Zeh, County Auditor, in and for said County of Red Lake, in the State of Minnesota, do solemnly swear that the above and foregoing list of real estate taxes and penalties for the year 1897, delinquent and unpaid on the first Monday in January, 1899, in said county and state, consisting of pages numbered from 1 to 182 both inclusive, is true and correct to the best of my knowledge and belief.

(Signed.) —Adam Zeh,
Auditor of Red Lake County.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 20th day of January, 1899.

—Joseph Perrault,
Clerk of the District Court of Red Lake
(Seal) County, Minn.

Filed in my office this 20th day of January, 1899.

—Joseph Perrault,
Clerk of the District Court of Red Lake County, Minn.

HARD TO EXPLAIN

It This Had Occurred Anywhere Else Than Grand Forks, There Might be Grave Doubts About It.

If this were published anywhere else than in Grand Forks, that is, if the statement given out below went the rounds of the press, readers in Buffalo or New Orleans would not believe it. In the very nature of things men and women will not believe that a simple pill will do so much for suffering humanity when the subject is in a serious condition. When it has that effect, when the party is a living witness, perhaps a neighbor at least, Grand Forks people cannot deny it—particularly so when investigation is courted. Now ask Mr. Benjamin G. Davis of 216 S. Third street, in the employ of the Grand Forks Foundry, and see if the following is not his experience with and opinion of Doan's Kidney Pills. He says:

"Fo ra long time my whole renal system was weak, particularly the kidneys. I wrenched my back taking off a shoe in the spring of 1898, had to quit work was laid up like a lame man, could not get out of bed in the usual way, and naturally longed for something to bring me relief. Just about this time I chanced to read notices about Doan's Kidney Pills, and although I could hardly walk I managed to get down to Trepanier & Co.'s drug store and procured a box. It was a great, yet welcome surprise to me, the quickness with which they put me back on my feet. Fuller particulars I will be pleased to give anyone interested. In the meantime I advise all my friends and acquaintances in Grand Forks if they suffer from over excited or inactive kidneys to procure Doan's Kidney Pills, take a thorough course of the treatment and the results will follow."

The ATLANTIC MONTHLY

NO American agency of public information and intellectual guidance has done higher service in this most momentous period of national transition and opening of a new world epoch than THE ATLANTIC MONTHLY. In its point of view and treatment of events of the first national importance, it has stepped into the vacant place of a political review of clear insight, high purpose, wide knowledge, and bold conviction. It is doing for America some part of the work the serious political reviews always have done for Britain, and which it is the often baffled aim of the "Deux Mondes" to do for France. The time has now come for wide public attention to the illuminating discussion of which it is the medium.—From the New York Commercial Advertiser, Nov. 29, 1898.

The announcements for 1899 are of a variety, interest, and value greater than ever before. Upon receipt of ten cents a sample copy of THE ATLANTIC MONTHLY will be sent, together with an illustrated prospectus for the coming year.

THE ROAD.

Pray, whither leads the road, fair heart?
Say, whither leads the road?
Across a rill, around a hill,
Beside a dell where rivers start,
Where bending nut trees shed their load.
Oh, thither leads the road, dear heart,
Oh, thither leads the road!

What matter where the road may lead,
So thou and I together go.
Companionship is all our need,
Division all our woe.

The pine tree tall on yonder hill
For years has watched the passerby.
When he is dust, we shall be still
Together, thou and I.

How hushed the afternoon! I dare
Not whisper love, but send the thought
In speechless message. All the air
In silence thrall is caught.

The wind dreams round their tall heads
creept
The drowsy leaves that rose aloft
Stir like a child in sleep.

Young autumn's fire begins to burn
The brands to hurl at winter's brow.
The sun wooed leaves sigh low and turn
To crimson on the bough.

Pray, whither leads the road, fair heart?
Say, whither leads the road?
Across a rill, around a hill,
Beside a dell where rivers start,
Where bending nut trees shed their load.
Oh, thither leads the road, my heart,
Oh, thither leads the road!
—John Albert Macy in Chap Book.

Messieurs Mesureur and Moron of the third subcommittee for the Paris World's exposition in 1900 have finished the herculean task of examining into the "new ideas" presented for realization at the coming event.

While it is true that most of the schemes spoken of in the newspapers are the very incarnation of idiocy, there are some which appear to deserve a less sweeping criticism than that exercised by the commission.

An amusing proposition of M. Benda is to fix a huge mirror to the top of the Eiffel tower which would present a mirage of the larger part of Paris. Another huge mirror is to be affixed to the base of the tower in such a position as to reflect the mirage of the top mirror. In this manner the visitors to the exposition would have the opportunity to witness Parisian life without the fatigue and expense of participating in it.

The Eiffel tower, by the way, has caused so many would be inventors to present fantastic schemes that to the latter the major part of the commission's report is devoted. M. Hunt proposes a six cornered building, 100 feet in diameter and 200 feet high, on the top of which sleigh races are to be held upon artificial snow. M. Banks has the idea of a gigantic candelabra whose three feet are to serve as promenades. M. Baffa advises the erection of two fountains, one representing a man and the other a woman at 200 times the average size, which would make this proposed inland pharos about 1,000 feet high. A patriot, M. Conchol, would have the Eiffel tower remodeled into a statue of France, the first two stories to serve as pedestal. M. Mazelrygne proposes a house 1,000 feet in height in order to ascertain scientifically to what height houses may be habitable without danger.

A pyramid of 1,200 feet height revolving around its center is the ideal of John Richardson. As philosopher and philanthropist Gustave Songeux proposes two colossal statues, "War" and "Peace," "whose contrast would cause all nations to declare in favor of peace."

For the sake of gallantry the proposition of Miss Josefa Hamse may be mentioned to revive the old wooden horse of the memory of the siege of Troy and to build a horse, with "all the points of a blooded animal," which would have an interior capable of holding 1,000 people.

More prosaic and practical is the scheme of Mlle. Ralfe to construct a mechanical elephant for the children and a tea fountain for the adults. The idea of swings flying 400 feet high, submitted by M. Gauss and Mr. Farnshaw, is old. More original is a project of Axel Shoot to construct a screw 600 feet high, along the threads of which a car would conduct visitors to a restaurant at the top.

Worthy of mention is the proposition by Prince Della Rocca and by Fernand Han, the latter a Parisian journalist, to arrange an exhibit of religious art of all ages and also the project of Herr Fildermann to construct a miniature city under the protectorate of Hygeia, which is to be inhabited by people who are to live strictly according to hygienic rules in order to study public sanitation. Both projects are seriously conceived and deserving of consideration, which is acknowledged by the commission.

M. Moron, in a separate report, states that of 90 schemes examined by him 45 came from foreign countries, which shows the interest taken all over the world in the coming exposition. Of these schemes only two have been definitely adopted—one of an electric platform, with two degrees of velocity, for the transportation of visitors within the exposition grounds (which is probably similar to the moving sidewalk at the pier of the recent World's fair in Chicago) and another of a captive balloon of 80,000 cubic feet, which can keep 60 persons in an altitude of 2,000 feet; also an idea known from Chicago World's fair.

The commissioner divides the schemes examined by him into eight series, the first of which comprises aquariums, vessels, naval engineering, etc., including a giant aquarium with 180 compartments and a colossal structure containing a cataract, a lake, promenades, cafes, bicycle rings, etc. The building is to be lighted by electricity and is to have walls of red glass to produce the effect of a marvelous sunset. The author of this project, which alone would cover the space of the entire exposition grounds, is Herr Eichbaum, from St. Petersburg.—John Ehlert in Chicago Times-Herald.

Amusing Ignorance.

The written civil service examinations for policemen in New York have been sneered at as a part of a visionary scheme. The ignorance displayed by some of the unsuccessful applicants for appointment might have had free course in an official position, however, and to the public loss, had no such test been used. Extracts from what these applicants for police service wrote about Abraham Lincoln include some extraordinary statements. One wrote:

"He has bin a Presecuted of New York city." Another declared that in 1865 Lincoln was "nomanited in place of Backhanan whoe's term of office expird in that year."

"Mr. Lincoln," according to another applicant, "had many engagements in war and was bound to be victorious, especially at the battle of Gettysburg, when he swept all before him."

Of Lincoln's tragic death it was variously said that he was killed "at Chicago 1864," also that he "was assisted in 1877 at foards Theater Boston;" shot in "Booth's theater in Philadelphia;" "died at his home in Long Branch." The assassin is spoken of as "Garfield," "Getsay" and "Decola."

One candidate said Lincoln "let the Dorkey go fred," another that he "fred all the negros in the world." In general the applicants seem to have agreed, as one wrote, that "we have sertinly had very few like unto Lincoln."—Youth's Companion.

"Old False Teeth Bought."

This is the sign which attracts the attention of visitors to the office of a certain dealer in dental and optical supplies who does business in Chicago.

"It's queer how people are attracted by that sign," said the owner of the establishment. "I never intended it to be prominent, because there are other lines in my business I am more interested in pushing, but it seems to fairly force itself into the minds of everybody who comes here, no matter what his mission may be, and 'old false teeth bought' is the only thing they can think or talk about.

"There's nothing audacious in dealing in secondhand false teeth, although I will admit the sign is an unusual one. It is a legitimate branch of our trade. With ordinary usage false teeth don't wear out and are just as good at the end of a few years as they were when new. The teeth themselves are valuable, and the gold work used in binding even the commonplace kind together is costly. People are forever getting new ideas about their teeth and keep the dentists busy changing or building over their artificial molars. Then, you remember that a whole lot of people who wear false teeth are dying every day.

"Ten years ago there was no way of utilizing this old material. It was all dead waste, so to speak. But now it is different, and people are more economical. False teeth, especially if heavily set with gold plates, are worth too much money to be cast aside when new ones are ordered or to be buried in a grave. Thus it comes that a trade of considerable proportions has sprung up in this line, and old false teeth are a staple in this market."

"Small dentists who are hard up financially and lack the inclination or facilities to clean up and build over the discarded sets, which they are sharp enough to retain from their patrons, are the main source of supply. Sometimes they make their patrons a little allowance for the old sets of teeth, but they get out of this whenever possible on the plea that they are worthless. Then we have poor folk who cannot afford to wear false teeth any longer come in here occasionally and offer them for sale. Undertakers? Well, that is a feature of the trade I don't care to talk about. I might be misunderstood, and some people are so squeamish, you know.

"Why, one woman came in here yesterday to buy an opera glass. She looked like a good customer and was inspecting some high priced glasses when I stopped to wait upon a man who frequently brings in some fine teeth. She saw me take a set from him and pay for them, and then, noticing probably his somber clothes and an end of black crape sticking out of one of his side pockets, she flounced away in a fury without a word of explanation. It is hard to please everybody, and as times are hard I have to be very careful."

"But what about your sales? Who takes these old grinders and incisors from you?"

"Principally a class of men who make a business of working over the sets. When the outfit is in reasonably good shape, it is given a thorough cleansing, brightened up, and then resold to dentists who have a cheap patronage. A little tinkering will make them fit after a fashion in the mouths of people who want to make a show of false teeth at small cost. Where the sets are not good enough to be used entire they are broken up, the gold either melted down or saved to be remodeled, and the teeth themselves remounted as they are needed for patients. It's a good thing for poor people, for many of them are thus enabled to get passably fair false teeth at a nominal price, when otherwise they would have to go without, owing to the great expense. Excuse me while I wait upon this woman."

When The Inter Ocean man left the establishment, the merchant was dickering with an ample proportioned African "aunty" for a double set of teeth with heavy gold plates, which she said she had found in a hotel where she worked as chambermaid.

"Der genman' don' go to 'at 'orspital," said aunty. "E's wus so sick when dey tak' 'im way he don' olar forgot 'is teet', an I doan' 'spec' he'll wan' 'em any more. Steal 'em? No, sah; no, sah! Boss, 'e say, 'tak' ole truck 'way. I doan' want 'em 'round 'ere.' Ole truck—umph, umph—why, dat's jes' like findin five dollahs."—Chicago Inter Ocean.

EXCITED BRITONS.

THEY ARE FORMING BIG KLONDIKE EXPEDITIONS.

Views of a British Columbia Official—He Says the Dawson City Hardships Are Exaggerated—Situation on the Overland Route Will Probably Be Terrible.

"The eyes of all Europe are now centered on the Yukon," said Lieutenant Governor C. H. Mackintosh.

"South Africa has taken a back seat. Everybody of high and low degree, from duchesses to cab drivers, are talking about the Klondike, and they read every scrap of news that is published. I expect to see a great rush thither next spring from Europe.

"Lady Augusta Fane is one of those who have the fever, and she intends to make the trip to Klondike entirely through Canada. No doubt there will be others. I heard the other day of a banker who was thinking seriously of leaving a lucrative business to try his fortunes in the great goldfields."

The lieutenant governor of the northwest provinces of British Columbia while spending a month in England was besieged on all sides by capitalists and fortune hunters who were anxious to hear the details of the wonderful country.

A dinner was given in his honor, and when curiosity was expressed as to what a typical Klondiker was like the lieutenant governor brought out a six footer of fine proportions, who did not look the worse for hardship, but who in the presence of the distinguished personages blushed like a schoolboy. He was Frank Boucher, who made his pile and had returned to England on a visit.

"I think that the coming hardships at Dawson City have been greatly exaggerated, although it is probable that they will have a tough enough time of it and maybe on very short rations. Compared with Dawson City, however, the situation along the overland route to the Yukon will probably be terrible, for, in spite of repeated warnings, many went in late, and they will not get much beyond the passes. Anticipating such an emergency, the Canadian government has already sent as many supplies as possible to Lake Tagish, and they will be forwarded in either direction as the demand requires. Police have been stationed along the way for prompt communication.

"I suppose that there will be between 5,000 and 6,000 people at Dawson City this winter. It will be very difficult, of course, to get any supplies up the Yukon to relieve the miners, but I understand the North American Trading and Transportation company and other trading concerns will do their best to get goods through, at whatever cost. Supplies have been accumulated at St. Michael's for this purpose. I realize the difficulty of carrying out such a programme, but if there should be a crisis there will be nothing else to do.

"Few people have any conception of the immense territory covered by these gold bearing streams. The Yukon is only one of many rivers. It is only 200 miles long, while the Lewes river, which is believed to be equally rich, is 500 or 600 miles long, and there are numerous unexplored streams which will be developed as rapidly as the facilities for reaching the country are furnished.

"The Canadian government, as well as English capitalists, is carefully considering the opening up of the country, and within a very short time some action will be taken. An English exploration company, with a very large capitalization, will be formed to conduct mining and possibly railroad operations. I cannot at present tell you who is back of it, but I presume that Lord Dufferin will be one of the chief men. He was formerly governor general of Canada and is well posted on the mining developments up to the present time. He is a very active man, and whatever he takes hold of is sure to be carried through.

"Now, in regard to the construction of a railroad, you may rest assured that there will be one within a very short time. The only delay now is due to the choice of a route. Three or four are under consideration. The most probable route is from Fort Wrangell, on the Pacific coast, to Stickeen river, a region which is open to the British as well as to the people of the United States under the Washington treaty.

"This river is navigable to Telegraph creek, the water being from four to five feet deep. Then there is a stretch of country 145 miles long to Lake Teslin, which presents no engineering difficulties and where a railroad can be constructed at moderate cost. That done, the water stretches emptying into the Yukon, which are all navigable, could be utilized as far as Dawson City and to other portions of the Canadian territory. This route to the Yukon is less than 1,000 miles long.—New York Herald.

He Knew Him.

Several travelers were waiting for a train on the veranda of a southwest Georgia hotel. It was a dismal, rainy day, and one of them remarked:

"This reminds me of one of Longfellow's poems, 'The Day Is Done.'"

At the mention of the name Longfellow a tall stranger leaned forward and said:

"Longfellow? What do you know 'bout him?"

"Little," replied the first speaker, "except that he wrote books."

"An is he a-writin of books?" asked the tall man. "Why, the last time I heard of him he wuz runnin fer sheriff an makin of stump speeches."

"I fear you are mistaken in the man," said the first speaker, laughing.

"Not me," replied the tall man. "Don't I know him? Bill Longfellow—had a squint in one eye an a cut over the other. An jest ter think—the durned fool's took ter writin."—(Wheat

DUSKY NEW WOMEN.

Females of an Arab Tribe Who Go Unveiled While Their Men Cover Their Faces.

Many an Arab lady never leaves her house from the time she is married until she is carried out to be buried, says Pearson's Weekly. A woman of the middle class is allowed more liberty, and occasionally goes out for walks, accompanied as a rule by a servant. The poor creature is enveloped in masses of white drapery, which make her look like a walking bundle, and in front of her face she arranges a large black scarf embroidered with blue, red and white flowers. It falls low in front, and, even by holding up the ends, she cannot see more than a foot or two of the road before her. I often wonder that she does not get run over when she goes out alone, for I am sure she needs a dog to guide her quite as much as any blind man. Servants and other women of the lower classes wear pieces of black crepon wound tightly round their faces, leaving just a slit for their eyes to peep through, and they are equally muffled up in white draperies. Seen from a distance, they might be men with masks or thick black beards, as in Arab countries it is by no means easy to tell a man from a woman at first sight. The older and uglier a woman is the more prudish she seems to be about covering up her face, which, after all, is rather considerate on her part. Even the greater number of negresses wear the yashmak, but the Bedouin women never do. Indeed, I am told that in the interior there is one Arab tribe whose men wear veils, and whose women go about with their faces uncovered. These are probably the "new women" of Africa.

A BOY HERO.

One of the heroes of the battle of Manila is a 13-year-old boy, who is popularly called "Boots" by his comrades. "Boots" lately returned on the transport City of Para, and has had the distinction of having had a personal interview with Admiral Dewey, who gave him a free trip to Hong-Kong on the Olympia because of his services in the siege of Malate and the fight before Manila. He is the boy who came from Pittsburgh with the regiment. The men smuggled him aboard the transport, but he had hard luck, as he fell down the hatchway on the third day out and broke his arm. He was all right when Manila was reached, and in the trenches before Malate he carried water and ammunition and paid no attention to the bullets. As he said: "There was no chance to dodge 'em, they came so quick." He was among the first to enter Manila with a captured Spanish rifle, which he brings back with him. On August 13 he learned that the Olympia was to go to Hong-Kong, so he determined to make the trip. He boarded the ship and asked to be shown to the admiral's cabin. Dewey was sitting at a table with the captain of the ship.

"Boots" said: "I salutes and says: 'Admiral, I want to go to Hong-Kong,' and he says, pleasant like: 'Well, my boy, you come aboard and we'll take you.'"

He was 13 days on the Olympia. When he got back to Manila Col. Hawkins feared that he might catch the fever, so he sent the boy to New York on the transport.

FORMOSAN CITY ABANDONED.

Residents of Plague-Stricken Teckham Are Compelled to Leave It.

The Japanese government has ordered the destruction of the city of Teckham, Formosa, and the removal of all its inhabitants to a new location. The city is situated on the northwest coast of the island, and has been frequently subjected to pestilence. In 1896 and 1897 plagues visited Teckham with enormous fatality. This fact being called to the attention of the government, an investigation was ordered by sanitary experts, who reported that the city was built upon a swamp, whereupon an order was issued to the governor to select a new location as convenient to the old as possible, where the natural conditions were healthful. A new city was laid out, and each property holder in the old one was assigned a site that corresponded in area with the one he occupied at Teckham and was given 12 months to move his buildings and belongings. Sewers, railroads and sidewalks, public buildings, waterworks and all other public improvements were laid out by the government in the new city without expense to the people, but they were required to pay the cost of the removal of their own property. Most of the houses and other buildings in Teckham are built of very light wooden material.

First Weather Prophecy on Record.

The first attempt at scientific forecasting of the weather was the result of a storm which during the Crimean war, November 11, 1854, almost destroyed the fleets of France and England. As a storm had raged several days earlier in France, Vaillant, the French minister of war, directed that investigations be made to see if the two storms were the same, and if the progress of the disturbances could have been foretold. It was demonstrated that the two were in reality one storm and that its path could have been ascertained and the fleet forewarned in ample time to reach safety.

Conjurer Brought to Book.

Mr. Maskelyne, the London conjurer, has been compelled by the courts to make good his offer of £500 to anyone who could imitate his box trick. He had made the offer with impunity for years, but, when two young clerks took it up, refused to pay.

HAS TWO HEARTS.

Colored Man Generously Endowed by Nature Is a Puzzle to Medical Men.

Medical men of Plainfield, N. J., are deeply interested in the discovery of a man with two distinct and separate hearts and two breast bones, all of which he can move about at will.

The man who is thus generously endowed by nature is William King (colored) who claims to be 100 years old. His home is in New Bedford, Mass., and he has been visiting his cousin, Thomas Martin, the jail warden in New York city, for several days.

That he has two hearts Dr. M. B. Long, chief of the Muhlenburg hospital staff says is undeniable. Dr. Long, together with several other prominent physicians, examined King and found to their astonishment that the man's statements were true. They found that King not only had two hearts, but that they were capable of displacement. Just to show that he had his hearts completely under control King moved them about.

Although the two hearts were thrown far apart on either side, they still beat in unison. Usually King keeps his hearts, one on the right, and the other on the left side of his body. By a muscular movement he can suddenly move one heart in the lower part of his abdomen, while the other remains stationary.

When he had finished doing things with his two hearts King called attention to his breast bones. With a violent muscular movement he forced one breast bone lower and lower, until he had a complete wall of bone from his throat down.

ATTACKED BY A SAVAGE LION.

Frank C. Bostock, Manager of a Zoo, Is Rescued from Death by a Woman.

Frank C. Bostock, manager of the Hagenbeck zoo, which is wintering at Kansas City, Mo., was terribly bitten and lacerated by Brutus, the big lion which has already maimed several men. He was saved from being killed by the energetic action of Mme. Pianka, the lion tamer.

At the afternoon's rehearsal, just prior to the public performance, Mme. Pianka had trouble with Spitfire, a sulky lioness, and called Manager Bostock to her assistance. Bostick entered the cage cracking his whip and striking at Spitfire. As he did so Brutus, with a savage roar, sprang upon him, sinking his teeth to the bone in Bostock's thigh and lacerating the victim's back terribly with his claws.

Mme. Pianka fired several blank cartridges from her revolver full in Brutus' face and was about to fire the one ball cartridge when the beast loosened his hold. Mme. Pianka then threw her arms about the animal's neck and held him while Bostock was removed from the cage by attendants. Bostock, while dangerously hurt, will probably recover.

A GAY BEGINNING.

Lord Curzon of Kedleston, the new viceroy of India, and Lady Curzon start for India on December 16. They evidently intend to make a lavish beginning of their hospitality, as they have already ordered 10,000 ball programmes, 5,500 evening party cards, 1,500 garden party cards, 2,000 dinner party invitation cards, 5,500 "at home" cards, and 1,500 menu cards.

It appears that before assuming the title, young Curzon called upon Baron Curzon, the title borne by Earl Howe, head of the Curzon-Howe family, and asked him if he objected to his so doing. The baron said he had no objection if Curzon undertook to be known as Baron Curzon of Kedleston and allowed the title to drop when he succeeds his father as Lord Scarsdale.

WEDDED ON A HIGHWAY.

Guests Asked to Wait While the Ceremony Takes Place in Another County.

William H. Webb and Miss Angeline Keusel were married upon the public highway near Farmer City, Ill., the principals sitting in a carriage, while W. C. McMurray, a justice of the peace, occupied a buggy near by. The bride's home is in Piatt county, and it was intended that the wedding should occur there. The groom, however, inadvertently procured the license in De Witt county, and, to be legal, the ceremony had to be performed in De Witt. The bride, groom and justice accordingly asked the assembled guests to excuse them for an hour, while they drove over the county line. As soon as the party reached the opposite county the horses were halted and the binding words uttered. The three then returned to the bride's home.

Pitiful Poverty in Russia.

Statistics just published show that in Russia only 347,268 families out of a population of about 130,000,000 souls have an income of over $500 a year, or that practically more than 99 per cent. of the whole population are constantly in a state of abject poverty and pauperism in their various degrees. The figures become appalling when one considers the case of the peasantry, which forms the overwhelming majority of the population. The average yearly income of a peasant family consisting of six members ranges from $60 to $75 a year, out of which between $25 and $35 has to be paid to the government in direct taxes.

Government Creameries in Canada.

The Canadian government creameries in the northwest turned out 80,000 pounds of butter last month.

DRINKS IN OTHER DAYS.

The earliest mention of wine in the Bible is a reference to Noah planting a vineyard and getting drunk with the wine.

The Roman lover, when drinking to his lady, often drank as many cups of wine as there were letters in her name. Warm water was sometimes regarded by the Romans as an agreeable drink, the conclusion of the chief meal.

Famous among drinkers were the Vikings, whose liquors were ale, beer, wine and mead. Quaffing ale from the skulls of their enemies formed one of the chief attractions of the promised Valhalla.

The Egyptians, who have been ungallant enough to leave behind them delineations of the fair sex in a state of intoxication, had several kinds of wine more than 6,000 years ago, in addition to a beer called hega, made from barley.

A drink much in demand in the time of Chaucer was bracket, made of the wort of ale, honey and spices. By the time of Edward IV. drinking had become so productive of crime that few places were allowed more than two taverns. London had to be content with 40.

The drinks of antiquity were sometimes, to say the least, peculiar. The Greeks and Romans, whose customary drink was wine, often mixed it with sea water. Other ancient beverages were honey and rainwater; honey, salt water and vinegar, and a mixture of honey and myrtle seed.

Under the Stuarts drunkenness was at its height. Thirst provokers were largely taken, and a man's claim to distinction was largely due to his bottle capacity, while ladies of the court thought it no shame to become inebriated. The three or five-bottle man was an object of envy to his fellows.

BOWS OF THE ANCIENTS.

The Greek bow was not more than three or four feet in length, but was so stout and stiff that it required considerable strength and skill to use it.

The Romans carried the bow to Britain, where it at once obtained favor, and during the middle ages was extensively used, forming an important element of the armies of that period.

While universally used by the ancients the form of the bow varied with different nations. The Scythian bow was in form of the letter C and the bow of the Tartars—descendants of the Scythians—still keeps that shape.

It is said that the first Greek bows were made from the horns of a species of goat, the bases being united by means of a metallic band. Afterward other material was used in their manufacture, but they still retained their original shape. These bows were too short to be of much use, and, comparatively speaking, but a small portion of the troops were armed with them.

The English archers were said to be the finest in the world, and their skill decided the battles of Crecy, Poitiers and Agincourt. The bows used were of two kinds, the long bow and the arbalest or cross-bow. The arbalest was made of steel or horn and was of such strength and stiffness that it was necessary to use some mechanical appliance to bend it and adjust the string. The arbalesters carried a quiver with 50 arrows and were placed in the van of the battle.

THE ENGLISH LIBRARIES.

There are 1,750,000 volumes in the library of the British museum and more than 39 miles of shelving.

In 1896 the United States, according to government statistics, possessed 4,026 public and school libraries, containing 33,051,872 volumes.

There are 844 public libraries in Australia, with 1,400,000 volumes; 298, with 330,000 volumes, in New Zealand; 100, with 300,000 volumes, in South Africa.

There are now about [illegible]50 public libraries in Great Britain, says Science. These libraries contain over 5,000,000 volumes and issue about 27,000,000 books each year. The annual attendance of readers is about 60,000,000.

Public Statement From A Public Man

Hon. W. H. Ohley, Ex-Secretary of State of West Virginia, writes an open letter.

CHARLESTON, W. Va., Mar. 9, 1898.
To whom it may concern:

"I most heartily recommend Pe-ru-na as of great benefit in cases of catarrh. It is especially beneficial wherever the mucous membranes are affected. As a tonic it certainly has no superior."

W. H. OHLEY, Ex-Secretary of State.

HON. W. H. OHLEY.

Pe-ru-na has cured thousands of obstinate cases of catarrh, and is perhaps the only efficient remedy in existence for catarrhal diseases; but there are countless multitudes of people who are still struggling with catarrh and need help. To such as these the unqualified recommendation of Pe-ru-na by Ex-Secretary Ohley is directed. Pe-ru-na is scientific and purely vegetable. All druggists sell it.

JACK AND HIS WILL.

A Special Act of the British Parliament Arranges That Matter.

Jack has the proud distinction of having had an act of parliament passed for the express purpose of deciding the way in which he must make his will, so that while all other Britons are lumped together in this matter under the wills act of 1838 sailors' testamentary documents are made under the naval wills act of 1866. The most important proviso of this act is that all wills made by sailors or marines must be witnessed and attested by the chaplain or some other officer if they are actually made on board ship, and this is somewhat curious.

If a sailor likes to make his will on shore, any one can witness it for him, but on board ship the case is different. Needless to say they almost all to a man choose the latter course, as they know that things will be straighter for bearing an officer's signature. If, however, supposing that the vessel was in action and a man was to be struck down who had not previously made a will, if he had to do so before he died, even if it were not attested by an officer, the admiralty has full power to act on the merits of the case and to dispense with that or any other formality that it was impossible to comply with. Another thing—a sailor shares with a soldier the privilege of when on active service being the only man who can dispense with a written will and make a verbal one.

In former times any one could make his will verbally if he so desired, but this, as may be supposed, opened the door to no end of fraud, and it was consequently repealed in the 1838 act, except in the case mentioned above. On the night before a ship or a regiment goes into action there is no more pathetic sight than to see the men, young and old, laboriously writing their wills in case tomorrow should be their last day in this world, and what with witnessing wills and making them on the forms issued by the authorities for those who cannot write—and this class has now almost entirely disappeared from both the navy and the army—the officers have a very busy time.—London Golden Penny.

THE FIREMAN'S LIFE.

He Cannot Always Finish His Toilet Before a Mirror.

"Of course everything about the fire department interests us always," said Mr. Glumby, "but there is one little thing in particular that I've seen I suppose hundreds of times that appeals to me more every time I see it, and that is the firemen getting into their coats as they go along. You see this among the men on trucks and on hose wagons. The men on the engine have to use their hands to hold on.

"It's a simple enough thing in general to see a man putting on his coat, but here he isn't standing up in his room before a mirror, but he's jumped out of bed and taken his coat under his arm and slid down a sliding pole and is completing his dressing sitting on top of a rack of ladders going through the street like mad, drawn by three great horses at one end, with a man down at the other end steering this outfit with a wheel. This sight never loses its novelty or its interest. You may see the same thing on a hose wagon.

"But what set me to speaking about this now was seeing a man on a fire patrol wagon, sitting on one of their long seats, facing outward, pulling up the tops of his high boots—red wagon, galloping horses, banging gong, men in fire hats and rubber coats, the whole blooming outfit on the dead jump and this man sitting on the side seat reaching down for the tops of those boots and straightening up with each one as he got it and swaying back a little as he pulled it up into place, just as a man would sit on the edge of his bed at home to put on his stockings and slippers and just as cool and comfortable."—New York Sun.

Geography For Women.

The introduction to Parkenton's "Modern Atlas," published in 1815, has a reference to "the sex" which ought to be very interesting to our modern college girl. The learned author says:

Geography is a study so universally instructive and pleasing that it has for nearly a century been taught even to females, whose pursuits are foreign from serious researches. In the trivial conversation of the social circle, in the daily avidity of the occurrences of the times, pregnant indeed above all others with rapid and important changes that affect the very existence of states and empires, geography has become a habitual resource to the elegant female, as well as the profound philosopher.

Stopping a Big Steamship.

To stop the Etruria, whose displacement is 9,680 tons, horsepower 14,321 and speed 20.18 knots an hour, 3 minutes and 47 seconds are required, and during the process of stopping the ship will forge ahead 2,464 feet, or nearly half a mile. The United States cruiser Columbia, with a displacement of 7,350 tons, 17,991 horsepower and a speed of 22.8 knots an hour, can be stopped in 2 minutes and 15 seconds and within a space of 2,147 feet. In each case the vessel is supposed to be going at full speed and the stoppage produced by reversing the action of the propeller.

Dumas' Quick Wit.

Dumas found a man asleep in the Theatre Francais during the playing of a piece by his friend Sonmet. "You see that?" said he, "that's your work."

Next evening a Dumas comedy was put on. The two friends looked in again and found a sleeper.

"You see, dear Dumas," said Sonmet, "your works can produce sleep."

"Do you refer to that man?" replied Dumas. "Why, that's the man who was there last night. He's not awake yet!"—San Francisco News Letter.

THISTLE DOWNS.

Lighter and whiter than a flying flake
Of winter snows through wan air winnowing,
The thistledowns their sudden journeys take
O'er meadows wide in vagrant wandering.
No more shall they to earth reluctant cling
As a moss lined and slowly sinking stone
Left lying in an outer waste alone
Beside the edge of some remote morass,
But high they toss above the fields new mown,
Like disembodied spirits of the grass.

The drowsy atmosphere in lines opaque
Leans to the sun, that fast is withering
The last faint dews, the dry thirst to slake,
While swallows dip, on ever restless wing,
Across a dusty road the robins sing,
And bumblebees upon the clover drone,
While thistle downs in airy spaces lone
Along the skies in happy freedom pass,
Voyaging afar to mystic climes unknown,
Like disembodied spirits of the grass.

TRICKS OF A MIND READER.

"Speaking of telegraphy," said a gentleman who takes an interest in occult studies, "reminds me of an incident which created a great stir some years ago but is now about forgotten. A New York lawyer, who claimed to be able to project thought, had a committee of skeptics select a playing card at random and then wired a friend in San Francisco, asking him to think of a card and telegraph back what one came into his mind. The card selected was the five of spades and the reply was correct. All the parties were well known, and the experiment caused an immense sensation.

"The newspapers discussed it by the column, and it was exploited as a positive demonstration of thought transference, but as a matter of fact the whole thing was merely a clever trick. I had it afterward explained to me by one of the people on the inside. It had been prearranged with the San Francisco man that the cue to the right card was to be the wording of the message. The denomination was indicated by the number of words in the second sentence. If, for instance, it was an ace, the sentence would be only one word, 'Answer;' if a deuce it would be 'Answer immediately,' and so on.

"As it happened to be a five the message ran 'Telegraph reply quickly as possible.' The suit of the card was revealed by the signature. Signing the name in full meant hearts, the first only meant clubs, the last name meant spades, and the initials meant diamonds. The system was beautifully simple and the message seemed on its face perfectly innocent. It was carefully examined to find a hidden cord, but baffled the investigators. As far as I know, the truth about the affair has never been printed."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Diplomacy.

One day a gentleman was holding a conversation with his wife in the presence of their 5-year-old son, and among other things mentioned was "diplomacy."

"Pa," said the youngster when a break in the conversation allowed him to interfere, "what does diplomacy mean?"

"Diplomacy, my son," said the father, "is this—doing exactly the right thing at exactly the right moment."

"Then I suppose I used diplomacy when I got out of the pantry yesterday, dad, did I?"

"What do you mean?" was the reply.

"Why," said the son, "I got into the back yard with that meat pie just at the moment ma caught the cat in the pantry and told you to drown her for thieving."—Pearson's Weekly.

He Wasn't Proud.

The London Telegraph says that while a certain bishop was waiting for a train at Waterloo station, a porter, who often sees him into a compartment and shuts the door, in order that his lordship may be alone, came up to him in a state of excitement and asked:

"Your reverence, do you see that gentleman standing in the doorway over there?"

"Yes," answered the bishop.

"Do you know who it is?" continued the porter.

"No," said his lordship.

The railway man then whispered: "It's the 'Coffee Cooler,' your reverence. Oh, he ain't proud! He'll shake hands with your reverence if you like."

The "Coffee Cooler" is a noted colored prizefighter.

Ingrowing Nails.

To prevent an ingrowing nail a strip of cotton should be worked between the nail and the flesh, left large enough to cover the entire nail. A piece of cotton is then twisted into a long roll and placed on the other side of the nail groove over the sound skin. The space between is filled with lead nitrate, heaped up, and the larger piece of cotton folded over it, with more cotton outside, held in place with a moist bandage. This dressing is renewed every day, and in two or three the exuberance is reduced until the edge of the nail can be seen, and cotton inserted between it and the flesh beneath, when the nitrate can be discontinued.

Mormonism.

The good wife looked at her mending basket and sighed. If she hadn't seen them there she wouldn't have believed her husband could have worn holes in so many pairs of socks in so short a time.

"There are occasions," she said at last, "when I am almost ready to believe that it would be a good thing for a man to be a Mormon."

Then she went at the job she would willingly have shared with a few other wives.—Chicago Post.

DYED DIAMONDS.

Yellow Stones Can Be Made to Look Like Gems of the First Water.

"There are tricks in every trade" has grown to be an adage, and this proverb holds especially good with regard to the jewelry trade, which for "ways that are dark and tricks that are vain" fairly takes the palm for roguery.

Although a great deal of capital, time and labor have been devoted to counterfeiting the diamond, very little success has been obtained from a fraudulent point of view, as the diamond possesses extraordinary qualities of hardness and brilliancy, with which no imitation, up to now, can attempt to vie. "Paste" of all kinds can be tested by means of a sharp steel file, which scratches its surface.

A method of successful imposition with diamonds has however, been discovered, and the originator of this swindle actually defrauded the pawnbrokers of London alone in one year of upward of $500,000.

The general public, as well as jewelers, are aware that diamonds of a yellowish tinge, or, as they are called in the trade, "straws," are worth very little. Large stones of this color, even when weighing from 10 to 100 carats, are quite common and will only fetch in the market from $5 to $20 per carat, the value, of course, increasing in ratio with weight. Diamonds of the same weight, if of the first water, or perfectly colorless, would be worth from five to ten times as much.

The methods of the individual referred to were as follows: He purchased a quantity of "yellow" stones, and then by a simple yet ingenious process succeeded in imparting to them an evanescent purity of color. This was done by procuring two ordinary glasses, a kettle of boiling water and a threepenny packet of mauve dye.

The "yellow" diamond, which was perhaps set in a gold ring or pin, was merely dipped in the glass containing the dye, and then in clean boiling water half a dozen times, and allowed to dry, when it presented all the appearance even to the eye of an expert, of a magnificent stone of the first water.

The next move was to place the ring on the finger, and the well dressed diamond dyer would sally forth, enter a pawnbroker's and pledge the ring for at least three times its worth. Within 12 hours, however, the effects of the dye would have disappeared and the pawnbroker could only wonder what on earth was wrong with his eyes when he advanced so much money on such a yellow stone.

Fortunately, owing to the magnitude of this individual's operations, the fraud was discovered, and now pawnbrokers, if they are suspicious of a diamond's color, immerse it in nitric acid, which destroys any dye that may be present without in any way injuring the stone.—London Mail.

GOOD MONEY FOR BAD NEWS

Paid to Learn That Sight Would Leave Him in Six Months.

Somehow it made me feel bad, this happening that I am about to relate. I was in the office of an oculist, one of the leading men in his profession in Pittsburg. A big, strong and healthy looking man entered. His appearance indicated that he had many years of life before him. He was well dressed, keenly intelligent and of pleasant countenance.

"Doctor," he said, "my eyes have been troubling me, and I would like you to make an examination of them and treat them."

After a few preliminary questions the doctor told him to strip himself to the waist. He took off his clothes and stood there a magnificent specimen of manhood. The doctor examined him, paying particular attention to his back, for a reason of which I know nothing. Having finished, he said:

"Put on your clothes. I can do nothing for you. Your sight may last six months, but no longer. Treatment will do no good. Blindness is sure to come."

"What's the matter, doctor?" he asked quietly, with a faint tremor in his voice.

The doctor told him in technical language and then explained that the trouble came from the wasting of a nerve leading from the spine.

"What's your bill, doctor?" asked the man when he got his clothes on.

"Five dollars," replied the doctor.

He paid it, and left the office without another word. In the fullness of life he walked out into the blessed light of day, doomed within six months to darkness until death. It was an incident to the doctor; to me it was a tragedy.—Pittsburg News.

Irving Didn't Read.

Sir Henry Irving appeared at the Theater Royal, Edinburgh, in 1857, and two years later he went to Linlithgow to give a reading there. He was delighted to see his name in big letters on the posters on arriving in the town. He went to the hall, but there was no crowd there—in fact, the caretaker had not arrived, having forgotten all about the reading. Irving went in search of him, and things were got ready; 8:30 o'clock arrived, but no one came to the hall—not even a small boy. In recalling the incident Sir Henry was wont to say, "I never slept better than I did that night."

Its Natural Effect.

"How many of these sheep got out of here?" asked the angry farmer.

"I don't know," replied the new hired man, rubbing his eyes. "After I'd watched five or six of 'em jump over the fence I seemed to lose the count. That always puts me to sleep."—Chicago Tribune.

Of No Avail.

"Prisoner," said the court, "have you anything to say for yourself?"

"What's the use?" replied the culprit; "you guys wouldn't believe me."—Philadelphia North American.

MANY SECRET MINES.

ENGLAND'S COAST STUDDED WITH THESE DEFENSES.

Their Locality, Approaches and Firing Points Are Mysteries That Foreign Spies Have Often Tried, but Always in Vain, to Solve.

England has the most formidable navy in the world, but she does not rely upon it alone in the event of war to prevent a foreign force from landing upon her shores. London Tit-Bits, in an article on the secret coast defenses of Great Britain, says:

In the event of war no alien army could approach our shores without imperiling its navy by encountering our explosive mines, scores of which surround our coasts at all places likely to be selected for attack by a foreign foe. The Thames is also carefully [illegible] by similar secret mines, one of these being in the vicinity of Blackwall. The precise locality of these mines is, however, for obvious reasons, kept a dark and inscrutable mystery, and the approaches to them are so cleverly constructed and concealed that no one save an expert would suspect their real character.

An innocent looking cellar at the basement of a certain tradesman's shop is the entrance to one important mine, but even the tradesman himself is not aware that the government rents his cellar, nor does he ever surmise the true nature of the operations carried on therein. The mines are equipped with explosives of the most potent kind and admirably connected with the secret chambers on shore by means of electric wires.

Each mine is controlled by a button, over which are printed particulars relating to the location and character of the mine. This button is placed in the wall of the secret chamber and covered by a double door, securely locked, the outer door so closely resembling the wall of the chamber that no one but those in the secret could detect its presence. The chambers are double locked and approached by passages protected in a similar manner.

Every lock and key is specially made for the government and is unlike any other. Only a few of the very highest officials are allowed to use these keys, and they are solemnly sworn to preserve their secret rigidly. No persons apart from those especially empowered may inspect or visit any of the secret chambers at any time except by express written permit personally procured from a certain high official. This is exceedingly difficult to obtain, and in fact is rarely ever granted.

Prior to such a permit being issued the officials assure themselves that the possessor of the document bears a blameless character, is British born and has no ulterior reasons for preferring his request. This settled, he is sworn to secrecy in the most solemn manner, blindfolded and conducted by a circuitous route to the secret chamber, where he is permitted to use his eyes, but not his tongue, no questions being answered by the attending officials.

Strange stories have been told of attempts made by foreign spies to penetrate the privacy of these mysterious mines.

A young lieutenant in the navy, whose honorable character won the confidence of his superior officers some years since, was accorded the privilege of guarding one of these secret mines and intrusted with certain information concerning its character.

Soon after his appointment he became engaged to a charming young French lady of whom he was desperately enamored. By some inexplicable means his fiancee got to hear of his appointment, and by alternate threats and persuasion induced him to take her to see the secret mine under his care.

On the evening arranged, after extracting a solemn vow of secrecy from his ladylove and getting her to don the dress of a naval officer for the occasion, he was about to set out on his secret mission when, to his surprise and alarm, he and his companion were arrested by detectives. In some mysterious manner the authorities had been enlightened as to the proceedings on foot and were in time to stop them.

For "breach of regulations" the young lieutenant was subsequently court martialed and reduced, while his charming companion, who proved to be a spy in the employ of the French government, was conveyed back to her own country, with a caustic caution.

On another occasion a German gentleman contrived to locate the entrance to one of the secret chambers and actually hired a member of the Bill Sikes fraternity to aid him in negotiating the double locks one dark November night. But so splendidly fitted and fortified were these appliances both the visitors were doomed to disappointment. Returning from the rendezvous, both the plotter and his accomplice were arrested and imprisoned.

Worth Waiting For.

During a performance at at the Tynemouth Aquarium, a couple from Old Hartley were among the audience. When half time arrived, an attendant placed on the stage a board inscribed with the word "Interval."

"W'at's that, Geordie?" asked the wife. Geordie spelled the word.

"I-n, in; t-e-r, inter; v-a-l, interval."

"But w'at is't?"

"An divvent knaa, lass. The feaks is sall gannin oot; but we'll stop to see it!"—San Francisco Wave.

In 1666 the great fire in London burned over 436 acres, destroying at least $35,000,000 worth of property. In 1872 the Boston fire burned over 60 acres, at a loss of $1,000,000 an acre. If the same fire occurred today, it would cost, at the very lowest estimate, $100,000,000. In 1893 the loss on the 2¼ acres burned over was over $350,000,000.

POPULAR PROVERBS

SOME THAT ARE FAIRLY BRIMFUL OF ABSURDITY.

Maxims Often Quoted and at Times Advanced as Argument Which Have Neither Wit Nor Wisdom to Commend Them—Contradictory Sayings.

There is a mistaken notion abroad, says a writer in London Tit-Bits, that proverbs are epitomes of wisdom, the concentrated experience of generations, and that to quote one of them in a discussion is to advance an unanswerable argument. And yet what is there to recommend many of them beyond their jingle? Take our familiar friend:

Early to Bed and Early to Rise, Makes a Man Healthy, Wealthy and Wise.—Obviously, the main idea was to find a word to rhyme with "rise," and "wise" was the unfortunate word chosen. And now, trustful little boys are persuaded to go to bed at unreasonably early hours in the hope of becoming a sort of Sandow-Rothschild-Solomon, though we all know milkmen and market gardeners who get up at 5 a. m. and are neither rich nor clever, and members of parliament who go to bed late and are, if not clever, at least not poor and infirm. Since the invention of gas and electric light this ridiculous old proverb has outlived its original modicum of truth, and proves we must not venerate proverbs on account of their hoary antiquity.

The Early Bird Catches the Worm.—The mistake made here is that it assumes we are all birds. But some of us are worms. If we were not, what would become of the birds? And, therefore, while the birds do well to be early, let the worms be late—the later the better.

The Pitcher That Goes Oft to the Well Is Broken at Last.—Note, it does not say "is broken first," but "is broken at last." Of course, every pitcher, whether it goes to the well or stays on the shelf, is broken at last, and the only result of this absurd proverb is to encourage lazy folk to do as little work as possible and unnecessarily keep out of harm's way.

If You Want a Thing Well Done; Do It Yourself.—There's shocking bad advice with which to start a youth on life's journey. If he wants a button well sewed on, he's to do it himself; if he wants his hair well cut, he's to cut it himself. He must mend his own chairs, shoe his own nag, darn his own socks. In short, from buying a horse to blacking his boots, he must do it himself. Poor fellow!

A Contented Mind Is a Continual Feast.—Can any one say what that means? Does it mean that the owner continually feasts on his contented mind or that the contented mind is continually feasting? Probably the latter, as we sometimes hear that "a hungry man's an angry man," and we all know that a satisfied appetite is the source of contentment. Hence it is not the contented mind which makes the feast, as the silly proverb implies, but the continual feast which produces the contented mind.

There's No Rule Without an Exception.—This is not only a proverb: it is also a rule. But obviously there is no exception to this rule, because if there were a rule with an exception this proverb would be untrue. But the proverb is a rule which has no exception, which, as Mr. Euclid would say, is absurd. Which was to be shown.

Where Ignorance Is Bliss, 'Tis Folly to Be Wise.—For oracular stupidity this proverb may be classed with the one about the pitcher. Granting it true, the difficulty is to know where ignorance is bliss and of course the proverb gives no assistance where it is most needed. Most people quote it as "ignorance is bliss," in their blissful ignorance, but if a proverb gives rise to error it is not only absurd; it is also dangerous. When people say—

A Little Learning Is a Dangerous Thing—They make that a reason not for learning more, but for learning less.

Love Me, Love My Dog.—If I go a-courting, and my ladylove bids me love her scented, dyspeptic poodle, which is not necessary to her health and comfort, must I not much more love her glass eye and false teeth and hair, which are? Yet common sense revolts at the notion, and I therefore assume that a proverb which, logically treated, makes such unreasonable demands on my affections is wrong and absurd.

Seeing Is Believing.—How can any reflecting person repeat these words? For very often we believe we see what really we do not. If a conjurer were to take this proverb as his motto, every one would see its absurdity. A straight stick half submerged in water looks crooked. Fortunately, another proverb says, "Trust not to appearances." And this bring us to the exquisite absurdity of popular proverbs which run in contradictory pairs and support both sides of an argument. Thus one proverb says, "Look before you leap;" another, "Who hesitates is lost." Sometimes we hear that "Second thoughts are best;" at other times that "Delays are dangerous." The desperate man relies on "Nothing venture, nothing have;" the cautious man on "Never venture out of your depth till you can swim." The impatient matrimonial candidate believes that "Happy's the wooing that's not long a-doing;" the tardy one that one may "Marry in haste and repent at leisure." And so on ad infinitum. "Absence makes the heart grow fonder"—"Out of sight, out of mind," "It's never too late to mend"—"A fool at 40 will never be wise." "Too many cooks spoil the broth"—"There's safety in numbers" and "Two heads are better than one."

Therefore, let us examine our proverbial coinage before we pass it into the moral currency.

[illegible] WHO GAMBLE.

Ch[illegible] Italians Especially Addicted to Games of Chance.

[illegible] nations of the earth who ga[illegible] do it more or less—th[illegible] in an easy first. Sup[illegible] the gambling mania [illegible] ss, and while the [illegible] ly hates to decide what shor[illegible] done about Wei-Hai-Wei and Talien-Wan the humbler Celestials gamble for [illegible] life to pass the time away. "The Chinese play night and day," says a traveler, "till they have lost all they are worth, and then they usually go and hang themselves," from which it would appear that the yellow danger is not so formidable after all.

The Chinese laborers in the United States squander their earnings in a game called "white pigeon's ticket." White, by the way, is the unlucky color for the gamer and the lucky one for the keeper of the gaming house. These gentry keep orange peel in a box, believing that it will bring them luck.

The Italians are no less superstitious, and they gamble persistently, the poor people especially, in the government lotteries. Everything has a number; a cat, a dog, a gondola, and the "Libro dei Sogno"—the lotto player's oracle—will tell you what the number is and the rules for interpreting the appearances in dreams. Visitors to Venice, which has always been a stronghold of gambling, may have seen the declaration of the winning figures from the Campanile of St. Mark's—the silent, eager crowd gathered in the square and the group of officials gathered round the boy with the bandaged eyes who draws the numbers from the cage.

There is a story told in Venice of a madman who hailed a gondolier from the window of the madhouse on the island to tell him the numbers he had dreamed. The man put his money on them and won, and from that day to this the gondoliers go near the window as they pass in the hope that the madman will call again. The story is true.—London Chronicle.

VORACIOUS LITTLE ROBINS.

Each Required Fourteen Yards of Angleworms Every Day.

A would be philanthropist relates his experiences trying to play mother to a nest of little robins, which had by some accident been deprived of their rightful mother's care. He diligently set to work digging angleworms, and supposed that he was fulfilling his whole duty, when one of the poor little songsters died. Upon examination of the body, which was reduced to skin and bone, the foster parent came to the conclusion that it must have died of starvation.

Deeply grieved at his shortcoming, he redoubled his efforts, determined to at least save the other two. It was not long, however, before a second one died, evidently of the same malady. The good man then resolved that, whatever the third one died of, it should not be starvation, and took off his coat and went to work in earnest. He kept on with the angleworm diet until he found that his one little bird was consuming from 14 to 18 yards of angleworms a day. This was too much for his patience, and he proceeded to substitute the more easily managed diet of bread and milk and other delicacies, which were, however, not nearly so much to Miss Robin's taste.

Wanting to discover whether he had been catering to a family of abnormal appetites, our friend took to watching the methods of a real mother bird and found that she fed her young every two minutes. He then consulted the learned books upon birds and discovered that 14 yards of worms a day, with meals every two minutes, is the average rate of feeding fledgelings. He has therefore decided that he does not care to take up raising birds by hand as a business.—Boston Transcript.

He Got the Ad.

"You're not on that horrid paper, are you," cried the girl who speaks her mind, "though I did once meet a reporter from it who was rather nice? He came to see about getting an advertisement— What! Not a reporter? Why, I thought he was. Well, anyway I had lost a dog, and he said he had heard of it and wanted to know if I didn't want to advertise in his paper for it. I told him I didn't believe I liked his old paper, and he said he didn't think much of it himself, but he thought it was pretty apt to reach the class of people who stole dogs. And so since he was so polite about it I thought I might as well advertise in it. But I didn't get the dog."—New York Commercial Advertiser.

Show Your Best Qualities.

Honesty does not require us to hang our oil paintings faced to the wall in order that our friends may see that they are made on coarse canvas. It is right to appear always at our best. Give the world your brightest thoughts, your most courteous speech, the outcome of your kindest impulses and purest motives, no matter if you are conscious that these things are above your ordinary level. God made the flowers show their colors, not their dull, fibrous matter; to load the air with their odors, not with the rankness of their sap.—Homiletic Review.

Another Wreck.

A rail, broken in seven different places, was the cause of a wreck on this line yesterday which happened to the northbound train between Shirley and Ives station. Engineer Chapin was running at an ordinary rate of speed but before he was aware of the fact, and engine reversed, seven hundred feet of track had been torn up. The passenger coach was all that had left the track going over the embankment. Two persons were slightly injured which is a miracle as the coach was filled with passengers.

Miss Katie Powers who has just finished a successful term of school in the Black River district, was here a few hours Saturday enroute to Crookston where she will spend her vacation.

Farmers have been prompt in coming in and paying up their subscription and in eight cases out of ten have renewed by taking advantage of our club rates with that excellent paper, Farm, Stock and Home.

Dr. Dunlop of Crookston came up yesterday in response of a telegram sent by Solomen Swenson who is very ill and not expected to live. He was accompanied by Dr. Francis of this village.

M. McAndress received a gasoline peanut roaster Saturday and was turning out fresh roasted peanuts in a remarkable short time. A fruit and confectionery store is not complete without a roaster of this kind.

Chas. H. Lee, editor of the Walhalla Mountaineer, N. Dak., has a great eye on him for looking after news that happened in the sixties, and any of the instances (which occupy a page or more) are worth the subscription price of that excellent paper.

For a plain, practical and instructive paper, made largely by farmers and wholly for farmers, Farm, Stock and Home of Minneapolis, Minn., has no equal among agricultural journals. We can furnish it in connection with the Spectator one year for only $1.25.

It is unkind of Senator Mason to introduce evidence in his speech in the Senate that the administration was purchasing food supplies in Australia for our army at Manila. It illustrates the great benefits the American farmer would receive from our control of the Philippines.

Says a modest exchange: There is a little matter which some of our Subscribers have seemingly forgotten—some of them made us promises, but have not kept them. With us it is a very important matter—it's necessary in our business. We are very modest and don't like to speak about it.

C. J. Hendrickson and family, of St. Hilaire, are in the city the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Elias Steenerson. Mr. Hendrickson was the first settler of Sanders township, now in Red Lake county, but has sold out his interests there and will go to Minneapolis to make his future home.—Crookston Tribune.

Bernard T. Kortgaard of Wisconsin has purchased a building and lot in which he will install in a few days a steam laundry with all modern appliances including steam. It will be of sufficient capacity to do the work for St. Hilaire and her two sister towns, Red Lake Falls and Thief River Falls. The name indicates that the new proprietor is not a Chinaman.

An exchange very significantly says: "The prosperity of a town, village or city is not guided by the wealth of its inhabitants, but by the uniformity with which they pull together when any important duty is to be accomplished. A man with a thousand dollars at his command and an interest in the welfare of his town at heart can do more for the building and improvements of it than a millionaire who locks up his capital and snaps his fingers at home progress."

There is more truth than poetry in this, from an exchange: Men are hogs. When a hog gets an ear of corn, every hog will trot along behind him and squeal and whine and beg for a bite but just let the front hog be caught with his head fast in a crack and every hog will jump on him and tear him to pieces. Just so with man; as long as he is prosperous and has money he can keep friends off with a ball bat. The moment he is unfortunate and his wealth is gone he is not only snubbed by his former alleged friends, but they at once begin to do him all the harm possible. When a man starts down grade the world steps aside and greases the track.

If a horse could talk these cold days he would say; Give me a dry bed, for I can't sleep in the mud or on the cold bolders placed in my stall to prevent me from pawing the ground up when you fail to give me enough of the right kind of feed. There's plenty of straw in the poorly stacked pile going to waste, and if you would take a little time in getting it, you could provide me a good bed. Stop up the cracks and put in a pane of glass to keep out the cold, and please don't water me out of the swill pail. Give me pure water to drink, good corn and oats, and I will repay you when spring comes. When you put on the harness see that it fits me, for you know I can't work if the harness is to small. If the road is icy better interview the blacksmith. Come remember the golden rule. Another very important thing for you to remember is—do not let me stand out in the cold all day while you hang around saloons filling your skin with good or bad liquor.—Dumb Animals.

LARGEST RANCH IN THE WORLD.

Its Area is Greater Than That of Rhode Island and Delaware Combined.

"It seems natural that the largest ranch in the world should be found in the largest State in the Union—Texas" writer William Clinton in the February Ladies' Home Journal. "Indeed, this ranch is so extensive that some States could not contain it. Connecticut, for example, could not hold it by several thousand acres. The two States of Rhode Island and Delaware combined could not contain this immense ranch, which consists of three million acres, or about five thousand square miles.

"About a dozen years ago, when Texas needed a new State capitol, the Legislature adopted a novel plan to get it. A promise was held forth that a vast tract of unappropriated land would be given in exchange for a suitable granite building at Austin. Among those tempted by this offer were ex-Senator Charles B. Farwell and his brother John, who ultimately formed a syndicate in Chicago and took upon themselves the responsibility of erecting the proposed capitol. Their part of the agreement appears to have been carried out to the satisfaction of the State, and in due time they came into the possession of the immense domain now known as the X. I. T. ranch."

Stillwater Gazette: Dr. Ritchie, surgeon of the Thirteenth Minnesota at Manila, in a letter says that the slightest thing throws the city into a state of nervous excitement. Recently a member of the regiment shot at a dog and immediately the whole city was alarmed. Nothing serious resulted and in due course of time the excitement died out and peace was again restored. When a sentry fires at a Filipino and fails to hit him, he is obliged to buy the cigars for all of his company.

The Red Lake Falls Gazette credits Conductor Henry Murray with being a musician, and they have a band concert on his train every day, when standing room is at a premium, Con. Murray plays the violin, mandolin or mouth organ, ad libitum; Express Messenger J. F. Aikley, the mandolin; Breakman Frank Andrist, guitar; Breakman Wm. Andrist, guitar. The program is varied by occasional, vocal selections, their favorite being "She Was Bred in Old Kentucky." Those who get into the charmed circle say the music is immense.

A FEW DATES.

During the month of March there will be a number of first-class attractions at the Grand Opera House, Crookston.

The first of these will be the eminent young actor, Walker Whiteside, in the romantic drama of the Napoleonic era, "The Red Cockade." Mr. Whiteside is perhaps the foremost young actor in America, and he is supported by an excellent company of players. This is one of the best attractions which is booked for the season. The date is Mon. March 6th.

On March 9th, "On the Suwanee River" will be presented. This is a Southern melodrama, one of the best on the road, and the company is a first-class one.

Tuesday, March 14th, is the date of "A Midnight Bell," that great Hoyt farce. The company is a good one, and the production will compare very favorably with "A Contented Woman" and "A Parlor Match", which gave such general satisfaction.

On March 22nd, John Griffith, well known through his former visits in "Faust" will be seen in a romantic drama. Mr. Griffith is a great favorite throughout this section of the country.

Tuesday afternoon, March 28th, Sousa's full concert band will give one of their incomparable concerts. Reduced rates will be made on all railroads and trains run so as to allow everyone to attend. This attraction will draw the largest audience that have ever attended a theater in Crookston.

Wednesday March 29th, that great actor, Lewis Morrison, will present his version of "Faust." Mr. Morrison ranks as the greatest Mephisto who has ever appeared on the stage, and his visit to Crookston will give all an opportunity to see this great play presented by the actor who has made it famous.

—If you are troubled with rheumatism take the Imperial Blood and Rheumatism cure. It will positively cure all diseases arising from impure blood, and is sold under an absolute guarantee to benefit or money refunded. Call for free sample at the New Drug Store.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

Regular Correspondent.

Senator Mitchell of Wis. made a decided hit in his speech against the Hull army bill, by declaring that he wished to confine any increase in the army to the "United States proper and not extend it to the U. S. improper." He objected most decidedly to having U. S. soldiers engaged in shooting our ideas into an alien people.

The Alger Cuban junket, planning to start as soon as Congress adjourns, upon which a number of Senators and Representatives will be carried as guests, will go upon a government vessel and the bills will be paid with public money. It is estimated that the cost of the trip will not be less than $200,000 but the amount may by leased if the trip has to be shortened to enable the Senators and Representatives to attend an extra session of Congress, as now seems likely. It is said that Mr. McKinley has been advised to break up the Alger junket.

Admiral Schley having in his statement of his record during the war with Spain made it plain that the jumping of Sampson over his head was the result of the dirty work, in which Sampson was the ring-leader, there is a strong sentiment in Congress to compel the administration to do justice to Schley. One result of that sentiment is the introduction of a bill by Representative Lentz, of Ohio, providing that Dewey shall be made a full Admiral and Schley a Vice Admiral. There should be no doubt of the passage of the bill, but, unfortunatly, there is.

Every member of the committee named by Senator Jones to advise with the Democratic National Committee during the preparation for next year's campaign, is not only a staunch advocate of the renomination of Col. Bryan, but also of the readoption of the Chicago platform. Senator Jones will be chairman of the advisory committee and his associates will be the following gentlemen: Senator White, of Cal.; D. J. Campau, of Mich, of N. Y., the widely known Buffalo editor; Ex-Governor Altgeld, of Ill., and Ex-Congressman George Fred Williams, of Mass. The headquarters of the advisory committee will be in Washington.

The democrats in Congress stand behind the plain words of Senator Cockrell against the bill for a large standing army, which McKinley is trying to jam through the Senate, and they believe that the rank and file of the party stand behind them. Mr. Cockrell said: "We will give you every man and every officer that is necessary, but we are not willing at this short session to fasten upon the country a standing army of 100,000 men and to increase the expenses of the people by millions of dollars. We are offering everything that is fair and just and right. We have no disposition or intention to force an extra session of Congress, and we say to you that every bill that legitimately and of right ought to be a law can be passed at this session. If an extra session is called, it will be solely for the purpose of fastening upon the people a standing army of 100,000 men." That is a fair and straight-forward statement of the attitude of the democratic Senators who are being accused of holding up the government. They are not holding up the government, except in the sense of helping it to be true to the people. The war taxes are likely to have to be paid until a democratic Congress and administration is elected, and there will either have to be more taxes or bonds, unless the extravagant policy of the administration can be headed off or curtailed.

The Best Cough Remedy on Earth.

Warner's White Wine of Tar Syrup, Consumption Cure, cures a cold in 24 hours if taken in time and does not stop a cough in ONE MINUTE by paralyzing the throat, but it cures the disease and leaves the throat and lungs healthy and strong. 25 and 50 cts. For sale by the Imperial Drug Co., St. Hilaire.

A Good Formula.

Girls of a marriageable age do not like to tell how old they are but you can find out by following the subjoined instructions, the lady doing the figuring. Tell her to put down the number of the month in which she was born, then multiply it by two, then to add, five, then to multiply it by fifty, then to add her age, then to subtract 365, then to add 115, then tell her to tell you the amount she has left. The two figures to the right will tell you her age, and the remainder, the month of her birth. For example the amount is 822; she is 22 years old and was born the eight month (August). Try it.

"Durability is Better Than Show."

The wealth of the multi-millionaires is not equal to good health. Riches without health are a curse, and yet the rich, the middle classes and the poor alike have, in Hood's Sarsaparilla, a valuable assistant in getting and maintaining perfect health. It never disappoints.

Scrofula—"Three years ago our son, now eleven, had a serious case of scrofula and erysipelas with dreadful sores, discharging and itching constantly. He could not walk. Several physicians did not help for sixteen months. Three months' treatment with Hood's Sarsaparilla made him perfectly well. We are glad to tell others of it." Mrs. David Laird, Ottawa, Kansas.

Nausea—"Vomiting spells, dizziness and prostration troubled me for years. Had neuralgia, grew weak and could not sleep. My age was against me, but Hood's Sarsaparilla cured me thoroughly. My weight increased from 125 to 143 pounds. I am the mother of nine children. Never felt so well and strong since I was married as I do now." Mrs. M. A. Waters, 1529 33d St., Washington, D. C.

Eczema—"We had to tie the bands of our two year old son on account of eczema on face and limbs. No medicine even helped until we used Hood's Sarsaparilla, which soon cured." Mrs. A. Van Wyck, 123 Montgomery Street, Paterson, N. J.

Society Women

and, in fact, nearly all women who undergo a nervous strain, are compelled to regretfully watch the growing pallor of their cheeks, the coming wrinkles and thinness that become more distressing every day.

Every woman knows that ill-health is a fatal enemy to beauty and that good health gives to the plainest face an enduring attractiveness. Pure blood and strong nerves—these are the secret of health and beauty.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People build up and purify the blood and strengthen the nerves. To the young girl they are invaluable, to the mother they are a necessity, to the woman approaching fifty they are the best remedy that science has devised for this crisis of her life.

Mrs. Jacob Weaver, of Bushnell, Ill., is fifty-six years old. She says: "I suffered for five or six years with the trouble that comes to women at this time of life. I was much weakened, was unable, much of the time, to do my own work, and suffered beyond my power to describe. I was downhearted and melancholy. Nothing seemed to do me any good. Then I made up my mind to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People.

I bought the first box in March, 1897, and was benefited from the start. A box and a half cured me completely, and I am now rugged and strong." —Bushnell (Ill.) Record.

The genuine package always bears the full name. At all druggists or sent postpaid on receipt of price 50¢ per box by the Dr. Williams Medicine Co, Schenectady, N.Y.

The Third Party.

He came lurching around a corner and staggered up against a pedestrian waiting for his car, and after getting settled down upon his feet again he said:

"Be careful of yourself, old fellow, and not get run over."

"But you are the one to be careful," was the reply. "You've got a jag on, while I'm perfectly sober."

"That's something I never could understand," observed the inebriated, after a pause. "The man who is tight always thinks it is the sober man who is drunk, and vice versa. Tell you what I honestly believe."

"Well?"

"We are both sober, and that lamp post over there has got a $3 drunk on!" —Pittsburg Post.

Way Up In It.

"I don't want to hurry you, Mr. Slowgo," she sweetly explained, as she met his questioning look, "but the fact is it is almost time for ma to come home from the club. And I just want to say this: If ma says, 'I move we adjourn,' don't you attempt to lay it on the table or to raise a point of order, or any thing else that's foolish, because you might as well understand, right here and now, that ma's simply a bowling Jim-dandy when it comes to rules of parliamentary procedure, and don't you hesitate to recollect it!"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

She Didn't Make Them.

"The pies that mother used to—"

She fixed him with a flashing eye and he wisely paused.

"Your father," she said, "had an income sufficient to enable your mother to keep a first-class cook."

Still, he was a resourceful man, and not easily disconcerted.

"The pies that mother used to have made never did amount to much, anyway," he asserted; but there was a lack of enthusiasm in his manner and tone that told her she had won a great victory.—Chicago Post.

"And I tell you that the invocation of mnemonics is extra-datal. And that sensorial continuity is the datum. The juxtaposition of mnemonic survival with sensorial impression discloses no warrant for sequential and co-existential discrimination!"

Ground for Complaint.

Small Politician—I want to talk to you, sir, about a remark you made about me in your paper. You called me a political jobber, sir!

Editor—Yes; it was a very annoying typographical error, and I promptly fired the compositor.

Small Politician—Ah! Then you didn't mean to call me a "jobber?"

Editor—No, sir. I wrote "robber," very distinctly.—Catholic Standard.

AUSTRALIAN GIRL.

LIKE HER NATAL LAND SHE IS VERY ATTRACTIVE.

Fragile Almost to Thinness—Hot-House Delicacy of Her Complexion Gives Her an Exotic Look—Mighty Easily Becomes Angular and Sallow.

She is a root-type by herself, the Australian girl; and, since I make bold at the outset to say that she is of mine own land and mine own people, I may be forgiven for also stating frankly that the type has for me an especial attraction, says the Girls' Realm. It is not that the Australian girl is cleverer or prettier or physically or mentally superior to girls of other countries. It is not that she differs in marked degree from her cousins in Great Britain—it is hardly to be expected that she should—but she differs enough to show that she is Australian, and not English; that she has an individuality of her own and that her virtues and her faults are those of the offshoot and not of the stem. Like her natal land, she has no immensely distinctive characteristics. In temperament she has not the splendid luxuriance of some daughters of the south nor the heroic hardihood of children of the north. In physique she cannot be called robust; she is almost always slender, not to say thin, and her thinness might easily become angularity, her fragile bloom sallowness. I have heard her described, in antithetical terms, as "a weedy specimen, all nerves and indigestion—an example of the bad effect of drinking tea with meat;" and, again, as "a languorous tropic flower—all grace and charm." Neither of the descriptions expresses her. The first was given by a doctor, old and crabbed; the second by a poet, young and susceptible.

I could not help thinking of the "tropic flower" simile as I looked down the saloon table on board a P. and O. steamer in Melbourne harbor, where a number of young Australian women were seated. They had come to greet, or "send off," friends, or because they knew the captain and officers, and a dinner on a P. and O. boat offered pleasing variety to their ordinary amusements. Having got together and outnumbering the matrons they did somehow give the suggestion of an animated border of un-English flowers. The blossom effect might have been partly due to their petal-like muslin frilleries and gay summer hats, but was more so to the hothouse delicacy of their complexions and that exotic look one soon associates with the Australian girl. The Australian girl would not, however, approve of being called un-English and exotic. It is her dearest ambition to be considered English—which is, perhaps, why she does not show to such advantage in a conventional setting as does the American girl, who dares to stand out from her setting and be her real American self. The Australian girl would be a more definite intellectual and social fact if she had the same courage and a true respect for her claims to consideration as an Australian pure and simple. Though decidedly adaptive and clever in making the most of her materials, she cannot compare with the American girl in sturdy originality and the capacity to shine under difficult social circumstances.

Thus the Australian girl appears to best advantage in her particular environment—most so the girl of the bush. Here she seems a natural product of the peculiar features which make Australia unlike all other countries. It is the bush girl who represents emphatically the Australian type, and in her bush home she is more or less the same always, whether that be a rough station out west or the luxurious homestead of a rich Victorian squatter. Even far in the wilds the bush girl has a knack of refinement. That is one of the characteristics of the Australian girl. She may be poorly educated; she may run almost wild, hobnob with blacks, ride after cattle and scrub, cook and clean as many a girl has to do out west; but, withal, the squatter's daughter is almost always a natural little gentlewoman.

Ornamentation by Crystals.

Clear crystal is the newest material for ornamentation. The velvet coats, so much a part of the reception toilet of the winter, are furnished with huge disks of clear glass, and the silk waist has many rows of these tiny buttons, round, plain or facetted. Umbrella handles are also made of it, for the quality of breakableness seems to be a desirable quality in the umbrella handle of today, viewed from the standpoint of the manufacturer, necessitating, as it does, frequent renewals. Other toilet articles—brush backs, clocks, combs and a dozen and one trifles—are made of the clear substance, which has superseded the rhinestone in popularity, and possesses the merit of being itself not an imitation, which has always militated against the success of the rhinestone with the most fastidious.

To Build a Salt Palace.

Utah's latest bid for tourist travel is to be a salt palace, a novelty in which that state will claim a monopoly. It is to be located in Salt Lake City, where an organization has been formed to push the project. Experiments have proved that the product of the Great Salt Lake can be used to produce beautiful, not to say gorgeous effects. Building bricks, fanciful shapes, and copings for pillars have been formed, the salt retaining its luster; while blankets, wire screens and planks have been thickly coated with the saline crystals, thus showing how a fireproof and waterproof material may be made for the structure. To further add to the effect, the crystals can receive almost any shade of color, and this process being easy and inexpensive, very elaborate colored effects are promised.

Some Facts About Honey.

Honey is the only sweet that may be eaten in any quantities and for a long time without interfering with the action of any of the vital organs. Its food value is twice that of pork, pound for pound, and it has been noticed that persistent honey-eaters are not nearly so liable to diseases of the respiratory organs as those who do not use it at all. It is calculated that the entire honey product of sixty bees during their entire working life will not aggregate more than one pound of honey, an amount that a man with a good appetite would eat in a day without thinking much about it. Beeswax is almost entirely indigestible, and while it does no harm when swallowed, never enters into the food value of the honey which it contains.

A Record Diving Feat.

The greatest diving feat ever achieved was in moving the cargo of the ship Cape Horn, wrecked off the coast of South America, when a diver named Hooper made seven descents to a depth of over 200 feet, remaining at one time forty-two minutes under the water. An authority states that the greatest depth to which a man has been known to descend does not exceed 220 feet, which is equivalent to a pressure of 88 1-2 pounds to the square inch.

COMFORTING WORDS TO WOMEN.

The Surgical Chair and its Tortures May be Avoided by Women Who Heed Mrs. Pinkham's Advice.

Woman's modesty is natural; it is charming.

To many women a full statement of their troubles to a male physician is almost impossible. The whole truth may be told to Mrs. Pinkham because she is a woman, and her advice is freely offered to all women sufferers.

Mrs. O. E. Ladd, of 19th and N Sts., Galveston, Texas, whose letter is printed below, was completely discouraged when she first wrote to Mrs. Pinkham. Here is what she says:

"Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—I wrote to you some time ago, telling you of my ills, but now I write to thank you for the good your remedies have done me. I have used two bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, three packages of Sanative Wash, and one box of Liver Pills, and to-day I call myself a well woman. I suffered with backache, constant headache, whites, sick stomach, no appetite, could not sleep, and was very nervous. At time of menstruation was in terrible pain. Your medicine is worth its weight in gold. I never can say enough in praise of it. I have recommended it to many friends. If only all suffering women would try it, there would be more happy homes and healthy women. I thank you for the change your medicine has made in me."

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Mrs. Pinkham's advice, have saved thousands of women from hospital operations.

The lives of women are hard; whether at home with a ceaseless round of domestic duties or working at some regular employment, their daily tasks make constant war on health. If all women understood themselves fully and knew how exactly and soothingly Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound acts on the female organs, there would be less suffering.

Why Ships Are Not Struck by Lightning.

The reason why ships are not struck by lightning is attributed to the general use which is now made of wire rope for rigging purposes, as well as to the fact that the hulls of ships are usually constructed of iron or steel. Thus the whole ship forms an excellent and continuous conductor, by means of which the electricity is led away into the ocean before it has time to do any seri-

The recent order of the Baltimore & Ohio Rail Road for five thousand steel coal cars to be built by the Pressed Steel company and the Carnegie company, brings the total purchases of the Receivers of the Baltimore & Ohio Rail Road up to 30,304 since March 1st, 1896. The locomotive purchases during that time have been 216, of which about 20 are still to be delivered. The company has also purchased five postal cars, ten express cars, ten combination cars, and six dining cars.

ALABASTINE

WHAT ALABASTINE IS.

Alabastine is the original and only durable wall coating on the market. It is entirely different from all kalsomine preparations. Alabastine is made ready for use in white or twelve beautiful tints by the addition of cold water. It is put up in dry powdered form, in five-pound packages, with full directions on every package. It takes the place of scaling kalsomines, wall paper and paint for walls. Alabastine can be used on plaster, brick, wood or canvas, and a child can brush it on.

WHAT "KALSOMINES" ARE.

Kalsomines are cheap and temporary preparations, manufactured from whiting, chalks, clays, etc. They are stuck on the walls with decaying animal glue. Alabastine is not a kalsomine. It is a rock-base cement, which sets, and it hardens with age. It can be re-coated and re-decorated without having to wash and scrape off its old coats. Beware of a large four-pound package of light kalsomine, sold to dealers for four pounds and offered to customers as a five-pound package.

CHURCHES AND SCHOOLHOUSES.

The interior walls of churches, schoolhouses and all public halls should never be coated with anything but the durable and pure Alabastine. So evident has this fact become, that hundreds of tons are used annually for this work. The genuine Alabastine does not rub or scale off. It is cleanly during the long period of its usefulness. Every owner of a building should use it. Ask your paint dealer or druggist for card of tints, and write for free copy of our paper, Alabastine Era, to Alabastine Co., Grand Rapids, Mich.

REJECT THE "JUST AS GOOD."

The dealer who tells you that he can sell you the "same thing" as Alabastine or "something just as good," either is not posted or is trying to deceive you. In offering something he has bought cheap and is trying to sell on Alabastine's demands, he may not realize the danger to himself as well as to you. Beware of all new substitutes. Dealers risk a suit for damages by selling and consumers by using an infringement. Alabastine Co. own the right to make and sell wall coatings adapted to mix with cold water.

LIND'S BONUS SHOT

GOES ECHOING ROUND THE STATE IN ITS LESSONS AGAINST SPECIAL PRIVILEGES.

The Republican Legislative Dilemma. Little Prospect of Anything Being Done—Work of Coarse and Brutal Lobby—Key Notes, State and National, From Washington's Natal Day—United Reform Forces—Reform Press Prospering—Cost of State Grain Inspection Under the Republican Regime—Examiner Pope's Scoop Net—The Veterans' Effective Plea For Soldiers' Home—Slow Work in the Legislature—Note and Comment of Another Week.

Reform Press Bureau.

Governor Lind's beet sugar veto, by its final defeat in the senate, has marked one of the most important events of the state of recent years. While at the first there were some disposed to question the wisdom of applying the principle at issue in that case, as time goes by and the situation is examined it is clear that no other course would have accomplished the end in view, to-wit, a limitation or repeal of the obnoxious legislation. In the first place, the session is well advanced, lessening the prospect of any action at all. Next, in the temper developed, it is doubtful whether the Republicans would not have resented a message on the subject, as they did the application of the veto. But in any event the effect has been to emphasize the reform, and under circumstances, and to an extent, that no other course would have accomplished.

It is rare that ever such a situation is seen as confronted the Republican senate when it reached consideration of the veto. The bounty law was their own creature. What Republican entered a protest against its passage in 1895? Face to face with their wretched offspring, they had yet been under the necessity of pledges to themselves and each other, that they would "do something" when they had got this "child" out of their sight. The senators' faces were a study. Rebuked, chagrined, disturbed, they one and all showed it all too plainly. How they wriggled, twisted, writhed. Think of the humiliation of senators rising in their places and declaring that they voted against the veto, but with the understanding that the law under which the veto power was exercised should be destroyed or radically changed. Old habitues of the state capitol do not recall so chilly a roll call as that in which the "grave and reverend" senators went on record in the case.

What will be the outcome? With all the promises, the most explicit that could be made, there is grave doubt of repeal or satisfactory amendment. The session is far spent. A coarse and brutal lobby, which abused the governor in the capitol corridors, questioning his motives, and impugning those of reform members, declares that it has both house and senate in hand to prevent any action. The warning of the veto killed the Pig Iron bonus bill in the house, but the lobby has since taken courage and as brutally as that of sugar declares that Pig Iron will win.

Apropos of the lobby, its old time grip on the Republican legislature is now becoming apparent. The chief is the railroad, which has been very insidious this session, although its organized corps, mostly details of conductors, familiar with the members from their use of free passes, has been installed from the opening of the session. They have in hand especially the defeat of increase of gross earnings tax. The beet sugar lobby has been conducted openly by ex-Senator August Theden, who was a member of the senate when the bill passed and himself then and now one of the parties interested. And so on to the end of the chapter.

Nobody has anything to say against this manner of securing or defeating legislation, but what would be said if Senator Meilicke should open a lobby for a bonus on wheat, Senator Buckman for one on logs, or Senator Greer for one on the law business? But excuse us. In Buckman's case, as a "protected" lumberman, he has a $2 a thousand bonus, the gift of Uncle Sam.

Governor Lind's outspoken declaration against a large and unnecessary standing army, was an incident of the observance of Washington's birthday of wide significance. The sentiment met with general approval of the united patriotic societies before whom his speech was delivered, and was singularly in accord with declarations at Washington, by the assembled national leaders on the same occasion. Contrast these statesmanlike and American sentiments with those uttered by Senator Davis and other representatives of the McKinley administration, whose program, so far as it can be learned, involves European alliances, Oriental entanglements, the destruction of a liberty-seeking people in the Philippines, in fact imperialism. But the bold stand taken at Washington has already brought a compromise limiting the army extension.

The "key-note" meeting of the reform forces at Washington on Washington's birthday emphasizes the timeliness of the Minnesota meetings of the week previous and their results of reaffirmation of principles, their renewed pledges of fealty to our national leader and the reform press organization effected. Minnesota is strictly in line, for not a step was taken at the Washington gathering which we had not taken here. Minnesota is in front rank, and it is easy to predict, will remain so for the conventions of 1900 now so near at hand. It cheered the hearts of our forces to know that our national leaders are as true to Bryan, to free coinage, to the battle against the trusts and the combines, and as solidly against the iniquity of imperialism as are the hosts in Minnesota. With Bailey speaking for the far South and Texas, with New York pledged, with New England promised and with the great central portions of the country solid for our great champion, our cause goes on with a power simply resistless. The indications are that no other name will be mentioned in the great conventions of 1900 for the candidate for president against McKinley but W. J. Bryan of Nebraska!

Among the probable reform successes is the restoration of the $20,000 annual appropriation for the Soldiers home. The G. A. R. emphasized the demand for this by calling on the legislature in a body, where the old soldiers had an opportunity for stating their case not often afforded. Fully 500 strong they marched into the house of representatives, followed by the W. R. C. more than 100 strong, filling every nook and corner of the assembly hall. With ex-Senator and Past Commander John Day Smith master of ceremonies, and stirring speeches by Past Commander and ex-Speaker S. R. Van Sant, Past Commander and ex-Lieutenant Governor A. Barto, Comrade Craven and others, the business for which the old vets came was thoroughly transacted. Had the legislature not been virtually "out of their seats" the feeling was that the lower house, at the close of the proceedings, would have passed the bill by unanimous and rising vote.

The most stirring incident of the day was the exchange of courtesies and addresses by Senator Smith, for the veterans, and Representative D. B. Winston of Hennepin, as a veteran of the Confederate service. Where under the blue sky of heaven could a like event happen, of deadly enemies on the field of battle, standing as brethren of one family in a restored country? And it occurred to more than one of the listeners to the interchanges of the day, that only the prostitution of sectionalism to base partisan purposes has heretofore kept the sections in any manner disunited. North and South have for many years really been united in fact.

The papers which in various ways try to discourage the reform press will have their trouble for their pains. One of the most foolish was the statement that there was lack of exchange of courtesies between Governor Lind and the Reform Press Association. Nothing was farther from the truth. At the hour when, a day before, it had been arranged for the meeting of the Governor and the association, Governor Lind found himself occupied with his veto of the beet sugar bounty, which he was obliged to finish, as the three-day limit in which the bill could be held was up that day. The meeting hour was postponed till later in the afternoon, and the editors themselves changed the program and went to the capital to congratulate the governor on his veto. Come again.

The Ada Herald has been doing some investigation of the cost of grain inspection, bearing on the efficiency of the department, with some surprising results. It appears that for the crop year ending Aug. 31, 1897, as compared with that of 1895, while the number of cars increased but 25 per cent, the cost of inspection increased 125 per cent. For the big crop years of 1891, 1895 and 1897 it seems that for the first, the inspection of 221,546 cars cost $132,428.22, the inspection of 230,805 cars for the '95 crop cost $174,808.24, while the inspection of 219,741 cars of the crop of 1897 cost $191,681.12. That is it cost $60,000 more to inspect over 1,000 less cars comparing the crops of 1891 and 1897! Besides, it appears that 120 inspectors were employed on the crop of 1891, against 160 last year. That is 120 men in 1891 handled 1,000 more cars than 160 men did in 1897. And yet there are some people who doubt that there is something rotten in the state next to Denmark!

In enlisting the defenders of the state school fund the independent mine owners have secured an agency for the desired end of reduction of ore rates which may accomplish something. When it comes squarely to issue between reduction of royalty or of rates the rates will have to go.

State Auditor Dunn announces that he will not be a candidate for governor nor any other office again, but that when his present time expires he will retire from the political arena. Now watch the scramble for the genial Robert's No. 12 footgear.

General Pope, public examiner, with a single dip of his examination net has brought up from several of the state institutions enough irregularities to keep the Republican apologists of Kenyon busy for several moons. Let the good work go on.

Visits to public institutions and other interruptions have made the legislative progress poor for the past week. Few important bills are appearing now, among new ones:

To provide for county hospitals.

Making oil inspector's a salaried office.

Regulation of sale of nursery stock.

State expense incurred in Leech Lake war.

To prohibit docking of horses.

The inspection of cattle and swine.

Aid for state training schools.

Arrearages for the state national guard.

Reduction of beet sugar bounty to ½ cent.

A farmer bounty of $1.00 per ton for same.

An eight-hour legal day for labor.

The manner in which the united opposition in congress is standing up for the people is highly gratifying. Standing for our platforms, opposing imperialism at every turn, sustaining the government in all lawful and proper moves, standing like a stone wall against the gold standard legislation wanted by the money power, they are making a good record with which to go to the country next year. THE REBELS SCATTERED

GUNBOAT POURS SHOT INTO THE ENEMY'S POSITION.

Natives Attempt to Reinforce the Enemy at Guadalupe and Are Repulsed—Gen. Wheaton's Outposts Catch Them at It—Gunboat Bennington Demolished the Battery at Malabon and Burned the Town—Enemy Preparing for an American Advance—Admiral Dewey Hoists the Flag of an Admiral and Is Saluted.

Manila, March 6.—A shore battery of the Filipinos fired upon the gunboat Bennington at Malabon. The Bennington returned the fire, demolishing the battery and burning the town.

At daylight Gen. Wheaton's outposts discovered a large body of natives attempting to cross the river for the purpose of reinforcing the enemy at Guadalupe, and a gunboat advanced under heavy fire and poured shot into the jungle on both sides of the river and shelled the enemy's position at Guadalupe, scattering the rebels. The enemy's loss was heavy. Private John T. Oiz, Battery C, Third artillery, was killed. On board the gunboat Privates William Wheeler of Company L and Louis Barrien of Company G, California regiment, were wounded. The enemy evidently is expecting an American advance north and is strengthening the trenches in front of Caloocan with barbed wire. The rebels in the village of San Jose fired on the United States gunboat Bennington and the warship shelled that place and other suburbs of Manila.

FLIES THE ADMIRAL'S FLAG.

Dewey's Emblem Saluted by Forts and Foreign Warships.

Manila, March 6.—Admiral George Dewey raised his flag as an admiral on board the Olympia Saturday morning and was saluted by the guns of the forts, of foreign warships, the British cruiser Narcissus and the German cruiser Kaiserin Augusta, and by the American ships in port.

TRANSPORT SENATOR IN PORT.

Six Companies of the Twenty-second Reach Manila.

Washington, March 6.—The war department has received the following cablegram announcing the arrival at Manila of six companies of reinforcements for the army in the Philippines: "The transport Senator just arrived; troops in good health; one casualty, accidental drowning. —Otis."

The senator carried Companies A, B, C, D, H and K, of the Twenty-second Infantry, and sailed from San Francisco on Feb. 1. The balance of this regiment is on the Ohio, which followed the Senator.

QUIET AT MANILA.

A Change for the Better Since the Arrival of Reinforcements.

Manila, March 6. — The transport Ohio has arrived. In the last two days there has been a very noticeable change for the better, probably due to the arrival of reinforcements for the American troops. Numerous people are seen on the streets and the amount of business transacted in the stores has marvelously increased. Outside the city there was desultory firing throughout yesterday, and at various points the sharpshooters were most annoying. At San Pedro Macati the rebels are very active, erecting intrenchments in front of the position occupied by the Washington troops although a two-gun battery of the Sixth artillery repeatedly shelled them.

The enemy are fully alive to the fact that Mausers have a much longer range than Springfields, and are constantly taking "pot shots" in comparative safety. The American soldiers dislike this passive resistance, and are eager for the excitement of an active campaign. Despite the heat the health of the men in the trenches has improved remarkably.

The steamer El Cano has arrived from Iloilo with advices that all is quiet there and that business is brisk. The natives in the interior are levying upon the supplies in the hands of the farmers and seriously interfering with the work upon the plantations.

REPATRIATION COMPLETE.

Last Ship Load of Spanish Soldiers Reaches Spain.

Valencia, March 6.—The French steamer Cheribon, with the last contingent of Spain's Cuban army, arrived here from Cienfuegos. She encountered a fearful gale in the Atlantic and had to run into the Azores for shelter and repairs. As she was several days overdue the anxiety was so intense that the families and friends of the troops spent the last three days and nights on the wharves looking seaward for its appearance.

Wages Increased.

Philadelphia, March 6.—The wages of all-day laborers in the tin plate plants of the Newcastle district have been advanced from 5 to 10 per cent. The advance will affect between 1,200 and 1,500 men. The Reese-Hammond Brick Manufacturing company has advanced the wages of about 250 employes from 5 to 20 per cent, and the Williamsport Nail company has made a 10 per cent advance.

Lost Both His Eyes.

Webster City, Iowa, March 6.—Harry Burton, the fourteen-year-old son of Engineer Burton, threw a piece of burning paper in a tin can partly filled with powder. The powder exploded putting out both his eyes.

University Burns to the Ground.

Cincinnati, March 6.—A special from Morgantown, W. Va., says: Fire was started by an explosion in Mechanical hall of the West Virginia university and burned the building to the ground. Loss, $52,000.

SCHLEY IS SENIOR.

He Will So Remain Unless Sampson's Charges Are Proven True.

Washington, March 6.—In view of the failure of the senate to confirm the nominations of Rear Admiral Schley and Rear Admiral Sampson for advancement for heroic action in battle, speculation is rife in naval circles as to the action which will be taken by the department. One thing is certain, Secretary Long will not submit to the president for transmission to the senate in December next nominations of these officers for advancement. Rear Admiral Schley will remain senior to Rear Admiral Sampson unless the department should establish the correctness of the reflections upon Rear Admiral Schley. Such an investigation is by no means an improbability. Naval officers are indignant at the action of the senate in holding up all other nominations for advancement as the result of the battle off Santiago.

IRELAND EXPLAINS.

Letter of Adhesion to the Papal Pastoral Is Not an Act of Submission.

New York, March 6.—A cable to the World from Rome says: Archbishop Ireland, who has returned from Florence, said:

"My letter of adhesion to the pope's epistle on Americanism is falsely described as an act of submission. This would imply guilt, whereas I repudiate the condemned doctrines. The pope's letter was meant chiefly to condemn the French perversion, falsely dubbed 'Americanism.' The papal document has rendered immense service to true Americanism, preventing the enemies of the church from further acting the part of the wolf in sheep's clothing. I intend to remain here some weeks."

NOW A REAR ADMIRAL.

Naval Constructor Hichborn Is Promoted.

Washington, March 6.—Chief Naval Constructor Hichborn became a rear admiral by virtue of the provision of the naval personnel bill relating to the bureau officers in the navy department. The admiral has been in the naval service forty-five years, having entered as an apprentice boy. He is sixty years old.

The Pope Improving.

Rome, March 6.—The pope, who was in excellent spirits on arising, desired the attendants to attend mass in his own room. The following bulletin was issued: "His holiness passed a quiet night, getting several hours' sleep. All the natural functions, the pulse and the temperature are normal. It was not been necessary to re-examine the wound."

Dreyfus Prostrated.

London, March 6.—The correspondent of the Telegraph at Cayenne, French Guiana, says: "In the course of a recent conversation Dreyfus declared that his return to France was imminent, but that for the past month he had received no news. I understand he is in a state of prostration that occasions great anxiety."

Husband Caused Her Death.

Torrington, Conn., March 6.—Mrs. Frederick Morton, who was assaulted by her husband at their home Wednesday morning, died from her injuries. Norton beat his wife on the face with a drum stick and struck her on the back of the head with a flat iron, fracturing her skull. He then committed suicide by shooting.

Plague at Bombay.

London, March 6.—The Bombay correspondent of the Morning Post says: "The bubonic plague is raging here with unparalleled severity. According to the official returns there were 937 deaths last week, but these quite underrate the mortality.

Bidding for the Fight.

Chicago, March 6.—Martin Julian said the owners of the Bergen Beach resort near New York have offered a purse of $40,000 for the Fitzsimmons-Jeffries bout, and that the fight would be given them unless something better turned up this week.

Wrecked by a Landslide.

Huntington, Pa., March 6.—The first section of a fast newspaper train was wrecked a mile east of this place by a landslide. Engineer Robert McCutcheon and Fireman Joseph Troce were instantly killed. The passengers were uninjured.

Acquitted of Murder.

Omaha, March 6 — A special from Tekemah, Neb., says Calvin Hiscox has been acquitted of the murder of Fred Sellers. The jury was out twenty-one hours. Hiscox's sister was acquitted of the same charge a year ago.

Desperado Captured.

London, March 6. — The Shanghai correspondent of the Daily Mail says that the leader of the rebels in the province of Anhoui, the notorious desperado Nui, has been captured, fifty-two of his body guards being killed.

Victims of the Storm.

Decatur, Ala., March 6.—A terrific storm of wind, hail and lightning struck this place, doing great damage and causing the loss of four lives.

Suicided While Insane.

Lac qui Parle, Minn., March 6. — Mrs George Gleddie of this place hung herself in her own house. She has been mildly insane for years.

Germany Wants the Carolines.

Madrid, March 6.—Germany is said to have renewed the negotiations for the purchase of the Caroline islands.

Venezuelan Rebels Defeated.

Caracas, Venez., March 6.—The government troops have defeated the revolutionists near Moro Cayes.

Committed Suicide.

Tyler, Tex., March 6.—The body of H. P. Ewing, a member of the Tyler Banking company, was found in the Tyler Bottling works. Near him was found an empty morphine bottle, indicating suicide. Deceased was under several indictments for violation of the state banking laws.

Killed by an Engine.

Keokuk, Iowa, March 6. — William Woods was run over by the Burlington switch engine and instantly killed. He was formerly a resident of Ames.

AN OUTBREAK AT SANTIAGO

THOSE WHO OUGHT TO KNOW SAY IT IS UNAVOIDABLE.

Between 2,000 and 3,000 Men Are Thrown Out of Employment by the Orders of Gen. Brooke Reducing Expenditures—All Improvements Are Brought to a Standstill—American Administration Openly Abused—Through It All Gen. Wood Retains His Popularity—New Orders Are Attributed to Envy of Gen. Wood's Successful Methods.

Santiago, Cuba, March 5.—Between 2,000 and 3,000 men have been suddenly thrown out of work in the province of Santiago, over 700 in the immediate neighborhood of this city. Although Gov. Gen. Brooke has wired $30,000 required for the February pay rolls, there is still a deficit of nearly $20,000, and the orders from Havana still hold good limiting the expenditures during the month of March for the entire province to $10,000. The effect of this order on Civil Gov. Castillo, Mayor Bacardi and other Cubans prominent in official circles is simply paralyzing.

Mayor Bacardi has cabled the governor general desiring to know what he is expected to do with such a large number of men suddenly thrown out of work.

"Though we are perfectly friendly to the Americans," he said in the dispatch, "the present policy seems suicidal, for public improvements are greatly needed and the men also are greatly in need of work."

Civil Gov. Castillo wonders what will happen. He cannot see that the men suddenly thrown out of employment have any alternative to becoming bandits, and he regrets exceedingly the damaging blow the province has received. Owing to his position he may not comment upon the orders of his superiors, but he considers the prospects very gloomy.

Worse Than the Spanish.

Groups of men on street corners, in clubs and in cafes, openly abuse the American administration, saying that the Spanish was infinitely preferable, as in the worst times during peace, considerably more men were engaged on public works under the old regime than are now so employed. Probably the full effects of the new policy will not be visible before Monday, as the men will receive their pay to-day, and, although Gen. Wood does not expect disturbances, Cubans who affect to be cognizant with the whole situation, say it will be quite impossible to avoid an outbreak of some sort. In spite of all the antagonism displayed toward the American authorities at Havana, Gen. Wood remains popular among Cubans of all classes, who declare Havana instructions an "outrage upon his administration."

In the speech made at the San Carlos club the sentiment was that the new orders ought to be attributed to envy of Gen. Wood's successful methods in this department, and so far as the province of Santiago is concerned the Cubans say that if a vote were taken to-morrow they would select him for the highest position in the island in preference even to any Cuban. The new regulations have brought to a standstill all the improvements, including the dredging of the harbor, roadmaking and sewerage.

UNEARTHED BY GOMEZ.

He Finds That the List of Cuban Officers Has Been Padded.

Havana, March 5.—In making up the roster of the Cuban army Gen. Gomez has discovered that many holding the rank of officers never served in any military capacity and that the provisional government during the war issued commissions by the hundreds to persons whose work was solely of a civil character. At least 1,500 of the officers now claiming pay never served during the war. He has also discovered that since July the divisional commanders have made promotions by the wholesale, almost every officer having been advanced in grade since the end of the war. Gen. Gomez will subject the list to a severe scrutiny and weeding out, with the result that the number in the army will be greatly reduced.

BAILEY STEPS DOWN.

No Longer a Candidate for Democratic Leadership in Congress.

Washington, March 5.—Representative Bailey of Texas announced that he would not be a candidate for the Democratic leadership in the next congress. He stated to an Associated Press reporter that his decision was irrevocable, although his friends appealed to him not to make the statement. The refusal of the Democrats yesterday to follow his lead in the demand for the consideration of the resolution declaring Gen. Wheeler and the members who accepted army commissions had thereby vacated their seats, induced him to make this announcement. Mr. Bailey will probably make a statement later.

Won by Fallieres.

Paris, March 5.—The senate elected M. Fallieres president of that body by a vote of 151 against 85 votes cast for M. Constans.

A Serious Charge.

Chicago, March 5. — Ralph L. Ostrander, who heretofore has enjoyed an excellent reputation, was indicted on a charge of receiving stolen property. Letters in his possession showed that he has been acting as a "fence."

Kipling Continues to Improve.

New York, March 5.—Rudyard Kipling continues to improve rapidly. One bulletin was issued, as follows: "Mr. Kipling has continued to improve so that his temperature and pulse are but little above normal."

FLOODS WORK HAVOC.

Charleston, W. Va., Almost Entirely Under Water.

Charleston, W. Va., March 6.—The Kanawha valley was visited by one of the worst floods in local history. After seven days of heavy rain the Kanawha Elk river has covered almost the entire valley. Charleston is almost entirely under water. Four feet surrounded the state capitol. The mayor and leading citizens have opened a relief stand and are distributing provisions and clothing among the sufferers. Considerable damage has been caused to the coal property along the Kanawha river. The Winfred coal tipple, dry docks and a dozen barges were swept away. The Black Cat coal tipple was destroyed. Last night the water works, both gas plants and electric light plant were shut down and the city was in darkness. The indications are that the flood has reached its height.

CALL FOR RELIEF.

Passengers in a Snow-bound Train Run Out of Provisions.

Cheyenne, Wyo., March 6.—An urgent message for relief was received from the Cheyenne & Northern train in the snow at Iron Mountain. The provisions are reduced to a few beans and a little coffee with forty-two passengers to be fed. They have been snowed in for six days and the conditions are desperate, as the adjacent ranches are about out of provisions. The men who walked in from the imprisoned train report the cuts drifted full of hard snow between here and Iron Mountain, and the only way of getting through was by shoveling. A relief train with a supply of provisions and one hundred shovelers was sent out.

TERRIBLE CYCLONE.

Three Persons Killed, Twelve Injured and Much Property Destroyed.

Athens, Tenn., March 6.—A terrific cyclone passed over a portion of Madisonville and Monroe counties with disastrous results. Early in the evening a strong wind arose and several hours later a cyclone about seventy yards wide struck a portion of Madisonville, killing three persons, wounding ten or twelve others and completely destroying twelve or fifteen houses and several barns.

STRUCK A BRIDGE.

Large Steamer Lurking in the River Near Clarksfield, Tenn.

Clarksville, Tenn., March 6. — The steamer H. H. Buttorf struck the Louisville & Nashville bridge at this place. As the boat is across the river from the city nothing is known as to the fate of the passengers. It is believed the boat has sunk but that many if not all the passengers escaped.

Gen. Brooke's Statement.

Havana, March 6. — Gov. Gen. Brooke, referring to the complaints made at Santiago that a large number of laborers have been thrown out of work by an apparent reduction in the financial allotment to Santiago province, said that the funds furnished the several provinces by the authorities at Havana have in all respect been in accordance with the requisitions of the provinces.

Mrs. Stevenson Dead.

Peoria, Ill., March 6—A telephone message to the Herald from Bloomington, Ill., says Mrs. Sarah Stevenson, mother of the former vice president, Adlai E. Stevenson, died after an illness of several weeks. She was ninety years of age.

Chilean Progress.

Santiago, Chile, March 6.—President Errazuriz is to visit the northern provinces of Chile in order to give impulse to the mining industry and promote the building of new roads. London exchange is rising. Outlook favorable.

Sentenced for Swindling.

Cleveland, Ohio, March 6. — Daniel Jones, alias J. M. Wallace, who swindled the Citizens' Savings and Loan association out of $5,00 on a forged mortgage, has been sentenced to ten years in the penitentiary.

BLOWN INTO ETERNITY

A TERRIBLE CATASTROPHE IN SOUTHERN FRANCE.

Naval Powder Magazine Explodes, Killing All the Soldiers on Duty and a Number of Inhabitants of the Surrounding District—Number of the Dead Is Not Known, but the Injured Will Reach Over One Hundred—Country Within a Radius of Two Miles Swept Almost Bare.

Toulon, March 6.—The naval powder magazine of La Goubran between La Seine and Toulon, in Southern France, exploded yesterday morning. All of the soldiers on duty at the magazine were killed and a number of inhabitants of the surrounding district, the buildings in which were razed, also fell victims. Forty corpses have already been recovered. The cause of the explosion is not known.

Fifty-two kilogrammes of black powder exploded. It looks as though a volcanic eruption had occurred, the country being swept almost bare within a radius of two miles, houses destroyed, trees overturned and distorted, fields devastated and covered with stones and black dust. Some of the stones are enormous. One weighing fifty kilogrammes fell in the suburb of Pondelas. Signs of the explosion are evident in all the suburbs of Toulon and in the city. Even at St. Jean de Var, five miles distant, windows were shattered and doors battered in. Later reports show that of the seven sentries four were killed outright and the others severely injured, the corporal being literally scalped and the scalp overhanging his face like a veil. A large number of soldiers are now employed in clearing away the debris. It is impossible to ascertain accurately the number of killed, but it is believed that no fewer than 100 were injured. Although it was a clear night the explosion was so terrific as to produce a light rainfall.

Fortunately the neighboring magazines escaped. It is now believed the explosion originated in chemical decomposition in smokeless powder. There is no suggestion of foul play. The whole city is in mourning. Both the government and municipal authorities are forwarding relief funds. M. Lockroy, minister of marine, has telegraphed 10,000 francs. Four of the injured have succumbed to their injuries. It is believed that fifteen are still buried in the debris.

SWORN IN.

New Spanish Cabinet Assumes Its Duties—Senor Silvela's Purposes.

Madrid, March 6.—The new cabinet took the oath of office Saturday. The ministry is composed as follows:

Premier and minister of foreign affairs, Senor Silvela; minister of interior, Senor Dato; minister of finance, Marquis Villa Verde; minister of justice, Senor Duran; minister of war, Gen. Polavieja; minister of public affairs and of the colonies, Marquis Pidal; minister of marine, Admiral Camara.

It is expected that Gen. Martinez de Campos will become president of the senate. There was some excitement in the cafes when the formation of the Silvela cabinet was announced. Those who are in the immediate surrounding of Senor Silvela say his sole idea is to regenerate the country. He holds that the queen regent can ratify the treaty of peace with the United States without a vote of the chambers and that, therefore, their dissolution need not defer the ratification.

THE CUBAN ARMY.

Gen. Gomez Furnishes Information to Gen. Brooke.

Havana, March 6.—Gen. Gomez sent Gov. Gen. Brooke, by the hand of Inspector General Robau, to the Cuban army, a statement of the number of men in the army. It is understood that the total reached [illegible] 32,000 privates, 10,000 non-commissioned officers and the rest commissioned officers from major generals to sub-lieutenants. About 10,000 privates enlisted in 1895, 18,000 in 1896, 5,000 in 1897 and 8,000 in 1898. In the case of about 2,000 the enlistment date is not known. This general statement is sufficient for the basis of payments, and a more detailed list from the various commanders, with the names and whereabouts of the soldiers is necessary. These, it is understood, Gen. Gomez will supply. Gen. Brooke has received a telegram from Washington stating that paymasters with the $3,000,000 will arrive here next week.

ITALY TURNED DOWN.

China Refuses Italy's Demand for a Lease of San Mun Bay.

Peking, March 6.—The tsung li yamun has returned to the Italian charge d'affaires his dispatch containing the demand of the Italian government for a lease of San Mun bay on the same conditions that Germany holds Kiao Chau bay, accompanying it with a letter declaring that the Chinese government is unable to grant the request.

London, March 6.—The Rome correspondent of the Daily Mail says: "The Italian warships have landed marines at San Mun bay, thus virtually taking possession. Italy will pay yearly 180,000 for the concession. The tsung li yamun wishes to reduce the lease to fifty years."

Explosion of Benzine.

St. Petersburg, March 6—A carboy of benzine exploded in a third-class railway carriage on the line to Dwinsk, south of here. The carriage was burned, six women and a man were killed and sixteen others were injured.

Silvela for Economy.

Madrid, March 6—The cabinet council decided to suppress the pensions of all former ministers. Senor Silvela says the government has begun at the top in setting an example of economy.

Posing as a Hercules.

"I could tell you a story about 'strong men photography.' Some of the minor limbs of the fraternity depend on the cunning of the camera for advertisement." So said a photographer.

"One fellow, who visits country fairs and casual shows, goes through tricks of a kind wonderful to the unscientific mind. They are merely tricks after all, and his strength is a catch. He depends on his photos for advertisement. In posing he folds his arms tightly, dilates the muscles of his neck and lines his veins with prussian blue. His picture gives you Hercules in his power of majesty. In private he is a well developed man, without any swagger of sinew or strength.

"Professional strong men are as clever at make up as a society actress. The latter lavishes attention on face and neck, while breast and ribs, muscles and throat occupy the former for hours ere the camera confronts them. A few lines about the body add pounds to the weight of a strong man (in the picture): a studied pose imparts additional formidability.

A Nice Little Hint For George.

A business man has a daughter and also a confidential clerk, and the confidential clerk has for some time been attentive to the daughter, but he has not—or had not a month ago—sufficient courage to come to the point, though the young woman, goodness knows, has never done anything to scare him off, for he is a first class fellow in every respect. The other evening he was making a call and about 9 o'clock her father came in.

"Ah, George," he said, "how about that deal we were talking about this afternoon? Did you see the party?"

"Yes, sir," replied George, "and I expected to see you this evening and tell you about it."

"My dear," said the father, turning to his daughter, "will you retire for a few minutes? George wants to speak business for awhile."

The daughter rose up, but hesitated.

"Why do I have to go?" she asked doubtfully.

"Because, dear," smiled the father, "you are not interested. Why do you want to stay?"

She blushed and started out.

"Because, papa," she twittered, "I'd rather like to hear George talk business just once."

Then George got red and the father looked at them both significantly, and the girl fled.—London Answers.

Praise For the Bishop.

The bishop of—never mind where—being a newcomer and somewhat troubled with a neglected diocese, thought to inspire his clergy to take occasional services during the week by periodically visiting out of the way parishes and taking one himself.

On one of these occasions, having formed quite a good congregation and having been moved to much eloquence in his sermon, he felt a little not unnatural desire to know if he had made any impression on the usually unimpressionable yokels, and put some leading questions to the old clerk, who was helping him to unrobe in the vestry. "Well, I hope they've been pleased with yer," said the old man patronizingly, "and I'm sure we tak it werry kind o' yer worship to come down and preach to us, but, yer knaw, a worser one would ha' done for the likes o' we, if so be," he added with becoming humility, "one could ha' bin found."—Living Church.

Martello Towers In England.

Whatever may have been the defensive value of martello towers a century ago it has entirely evaporated now. There are a good many of them on the coasts of Essex, Suffolk, Kent and Sussex. These massive round towers, some 40 feet high, were regarded as and very likely were splendid defenses at the time they were erected, but they have long been used only for coastguard purposes. Their name is derived from the Italian coast towers which were erected as a protection against pirates. Warning that a suspicious craft was in sight was given by striking a bell with a martello or hammer. It was the powerful defense made in 1794 by Le Tellier at the tower of Mortella with only 38 men against a simultaneous sea and land attack, led by Lord Hood and Major General Dundas, which brought them into favor in this country. It was thought that they would be a splendid defense against "Boney."—London Chronicle.

Ancient Glassmaking.

When the council of ten ruled Venice, they issued a decree regarding the art of glassmaking. It runs: "If a workman carry his art beyond the limits of his country to the detriment of the republic, he shall be desired to return. If he disobey, his nearest relatives shall be imprisoned. If, in spite of their imprisonment, he remain obstinate in his wish to live abroad, an emissary shall be told off to kill him."

French Humor.

Madame (to her chambermaid)—Justine, the doorbell rung.

"Is madame sure it wasn't the clock?"

"Couldn't be—it is only quarter of 10."

"Yes, but madame knows the clock is fast!"—Echo de Paris.

The little Japs are about as free from the vice of drunkenness as any people in the world. In fact, it is the rarest thing in the world to see an inebriated subject of the mikado. The native drink, "saki," is used about as tea in this country, and it is but little more intoxicating.

A Haunted House.

"The haunted house in this case," said the old college man, "was occupied by a very estimable and intelligent gentleman. He did not believe in ghosts, but two nights had made him look old and careworn, and there were certainly loud, strange and startling noises in his attic. They would continue right up to the time that some one entered the haunted room, but the opening of the door was the signal for a most oppressive silence.

"Half a dozen of us college fellows asked permission to investigate, and it was gladly granted. We waited till we heard the noise, and I assure you that there was plenty of it. It continued until we had crept up stairs, but ceased when we entered the attic. We waited there without result till big Hicks of the football team, carried out a plan. We closed the slide to the dark lantern, slammed the door noisily, as though leaving, and then settled down to wait. Presently the noise began. We flashed the light in its direction, and there was a jug rolling back and forth rapidly, the handle striking the floor with a loud thud.

"'Must be spirits in that jug,' laughed big Hicks, but his laugh was a tremolo. 'We'll see,' and he let go with one of his famous kicks that shattered the uncanny vessel. Then every fellow let out a yell and jumped as though trying to knock a hole in the roof. A rat had crawled into the jug and had been frantically trying to get out."—Detroit Free Press.

The Platform Woman.

"The platform woman never has been a credit to, but ever a blot upon, American womanhood. I make this emphatic statement from a personal knowledge of the homes which these women leave behind when they go to their meetings," writes Edward Bok in The Ladies' Home Journal.

"I have seen the rooms of their homes left in wild disorder; I have seen their servants sitting in idleness with work on every hand to do; I have seen the children neglected and left to their own devices; I have heard husbands speak in derision of the motives of their wives. No woman in a happy American home can ever afford to listen to these parasites of her sex.

"Fortunately, the platform woman's influence is steadily on the wane. She was never a power. She was never even picturesque. Her worst injury was wrought upon certain weak women who for the time she deluded. But even with them she was soon regarded with wonder rather than with interest, with suspicion rather than with confidence. The disappearance of the platform woman is a case of a blot being blotted out."

Successive Steps In Success.

The ambitious amateur went to see the experienced theatrical manager.

"I want to be a star actress," she said. "What do you advise me to do?"

"H'm—have you ever had an affair of the heart?" he asked.

"Well," she simpered, "two or three young fellows are breaking their hearts about me."

"That won't quite do. Go and get your own heart broken," he said, "and then come again."

She had heard something like this before, and she went away with her chin in the air.

* * * * * * *

A year later, however, she returned.

"Well," she said, choking down a sob, "I have come back to you—heartbroken. I married one of those young men. He treated me shamefully and has deserted me!"

"Ah, that is something like," said the manager, rubbing his hands together. "We are getting on. Only one thing more is necessary, my dear young woman—get your divorce, and then we shall want you."—Chicago Tribune.

Landmarks.

Every town has a liar or two, a smart Aleck, some pretty girls, more loafers than it needs, a woman or two that tattles, an old fogy that the town would be better off without, men who stand on the street corners and make remarks about the women, a man who laughs an idiotic laugh every time he says anything, scores of men with the caboose of their trousers worn smooth as glass and men who can tell you about the weather and how to run other people's business, but who have made a dismal failure of their own.—Northport News.

Wanted Something Quicker.

Some few years ago I issued a policy on the life of a man who was far from being a model husband. I called for the premium every week and rarely got it without a grumble from the wife. The last time I called she said:

"I ain't going to pay you any more. There's Mrs. Smith only had her old man in M.'s society three months, and he's dead and she's got the money. I'm going to put my old man in that, so you needn't call again."—Liverpool Mercury.

The Time It Worked.

Little Johnny always wanted to sleep in the morning and finally Papa McSwatters wondered how he would ever get the boy up betimes. At last he struck upon the following:

"Johnny, the furnace fire is all fixed, and the ashes have been carried out and the leaves raked. Breakfast is almost over and only three pancakes left."

An Antique Weapon.

"You are an iceberg!" exclaimed her elderly but well preserved adorer, pale with anger and mortification. "A dozen Cupids, with a hundred arrows each, could never find a vulnerable place in your flinty heart!"

"No: if they used an old beau to shoot with, Mr. Wellup," coldly replied the young and beautiful Miss Flyppe.—Chicago Tribune.

A FEW DATES.

During the month of March there will be a number of first-class attractions at the Grand Opera House, Crookston.

On March 9th, "On the Suwanee River" will be presented. This is a Southern melodrama, one of the best on the road, and the company is a first-class one.

Tuesday, March 14th, is the date of "A Midnight Bell," that great Hoyt farce. The company is a good one, and the production will compare very favorably with "A Contented Woman" and "A Parlor Match", which gave such general satisfaction.

On March 22nd, John Griffith, well known through his former visits in "Faust," will be seen in a romantic drama. Mr. Griffith is a great favorite throughout this section of the country.

Tuesday afternoon, March 28th, Sousa's full concert band will give one of their incomparable concerts. Reduced rates will be made on all railroads and trains run so as to allow everyone to attend. This attraction will draw the largest audience that have ever attended a theater in Crookston.

Wednesday March 29th, that great actor, Lewis Morrison, will present his version of "Faust." Mr. Morrison ranks as the greatest Mephisto who has ever appeared on the stage, and his visit to Crookston will give all an opportunity to see this great play presented by the actor who has made it famous.

BABY'S PHOTOGRAPH.

An Example of What the Man of the Camera Endures.

A young photographer, when asked what sort of subjects presented the greatest difficulties to him, replied without a moment's hesitation, "Babies."

"For instance," he continued, "I took photographs of a little 10-months-old fellow the other day in six different positions. Yesterday I sent proofs to his mother, and today she brought them in.

"'I'm sorry,' she said, without any obvious grief, 'but none of these negatives will do.'

"'Not one of the six?' I inquired, though I was prepared for what was to follow.

"'No,' she said. 'I'm afraid not. You see, I like this one very well, though, of course, it doesn't do baby justice, but his Aunt Ellen says it's an absolute caricature of the dear little fellow. The one she likes I don't care for at all, and his papa says he should never know for whom it was intended, it looks so cross, and baby is such a sunshiny child.

"'The one he likes, this smiling one, I shouldn't consider for a moment, for it makes baby's mouth look so much larger than it really is.

"'His grandmother chose that one, but as Cousin Fanny said, there's a very queer look to the child's eyes in it—very queer! However, she likes that one where he's almost crying, that sober one. You ought to have heard baby's grandfather when she said she liked it.

"'He really decided the thing, for what he said seemed so sensible. He asked me why I didn't have some more taken and see if there wouldn't be at least one that would really look like baby. Now, when can he sit again? It's hard for me to spare the time, but you see it is the only thing to be done!'"—Glasgow Herald.

STROKES OF A RAZOR.

How Many Do You Suppose It Takes to Shave a Man?

"Now that you've finished shaving me, how many strokes of the razor did it require?" asked the man in the chair, as he straightened up to have his hair combed.

"That's pretty hard to tell," said the barber.

"Of course it is. But you've been in the business how long?"

"Fifteen years."

"You ought to know by this time about how many strokes of the razor it requires to shave a man, supposing that you go over his face a second time."

"I might make a guess at it."

"All right. What's your guess? Remember that I have a hard beard."

"Well, I should say about 125."

"You're a good guesser, I don't think. Some time ago I got into the habit of counting the strokes of a razor every time I was being shaved. It's a good way to employ your mind. In shaving me you just made 733 strokes with the razor."

"I wouldn't have believed it."

"No man believes it until he takes the trouble to count. In my case I never knew the number to fall below 500, and it has gone more than 800 at times. I call it a stroke every time the razor is brought forward and then drawn back. I should judge that there are no fewer than 500 strokes in a first class shave. You remember that, and probably you can win a few bets."—New York World.

DEFENDING THE NATION.

Catarrh is our country's enemy. Lagrippe, lung troubles and other diseases of the mucous membrane take hold of our people and fatal results follow with alarming frequency. All of these troubles are catarrh, and cannot exist where the membranes are clean and healthy.

Mrs. Lou Davis, Fayetteville, Tenn., tells in her letter how Dr. Hartman's great catarrh remedy, Pe-ru-na, cured her of la grippe and serious lung complication. She says:

"I was afflicted with a disease commonly known as la grippe two years ago; the doctors said I had consumption. I got one bottle of Pe-ru-na and the second night my cough stopped. I took several bottles, and I will say that I believe I would be a dead woman now if it had not been for Pe-ru-na."

Mary M. Pruitt, Palpa, Mo., says:
Pe-ru-na Medicine Co., Columbus, O.

"I had la grippe for three successive years; it seemed to get a tighter hold on me each year. It seemed I was in the jaws of death. What had helped me before would not do me any good. I saw an advertisement of Pe-ru-na. I procured two bottles and it cured me. I have not felt any symptom since. You may use this in any way you please."

THISTLE DOWNS.

Lighter and whiter than a flying flake
Of winter snows through wan air winnowing,
The thistle-downs their sudden journeys take
O'er meadows wide in vagrant wandering;
No more shall they to earth reluctant cling
As a moss lined and slowly sinking stone
Left lying in an outer waste alone.
Beside the edge of some remote morass,
But high they toss above the fields new mown,
Like disembodied spirits of the grass.

The drowsy atmosphere in lines opaque
Leans to the sun, that fast is gathering
The last faint dews, his fiery thirst to slake,
While swallows dip, on ever restless wing,
Across a dusty road the robins sing,
And bumblebees upon the clover drone,
While thistle downs in airy spaces lone
Along the skies in happy freedom pass,
Voyaging afar to mystic climes unknown,
Like disembodied spirits of the grass.

—Ernest McGaffey.

TRICKS OF A MIND READER.

"Speaking of telegraphy," said a gentleman who takes an interest in occult studies, "reminds of an incident which created a great stir some years ago, but is now about forgotten. A New York lawyer, who claimed to be able to project thought, had a committee of skeptics select a playing card at random and then wired a friend in San Francisco asking him to think of a card and telegraph back what one came into his mind. The card selected was the five of spades and the reply was correct. All the parties were well known, and the experiment caused an immense sensation.

"The newspapers discussed it by the column, and it was exploited as a positive demonstration of thought transference, but as a matter of fact the whole thing was merely a clever trick. I had it afterward explained to me by one of the people on the inside. It had been prearranged with the San Francisco man that the cue to the right card was to be the wording of the message. The denomination was indicated by the number of words in the second sentence. If, for instance, it was an ace, the sentence would be only one word, 'Answer;' if a deuce it would be 'Answer immediately,' and so on.

"As it happened to be a five the message ran, 'Telegraph reply quickly as possible.' The suit of the card was revealed by the signature. Signing the name in full meant hearts, the first only meant clubs, the last name meant spades, and the initials meant diamonds. The system was beautifully simple, and the message seemed on its face perfectly innocent. It was carefully examined to find a hidden word, but baffled the investigators. As far as I know, the truth about the affair has never been printed."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Diplomacy.

One day a gentleman was holding a conversation with his wife in the presence of their 5-year-old son, and among other things mentioned was "diplomacy."

"Pa," said the youngster when a break in the conversation allowed him to interfere, "what does diplomacy mean?"

"Diplomacy, my son," said the father, "is this—doing exactly the right thing at exactly the right moment."

"Then I suppose I used diplomacy when I got out of the pantry yesterday, dad, did I?"

"What do you mean?" was the reply.

"Why," said the son, "I got into the back yard with that meat pie just at the moment ma caught the cat in the pantry and told you to drown her for thieving."—Pearson's Weekly.

He Wasn't Proud.

The London Telegraph says that while a certain bishop was waiting for a train at Waterloo station, a porter, who often sees him into a compartment and shuts the door, in order that his lordship may be alone, came up to him in a state of excitement and asked:

"Your reverence, do you see that gentleman standing in the doorway over there?"

"Yes," answered the bishop.

"Do you know who it is?" continued the porter.

"No," said his lordship.

The railway man then whispered: "It's the 'Coffee Cooler,' your reverence. Oh, he ain't proud! He'll shake hands with your reverence if you like."

The "Coffee Cooler" is a noted colored prizefighter.

Ingrowing Nails.

To prevent an ingrowing nail a strip of cotton should be worked between the nail and the flesh, left large enough to cover the entire nail. A piece of cotton is then twisted into a long roll and placed on the other side of the nail groove over the sound skin. The space between is filled with lead nitrate, heaped up, and the larger piece of cotton folded over it, with more cotton outside, held in place with a moist bandage. This dressing is renewed every day, and in two or three the exuberance is reduced until the edge of the nail can be seen, and cotton inserted between it and the flesh beneath, when the nitrate can be discontinued.

Mormonism.

The good wife looked at her mending basket and sighed. If she hadn't seen them there she wouldn't have believed her husband could have worn holes in so many pairs of socks in so short a time.

"There are occasions," she said at last, "when I am almost ready to believe that it would be a good thing for a man to be a Mormon."

Then she went at the job she would willingly have shared with a few other wives.—Chicago Post.

JACK AND HIS WILL.

A Special Act of the British Parliament Arranges That Matter.

Jack has the proud distinction of having had an act of parliament passed for the express purpose of deciding the way in which he must make his will, so that while all other Britons are lumped together in this matter under the wills act of 1838 sailors' testamentary documents are made under the naval wills act of 1866. The most important proviso of this act is that all wills made by sailors or marines must be witnessed and attested by the chaplain or some other officer if they are actually made on board ship, and this is somewhat curious.

If a sailor likes to make his will on shore, any one can witness it for him, but on board ship the case is different. Needless to say they almost all to a man choose the latter course as they know that things will be straighter for bearing an officer's signature. If, however, supposing that the vessel was in action and a man was to be struck down who had not previously made a will, if he had to do so before he died, even if it were not attested by an officer, the admiralty has full power to act on the merits of the case and to dispense with that or any other formality that it was impossible to comply with. Another thing—a sailor shares with a soldier the privilege of when on active service being the only man who can dispense with a written will and make a verbal one.

In former times any one could make his will verbally if he so desired, but this, as may be supposed, opened the door to no end of fraud, and it was consequently repealed in the 1838 act, except in the case mentioned above. On the night before a ship or a regiment goes into action there is no more pathetic sight than to see the men, young and old, laboriously writing their wills in case tomorrow should be their last day in this world, and what with witnessing wills and making them on the forms issued by the authorities for those who cannot write—and this class has now almost entirely disappeared from both the navy and the army—the officers have a very busy time.—London Golden Penny.

THE FIREMAN'S LIFE.

He Cannot Always Finish His Toilet Before a Mirror.

"Of course everything about the fire department interests me always," said Mr. Glumby, "but there is one little thing in particular that I've seen I suppose hundreds of times that appeals to me more every time I see it, and that is the firemen getting into their coats as they go along. You see this among the men on trucks and on hose wagons. The men on the engine have to use their hands to hold on.

"It's a simple enough thing in general to see a man putting on his coat, but here he isn't standing up in his room before a mirror, but he's jumped out of bed and taken his coat under his arm and slid down a sliding pole and is completing his dressing sitting on top of a rack of ladders going through the street like mad, drawn by three great horses at one end, with a man to steer at the other end steering this outfit with a wheel. This sight never loses its novelty or its interest. You may see the same thing on a hose wagon.

"But what set me to speaking about this now was seeing a man on a fire patrol wagon, sitting on one of their long seats, facing outward, pulling up the tops of his high boots—red wagon, galloping horses, banging gong, men in fire hats and rubber coats, the whole blooming outfit on the dead jump and this man sitting on the side seat reaching down for the tops of those boots and straightening up with each one as he got it and swaying back a little as he pulled it up into place, just as a man would sit on the edge of his bed at home to put on his stockings and slippers, and just as cool and comfortable."—New York Sun.

Geography For Women.

The introduction to Pinkerton's "Modern Atlas," published in 1815, has a reference to "the sex" which ought to be very interesting to our modern college girl. The learned author says:

Geography is a study so universally instructive and pleasing that it has for nearly a century been taught even to females, whose pursuits are foreign from serious researches. In the trivial conversation of the social circle, in the daily avidity of the occurrences of the times, pregnant indeed above all others with rapid and important changes that affect the very existence of states and empires, geography has become a habitual resource to the elegant female, as well as the profound philosopher.

Stopping a Big Steamship.

To stop the Etruria, whose displacement is 9,680 tons, horsepower [illegible] and speed 20.18 knots an hour, 2 minutes and 47 seconds are required, and during the process of stopping the ship will forge ahead 2,464 feet, or nearly half a mile. The United States cruiser Columbia, with a displacement of 7,350 tons, 17,991 horsepower and a speed of 22.8 knots an hour, can be stopped in 2 minutes and 15 seconds and within a space of 2,147 feet. In each case the vessel is supposed to be going at full speed and the stoppage produced by reversing the action of the propeller.

Dumas' Quick Wit.

Dumas found a man asleep in the Theatre Francais during the playing of a piece by his friend Sonmet. "You see that?" said he, "that's your work."

Next evening a Dumas comedy was put on. The two friends looked in again and found a sleeper.

"You see, dear Dumas," said Sonmet, "your works can produce sleep."

"Do you refer to that man?" replied Dumas. "Why, that's the man who was there last night. He's not awake yet!"—San Francisco News Letter.

DYED DIAMONDS.

Yellow Stones Can Be Made to Look Like Gems of the First Water.

"There are tricks in every trade" has grown to be an adage, and this proverb holds especially good with regard to the jewelry trade, which for "ways that are dark and tricks that are vain" fairly takes the palm for roguery.

Although a great deal of capital, time and labor have been devoted to counterfeiting the diamond, very little success has been obtained from a fraudulent point of view, as the diamond possesses extraordinary qualities of hardness and brilliancy, with which no imitation, up to now, can attempt to vie. "Paste" of all kinds can be tested by means of a sharp steel file, which scratches its surface.

A method of successful imposition with diamonds has, however, been discovered, and the originator of this swindle actually defrauded the pawnbrokers of London alone in one year of upward of $500,000.

The general public, as well as jewelers, are aware that diamonds of a yellowish tinge, or, as they are called in the trade, "straws," are worth very little. Large stones of this color, even when weighing from 10 to 100 carats, are quite common and will only fetch in the market from $5 to $20 per carat, the value, of course, increasing in ratio with weight. Diamonds of the same weight, if of the first water, or perfectly colorless, would be worth from five to ten times as much.

The methods of the individual referred to were as follows: He purchased a quantity of "yellow" stones, and then by a simple yet ingenious process succeeded in imparting to them an evanescent purity of color. This was done by procuring two ordinary glasses, a kettle of boiling water and a threepenny packet of mauve dye.

The "yellow" diamond, which was perhaps set in a gold ring or pin, was merely dipped in the glass containing the dye, and then in clean boiling water half a dozen times, and allowed to dry, when it presented all the appearance, even to the eye of an expert, of a magnificent stone of the first water.

The next move was to place the ring on the finger, and the well dressed diamond dyer would sally forth, enter a pawnbroker's and pledge the ring for at least three times its worth. Within 12 hours, however, the effects of the dye would have disappeared, and the pawn broker could only wonder what on earth was wrong with his eyes when he advanced so much money on such a yellow stone.

Fortunately, owing to the magnitude of this individual's operations, the fraud was discovered, and now pawnbrokers, if they are suspicious of a diamond's color, immerse it in nitric acid, which destroys any dye that may be present without in any way injuring the stone.—London Mail.

GOOD MONEY FOR BAD NEWS

Paid to Learn That Sight Would Leave Him in Six Months.

Somehow it made me feel bad, this happening that I am about to relate. I was in the office of an oculist, one of the leading men in his profession in Pittsburg. A big, strong and healthy looking man entered. His appearance indicated that he had many years of life before him. He was well dressed, keenly intelligent and of pleasant countenance.

"Doctor," he said, "my eyes have been troubling me, and I would like you to make an examination of them and treat them."

After a few preliminary questions the doctor told him to strip himself to the waist. He took off his clothes and stood there, a magnificent specimen of manhood. The doctor examined him, paying particular attention to his back, for a reason of which I know nothing. Having finished, he said:

"Put on your clothes. I can do nothing for you. Your sight may last six months, but no longer. Treatment will do no good. Blindness is sure to come."

"What's the matter, doctor?" he asked quietly, with a faint tremor in his voice.

The doctor told him in technical language and then explained that the trouble came from the wasting of a nerve leading from the spine.

"What's your bill, doctor?" asked the man when he got his clothes on.

"Five dollars," replied the doctor.

He paid it and left the office without another word. In the fullness of life he walked out into the blessed light of day, doomed within six months to darkness until death. It was an incident to the doctor; to me it was a tragedy.—Pittsburg News.

Irving Didn't Read.

Sir Henry Irving appeared at the Theater Royal, Edinburgh, in 1857, and two years later he went to Linlithgow to give a reading there. He was delighted to see his name in big letters on the posters on arriving in the town. He went to the hall, but there was no crowd there—in fact, the caretaker had not arrived, having forgotten all about the reading. Irving went in search of him, and things were got ready; 8:30 o'clock arrived, but no one came to the hall—not even a small boy. In recalling the incident Sir Henry was wont to say, "I never slept better than I did that night."

Its Natural Effect.

"How many of these sheep got out of here?" asked the angry farmer.

"I don't know," replied the new hired man, rubbing his eyes. "After I'd watched five or six of 'em jump over the fence I seemed to lose the count. That always puts me to sleep."—Chicago Tribune.

Of No Avail.

"Prisoner," said the court, "have you anything to say for yourself?"

"What's the use?" replied the culprit; "you guys wouldn't believe me."—Philadelphia North American.

MANY SECRET MINES.

ENGLAND'S COAST STUDDED WITH THESE DEFENSES.

Their Locality, Approaches and Firing Points Are Mysteries That Foreign Spies Have Often Tried, but Always in Vain, to Solve.

England has the most formidable navy in the world, but she does not rely upon it alone in the event of war to prevent a foreign force from landing upon her shores. London Tit-Bits, in an article on the secret coast defenses of Great Britain, says:

In the event of war no alien army could approach our shores without imperiling its navy by encountering our explosive mines, scores of which surround our coasts at all places likely to be selected for attack by a foreign foe. The Thames is also carefully shielded by similar secret mines, one of these being in the vicinity of Blackwall. The precise locality of these mines is, however, for obvious reasons, kept a dark and inscrutable mystery, and the approaches to them are so cleverly constructed and concealed that no one save an expert would suspect their real character.

An innocent looking cellar at the basement of a certain tradesman's shop is the entrance to one important mine, but even the tradesman himself is not aware that the government rents his cellar, nor does he ever surmise the true nature of the operations carried on therein. The mines are equipped with explosives of the most potent kind and admirably connected with the secret chambers on shore by means of electric wires.

Each mine is controlled by a button, over which are printed particulars relating to the location and character of the mine. This button is placed in the well of the secret chamber and covered by a double door, securely locked, the outer door so closely resembling the wall of the chamber that no one but those in the secret could detect its presence. The chambers are double locked and approached by passages protected in a similar manner.

Every lock and key is specially made for the government and is unlike any other. Only a few of the very highest officials are allowed to use these keys, and they are solemnly sworn to preserve their secret rigidly. No persons apart from those especially empowered may inspect or visit any of the secret chambers at any time except by express written permit personally procured from a certain high official. This is exceedingly difficult to obtain, and in fact is rarely ever granted.

Prior to such a permit being issued the officials assure themselves that the possessor of the document bears a blameless character, is British born and has no ulterior reasons for preferring his request. This settled, he is sworn to secrecy in the most solemn manner, blindfolded and conducted by a circuitous route to the secret chamber, where he is permitted to use his eyes, but not his tongue, no questions being answered by the attending officials.

Strange stories have been told of attempts made by foreign spies to penetrate the privacy of these mysterious mines.

A young lieutenant in the navy, whose honorable character won the confidence of his superior officers some years since, was accorded the privilege of guarding one of these secret mines and intrusted with certain information concerning its character.

Soon after his appointment he became engaged to a charming young French lady of whom he was desperately enamored. By some inexplicable means his fiancee got to hear of his appointment, and by alternate threats and persuasion induced him to take her to see the secret mine under his care.

On the evening arranged, after extracting a solemn vow of secrecy from his ladylove and getting her to don the dress of a naval officer for the occasion, he was about to set out on his secret mission when, to his surprise and alarm, he and his companion were arrested by detectives. In some mysterious manner the authorities had been enlightened as to the proceedings on foot and were in time to stop them.

For "breach of regulations" the young lieutenant was subsequently court martialed and reduced, while his charming companion, who proved to be a spy in the employ of the French government, was conveyed back to her own country, with a caustic caution.

On another occasion a German gentleman contrived to locate the entrance to one of the secret chambers and actually hired a member of the Bill Sikes fraternity to aid him in negotiating the double locks one dark November night. But so splendidly fitted and fortified were these appliances both the visitors were doomed to disappointment. Returning from the rendezvous, both the plotter and his accomplice were arrested and imprisoned.

Worth Waiting For.

During a performance at at the Tynemouth Aquarium, a couple from Old Hartley were among the audience. When half time arrived, an attendant placed on the stage a board inscribed with the word "Interval."

"W'at's that, Geordie?" asked the wife. Geordie spelled the word.

"I-n, in; t-e-r, inter; v-a-l, interval."

"But w'at is't?"

"Ar divvent knaa, lass. The foaks is aall gannin oot; but we'll stop to see it!"—San Francisco Wave.

In 1666 the great fire in London burned over 436 acres, destroying at least $55,000,000 worth of property. In 1872 the Boston fire burned over 60 acres, at a loss of $1,000,000 an acre. If the same fire occurred today, it would cost, at the very lowest estimate, $100,000,000. In 1893 the loss on the 2¼ acres burned over was over $350,000,000.

POPULAR PROVERBS

SOME THAT ARE FAIRLY BRIMFUL OF ABSURDITY.

Maxims Often Quoted and at Times Advanced as Argument Which Have Neither Wit Nor Wisdom to Commend Them—Contradictory Sayings.

There is a mistaken notion abroad, says a writer in London Tit-Bits, that proverbs are epitomes of wisdom, the concentrated experience of generations, and that to quote one of them in a discussion is to advance an unanswerable argument. And yet what is there to recommend many of them beyond their jingle? Take our familiar friend:

Early to Bed and Early to Rise, Makes a Man Healthy, Wealthy and Wise.—Obviously, the main idea was to find a word to rhyme with "rise," and "wise" was the unfortunate word chosen. And now, trustful little boys are persuaded to go to bed at unreasonably early hours in the hope of becoming a sort of Sandow-Rothschild-Solomon, though we all know milkmen and market gardeners who get up at 5 a. m. and are neither rich nor clever, and members of parliament who go to bed late and are, if not clever, at least not poor and infirm. Since the invention of gas and electric light this ridiculous old proverb has outlived its original modicum of truth, and proves we must not venerate proverbs on account of their hoary antiquity.

The Early Bird Catches the Worm.—The mistake made here is that it assumes we are all birds. But some of us are worms. If we were not, what would become of the birds? And, therefore, while the birds do well to be early, let the worms be late—the later the better.

The Pitcher That Goes Oft to the Well Is Broken at Last.—Note, it does not say "is broken first," but "is broken at last." Of course, every pitcher, whether it goes to the well or stays on the shelf, is broken at last, and the only result of this absurd proverb is to encourage lazy folk to do as little work as possible and unnecessarily keep out of harm's way.

If You Want a Thing Well Done, Do It Yourself.—There's shocking bad advice with which to start a youth on life's journey. If he wants a button well sewed on, he's to do it himself; if he wants his hair well cut, he's to cut it himself. He must mend his own chairs, shoe his own nag, darn his own socks. In short, from buying a horse to blacking his boots, he must do it himself. Poor fellow!

A Contented Mind Is a Continual Feast.—Can any one say what that means? Does it mean that the owner continually feasts on his contented mind or that the contented mind is continually feasting? Probably the latter, as we sometimes hear that "a hungry man's an angry man," and we all know that a satisfied appetite is the source of contentment. Hence it is not the contented mind which makes the feast, as the silly proverb implies, but the continual feast which produces the contented mind.

There's No Rule Without an Exception.—This is not only a proverb; it is also a rule. But obviously there is no exception to this rule, because if there were a rule with an exception this proverb would be untrue. But the proverb is a rule which has no exception, which, as Mr. Euclid would say, is absurd. Which was to be shown.

Where Ignorance Is Bliss, 'Tis Folly to Be Wise.—For oracular stupidity this proverb may be classed with the one about the pitcher. Granting it true, the difficulty is to know where ignorance is bliss and of course the proverb gives no assistance where it is most needed. Most people quote it as "ignorance is bliss." In their blissful ignorance, but if a proverb gives rise to error it is not only absurd; it is also dangerous. When people say—

A Little Learning Is a Dangerous Thing—They make that a reason not for learning more, but for learning less.

Love Me, Love My Dog.—If I go a-courting, and my ladylove bids me love her scented, dyspeptic poodle, which is not necessary to her health and comfort, must I not much more love her glass eye and false teeth and hair, which are? Yet common sense revolts at the notion, and I therefore assume that a proverb which, logically treated, makes such unreasonable demands on my affections is wrong and absurd.

Seeing Is Believing.—How can any reflecting person repeat these words? For very often we believe we see what really we do not. If a conjurer were to take this proverb as his motto, every one would see its absurdity. A straight stick half submerged in water looks crooked. Fortunately, another proverb says, "Trust not to appearances." And this bring us to the exquisite absurdity of popular proverbs which run in contradictory pairs and support both sides of an argument. Thus one proverb says, "Look before you leap;" another, "Who hesitates is lost." Sometimes we hear that "Second thoughts are best;" at other times that "Delays are dangerous." The desperate man relies on "Nothing venture, nothing have;" the cautious man on "Never venture out of your depth till you can swim." The impatient matrimonial candidate believes that "Happy's the wooing that's not long a-doing;" the tardy one that one may "Marry in haste and repent at leisure." And so on ad infinitum. "Absence makes the heart grow fonder"—"Out of sight, out of mind." "It's never too late to mend"—"A fool at 40 will never be wise." "Too many cooks spoil the broth"—"There's safety in numbers" and "Two heads are better than one."

Therefore, let us examine our proverbial coinage before we pass it into the moral currency.

PEOPLE WHO GAMBLE.

Chinese and Italians Especially Addicted to Games of Chance.

Of all the nations of the earth who gamble [illegible] do it more or less—the Chinese [illegible] in an easy first. Superstition and the gambling mania go in double harness, and while the mandarins idly hesitate to, decide what should be done about Wei-Hai-Wei and Talien-Wan the humbler Celestials gamble for dear life to pass the time away. "The Chinese play night and day," says a traveler, "till they have lost all they are worth, and then they usually go and hang themselves," from which it would appear that the yellow danger is not so formidable after all.

The Chinese laborers in the United States squander their earnings in a game called "white pigeon's ticket." White, by the way, is the unlucky color for the gamer and the lucky one for the keeper of the gaming house. These gentry keep orange peel in a box, believing that it will bring them luck.

The Italians are no less superstitious, and they gamble persistently, the poor people especially, in the government lotteries. Everything has a number; a cat, a dog, a gondola, and the "Libro dei Sogni"—the lotto player's oracle—will tell you what the number is and the rules for interpreting the appearances in dreams. Visitors to Venice, which has always been a stronghold of gambling, may have seen the declaration of the winning figures from the Campanile of St. Mark's—the silent, eager crowd gathered in the square and the group of officials gathered round the boy with the bandaged eyes who draws the numbers from the cage.

There is a story told in Venice of a madman who hailed a gondolier from the window of the madhouse on the island to tell him the numbers he had dreamed. The man put his money on them and won, and from that day to this the gondoliers go near the window as they pass in the hope that the madman will call again. The story is true.—London Chronicle.

VORACIOUS LITTLE ROBINS.

Each Required Fourteen Yards of Angleworms Every Day.

A would be philanthropist relates his experiences trying to play mother to a nest of little robins, which had by some accident been deprived of their rightful mother's care. He diligently set to work digging angleworms, and supposed that he was fulfilling his whole duty, when one of the poor little songsters died. Upon examination of the body, which was reduced to skin and bone, the foster parent came to the conclusion that it must have died of starvation.

Deeply grieved at his shortcoming, he redoubled his efforts, determined to at least save the other two. It was not long, however, before a second one died, evidently of the same malady. The good man then resolved that, whatever the third one died of, it should not be starvation, and took off his coat and went to work in earnest. He kept on with the angleworm diet until he found that his one little bird was consuming from 14 to 18 yards of angleworms a day. This was too much for his patience, and he proceeded to substitute the more easily managed diet of bread and milk and other delicacies, which were, however, not nearly so much to Miss Robin's taste.

Wanting to discover whether he had been catering to a family of abnormal appetites, our friend took to watching the methods of a real mother bird and found that she fed her young every two minutes. He then consulted the learned books upon birds and discovered that 14 yards of worms a day, with meals every two minutes, is the average rate of feeding fledgelings. He has therefore decided that he does not care to take up raising birds by hand as a business.—Boston Transcript.

He Got the Ad.

"You're not on that horrid paper, are you," cried the girl who speaks her mind, "though I did once meet a reporter from it who was rather nice? He came to see about getting an advertisement— What! Not a reporter? Why, I thought he was. Well, anyway I had lost a dog, and he said he had heard of it and wanted to know if I didn't want to advertise in his paper for it. I told him I didn't believe I liked his old paper, and he said he didn't think much of it himself, but he thought it was pretty apt to reach the class of people who stole dogs. And so since he was so polite about it I thought I might as well advertise in it. But I didn't get the dog."—New York Commercial Advertiser.

Show Your Best Qualities.

Honesty does not require us to hang our oil paintings faced to the wall in order that our friends may see that they are made on coarse canvas. It is right to appear always at our best. Give the world your brightest thoughts, your most courteous speech, the outcome of your kindest impulses and purest motives, no matter if you are conscious that these things are above your ordinary level. Why try to Oppose Nature? Go to a land where nature backs your every effort and prosperity is not dependent upon a single rainfall. Go where prosperity is permanent.
PORT ARTHUR
the Southern and Seaport terminus, is the best place in the United States to-day to invest or to go into business. The railroad now running through trains between Kansas City and Port Arthur, will be running over its own tracks the entire distance by September 1.
[illegible] you will agree a large city must be built at Port Arthur, nearest seaport to Kansas City by [illegible] miles.
Cut this out and mail to address below and receive the illustrated pamphlets.

DELINQUENT
—OF—
RED LAKE COUNTY, MINN

State of Minnesota, County of Red Lake—ss.
District Court, Fourteenth Judicial District.

THE STATE OF MINNESOTA, to all persons, companies or corporations who have or claim any estate, right, title or interest in, or lien upon, any of the several pieces or parcels of land in the list hereto attached described:

The list of taxes and penalties on real property for the county of Red Lake, remaining delinquent on the first Monday in January, 1899, has been filed in the office of the clerk of the District Court of the County of Red Lake, of which that hereto attached is a copy. Therefore you, and each of you, are hereby required to file in the office of said clerk, on or before the twentieth day of March, 1899, your answer in writing, setting forth any objection or defense you may have to the taxes, or any part thereof, upon any piece or parcel of land described in said list, in, to or on which you have or claim any estate, right, title, interest, claim or lien, and in default thereof judgment will be entered against such piece or parcel of land for the taxes on said list appearing against it, and for all penalties, interest and cost. (Signed) Joseph Perrault,
SEAL. Clerk of Dist. Court, Red Lake Co.

STATE OF MINNESOTA, COUNTY OF Red Lake—ss.
I, Adam Zeh, Auditor of said county do hereby certify the foregoing copy of the list of Real Estate taxes, delinquent on the first Monday in January, A. D. 1899, hereto attached was this day received from the clerk of the District Court in and for said County of Red Lake.
Witness my hand and official seal this 8th day of February A. D. 1899.
—Adam Zeh,
(SEAL) Auditor of Red Lake County, Minn.

Clerk of the District Court of Red Lake County, Minn.

HARD TO EXPLAIN

If This Had Occurred Anywhere Else Than Grand Forks, There Might be Grave Doubts About It.

If this were published anywhere else than in Grand Forks, that is, if the statement given out below went the rounds of the press, readers in Buffalo or New Orleans would not believe it. In the very nature of things men and women will not believe that a simple pill will do so much for suffering humanity when the subject is in a serious condition. When it has that effect, when the party is a living witness, perhaps a neighbor at least, Grand Forks people cannot deny it—particularly so when investigation is courted. Now ask Mr. Benjamin G. Davis of 216 S. Third street, in the employ of the Grand Forks Foundry, and see if the following is not his experience with and opinion of Doan's Kidney Pills. He says:

"For a long time my whole renal system was weak, particularly the kidneys. I wrenched my back taking off a shoe in the spring of 1898, had to quit work was laid up like a lame man, could not get out of bed in the usual way, and naturally longed for something to bring me relief. Just about this time I chanced to read notices about Doan's Kidney Pills, and although I could hardly walk I managed to get down to Trepanier & Co.'s drug store and procured a box. It was a great, yet welcome surprise to me, the quickness with which they put me back on my feet. Fuller particulars I will be pleased to give anyone interested. In the meantime I advise all my friends and acquaintances in Grand Forks if they suffer from over excited or inactive kidneys to procure Doan's Kidney Pills, take a thorough course of the treatment and the results will follow."

Doan's Kidney Pills, for sale by all dealers, price 50 cents. Mailed by Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y. Sole agents for the United States. Remember the name Doan's and take no other.

The ATLANTIC MONTHLY

NO American agency of public information and intellectual guidance has done higher service in this most momentous period of national transition and opening of a new world epoch than THE ATLANTIC MONTHLY. In its point of view and treatment of events of the first national importance, it has stepped into the vacant place of a political review of clear insight, high purpose, wide knowledge, and bold conviction. It is doing for America some part of the work the serious political reviews always have done for Britain, and which it is the often baffled aim of the "Deux Mondes" to do for France. The time has now come for wide public attention to the illuminating discussion of which it is the medium.—From the New York Commercial Advertiser, Nov. 29, 1898.

The announcements for 1899 are of a variety, interest, and value greater than ever before. Upon receipt of ten cents a sample copy of THE ATLANTIC MONTHLY will be sent, together with an illustrated prospectus for the coming year.

THE ROAD.

Pray, whither leads the road, fair heart?
Say, whither leads the road?
Across a rill, around a hill,
Beside a dell where rivers start,
Where bending nut trees shed their load.
Oh, thither leads the road, dear heart,
Oh, thither leads the road!

What matter where the road may lead,
So thou and I together go.
Companionship is all our need,
Division all our woe.

The pine tree tall on yonder hill
For years has watched the passerby.
When he is dust, we shall be still
Together, thou and I.

How hushed the afternoon! I dare
Not whisper love, but send the thought
In speechless message. All the air
In silence thrall is caught.

Oh, these are God reared trees! How soft
The wind dreams round their tall heads creep!
The drowsy leaves that dore aloft
Stir like a child in sleep.

Young autumn's fire begins to burn
The brands to hurl at winter's brow.
The sun wooed leaves sigh low and turn
To crimson on the bough.

Pray, whither leads the road, fair heart?
Say, whither leads the road?
Across a rill, around a hill,
Beside a dell where rivers start,
Where bending nut trees shed their load.
Oh, thither leads the road, my heart,
Oh, thither leads the road!
—John Albert Macy in Chap Book.

Messieurs Mesureur and Moron of the third subcommittee for the Paris World's exposition in 1900 have finished the herculean task of examining into the "new ideas" presented for realization at the coming event.

While it is true that most of the schemes spoken of in the newspapers are the very incarnation of idiocy, there are some which appear to deserve a less sweeping criticism than that exercised by the commission.

An amusing proposition of M. Benda is to fix a huge mirror to the top of the Eiffel tower which would present a mirage of the larger part of Paris. Another huge mirror is to be affixed to the base of the tower in such a position as to reflect the mirage of the top mirror. In this manner the visitors to the exposition would have the opportunity to witness Parisian life without the fatigue and expense of participating in it.

The Eiffel tower, by the way, has caused so many would be inventors to present fantastic schemes that to the latter the major part of the commission's report is devoted. M. Hunt proposes a six cornered building, 100 feet in diameter and 200 feet high, on the top of which sleigh races are to be held upon artificial snow. M. Banks has the idea of a gigantic candelabra whose three feet are to serve as promenades. M. Buffa advises the erection of two fountains, one representing a man and the other a woman at 200 times the average size, which would make this proposed inland pharos about 1,100 feet high. A patriot, M. Couchol, would have the Eiffel tower remodeled into a statue of France, the first two stories to serve as pedestal. M. Mazelaygue proposes a house 1,000 feet in height in order to ascertain scientifically to what height houses may be habitable without danger.

A pyramid of 1,200 feet height revolving around its center is the ideal of John Richardson. As philosopher and philanthropist Gustave Songeux proposes two colossal statues, "War" and "Peace," "whose contrast would cause all nations to declare in favor of peace."

For the sake of gallantry the proposition of Miss Josefa Hamse may be mentioned to revive the old wooden horse of the memory of the siege of Troy and to build a horse, with "all the points of a blooded animal," which would have an interior capable of holding 1,000 people.

More prosaic and practical is the scheme of Mlle. Ralfo to construct a mechanical elephant for the children and a tea fountain for the adults. The idea of swings flying 400 feet high, submitted by M. Gauss and Mr. Fareshaw, is old. More original is a project of Axel Shoot to construct a screw 600 feet high, along the threads of which a car would conduct visitors to a restaurant at the top.

Worthy of mention is the proposition by Prince Della Rocca and by Fernand Hau, the latter a Parisian journalist, to arrange an exhibit of religious art of all ages and also the project of Herr Fildermann to construct a miniature city under the protectorate of Hygeia, which is to be inhabited by people who are to live strictly according to hygienic rules in order to study public sanitation. Both projects are seriously conceived and deserving of consideration, which is acknowledged by the commission.

M. Moron, in a separate report, states that of 116 schemes examined by him 45 came from foreign countries, which shows the interest taken all over the world in the coming exposition. Of these schemes only two have been definitely adopted—one of an electric platform, with two degrees of velocity, for the transportation of visitors within the exposition grounds (which is probably similar to the moving sidewalk on the pier of the recent World's fair in Chicago) and another of a captive balloon of 60,000 cubic feet, which can keep 60 persons in an altitude of 2,000 feet, also an idea known from Chicago World's fair.

The commissioner divides the schemes examined by him into eight series, the first of which comprises aquariums, vessels, naval engineering, etc., including a giant aquarium with 180 compartments and a colossal structure containing a cataract, a lake, promenades, cafes, bicycle rings, etc. The building is to be lighted by electricity and is to have walls of red glass to produce the effect of a marvelous sunset. The author of this project, which alone would cover the space of the entire exposition grounds, is Herr Eichbaum, from St. Petersburg.—John Ehlert in Chicago Times-Herald.

Amusing Ignorance.

The written civil service examinations for policemen in New York have been sneered at as a part of a visionary scheme. The ignorance displayed by some of the unsuccessful applicants for appointment might have had free course in an official position, however, and to the public loss, had no such test been used. Extracts from what these applicants for police service wrote about Abraham Lincoln include some extraordinary statements. One wrote:

"He has bin a Presented of New York city." Another declared that in 1866 Lincoln was "nomminated in place of Backhanan who's term of office expiren in that year."

"Mr. Lincoln," according to another applicant, "had many engagements in war and was bound to be victorious, especially at the battle of Gettysburg, when he swept all before him."

Of Lincoln's tragic death it was variously said that he was killed "at Chicago 1864," also that he "was assisinated in 1877 at foards Theater Boston;" shot in "Booth's theater in Philadelphia;" "died at his home in Long Branch." The assassin is spoken of as "Garfield," "Geteay" and "Decota."

One candidate said Lincoln "let the Dorkey go free," another that he "fred all the negros in the world." In general the applicants seem to have agreed, as one wrote, that "we have sertinly had very fiew like unto Lincoln."—Youth's Companion.

"Old False Teeth Bought."

This is the sign which attracts the attention of visitors to the office of a certain dealer in dental and optical supplies who does business in Chicago.

"It's queer how people are attracted by that sign," said the owner of the establishment. "I never intended it to be prominent, because there are other lines in my business I am more interested in pushing, but it seems to fairly force itself into the minds of everybody who comes here, no matter what his mission may be, and 'old false teeth bought' is the only thing they can think or talk about.

"There's nothing audacious in dealing in secondhand false teeth, although I will admit the sign is an unusual one. It is a legitimate branch of our trade. With ordinary usage false teeth don't wear out and are just as good at the end of a few years as they were when new. The teeth themselves are valuable, and the gold work used in binding even the commonplace kind together is costly. People are forever getting new ideas about their teeth and keep the dentists busy changing or building over their artificial molars. Then, you remember that a whole lot of people who wear false teeth are dying every day.

"Ten years ago there was no way of utilizing this old material. It was all dead waste, so to speak. But now it is different, and people are more economical. False teeth, especially if heavily set with gold plates, are worth too much money to be cast aside when new ones are ordered or to be buried in a grave. Thus it comes that a trade of considerable proportions has sprung up in this line, and old false teeth are a staple in this market."

"Small dentists who are hard up financially and lack the inclination or facilities to clean up and build over the discarded sets, which they are sharp enough to retain from their patrons, are the main source of supply. Sometimes they make their patrons a little allowance for the old sets of teeth, but they get out of this whenever possible on the plea that they are worthless. Then we have poor folk who cannot afford to wear false teeth any longer come in here occasionally and offer them for sale. Undertakers? Well, that is a feature of the trade I don't care to talk about. I might be misunderstood, and some people are so squeamish, you know.

"Why, one woman came in here yesterday to buy an opera glass. She looked like a good customer and was inspecting some high priced glasses when I stopped to wait upon a man who frequently brings in some fine teeth. She saw me take a set from him and pay for them, and then, noticing probably his somber clothes and an end of black crape sticking out of one of his side pockets, she flounced away in a fury without a word of explanation. It is hard to please everybody, and as times are hard I have to be very careful."

"But what about your sales? Who takes these old grinders and incisors from you?"

"Principally a class of men who make a business of working over the sets. When the outfit is in reasonably good shape, it is given a thorough cleansing, brightened up, and then resold to dentists who have a cheap patronage. A little tinkering will make them fit after a fashion in the mouths of people who want to make a show of false teeth at small cost. Where the sets are not good enough to be used entire they are broken up, the gold either melted down or saved to be remodeled, and the teeth themselves remounted as they are needed for patients. It's a good thing for poor people, for many of them are thus enabled to get passably fair false teeth at a nominal price, when otherwise they would have to go without, owing to the great expense. Excuse me while I wait upon this woman."

When The Inter Ocean man left the establishment, the merchant was dickering with an ample proportioned African "aunty" for a double set of teeth with heavy gold plates, which she said she had found in a hotel where she worked as chambermaid.

"Der genman' don' go to 'at 'orspital," said aunty. "'E's wuz so sick when dey tak' 'im way he dun' clar forgot 'is teet', an I doan' 'spec' he'll wan' 'em any more. Steal 'em? No, sah; no, sah! Boss, 'e say 'tak' ole truck 'way. I doan' want 'em 'round 'ere.' Ole truck—umph, umph—why, dat's jes' like findin' five dollahs."—Chicago Inter Ocean.

EXCITED BRITONS.

THEY ARE FORMING BIG KLONDIKE EXPEDITIONS.

Views of a British Columbia Official—He Says the Dawson City Hardships Are Exaggerated—Situation on the Overland Route Will Probably Be Terrible.

"The eyes of all Europe are now centered on the Yukon," said Lieutenant Governor C. H. Mackintosh.

"South Africa has taken a back seat. Everybody of high and low degree, from duchesses to cab drivers, are talking about the Klondike, and they read every scrap of news that is published. I expect to see a great rush thither next spring from Europe.

"Lady Augusta Fane is one of those who have the fever, and she intends to make the trip to Klondike entirely through Canada. No doubt there will be others. I heard the other day of a banker who was thinking seriously of leaving a lucrative business to try his fortunes in the great goldfields."

The lieutenant governor of the northwest provinces of British Columbia while spending a month in England was besieged on all sides by capitalists and fortune hunters who were anxious to hear the details of the wonderful country.

A dinner was given in his honor, and when curiosity was expressed as to what a typical Klondiker was like the lieutenant governor brought out a six footer of fine proportions, who did not look the worse for hardship, but who in the presence of the distinguished personages blushed like a schoolboy. He was Frank Boucher, who made his pile and had returned to England on a visit.

"I think that the coming hardships at Dawson City have been greatly exaggerated, although it is probable that they will have a tough enough time of it and may be on very short rations. Compared with Dawson City, however, the situation along the overland route to the Yukon will probably be terrible, for, in spite of repeated warnings, many went in late, and they will not get much beyond the passes. Anticipating such an emergency, the Canadian government has already sent as many supplies as possible to Lake Tagish, and they will be forwarded in either direction as the demand requires. Police have been stationed along the way for prompt communication.

"I suppose that there will be between 5,000 and 6,000 people at Dawson City this winter. It will be very difficult, of course, to get any supplies up the Yukon to relieve the miners, but I understand the North American Trading and Transportation company and other trading concerns will do their best to get goods through, at whatever cost. Supplies have been accumulated at St. Michael's for this purpose. I realize the difficulty of carrying out such a programme, but if there should be a crisis there will be nothing else to do.

"Few people have any conception of the immense territory covered by these gold bearing streams. The Yukon is only one of many rivers. It is only 200 miles long, while the Lewes river, which is believed to be equally rich, is 500 or 600 miles long, and there are numerous unexplored streams which will be developed as rapidly as the facilities for reaching the country are furnished.

"The Canadian government, as well as English capitalists, is carefully considering the opening up of the country, and within a very short time some action will be taken. An English exploration company, with a very large capitalization, will be formed to conduct mining and possibly railroad operations. I cannot at present tell you who is back of it, but I presume that Lord Dufferin will be one of the chief men. He was formerly governor general of Canada and is well posted on the mining developments up to the present time. He is a very active man, and whatever he takes hold of is sure to be carried through.

"Now, in regard to the construction of a railroad, you may rest assured that there will be one within a very short time. The only delay now is due to the choice of a route. Three or four are under consideration. The most probable route is from Fort Wrangell, on the Pacific coast, to Stickeen river, a region which is open to the British as well as to the people of the United States under the Washington treaty.

"This river is navigable to Telegraph creek, the water being from four to five feet deep. Then there is a stretch of country 145 miles long to Lake Teslin, which presents no engineering difficulties and where a railroad can be constructed at moderate cost. That done, the water stretches emptying into the Yukon, which are all navigable, could be utilized as far as Dawson City and to other portions of the Canadian territory. This route to the Yukon is less than 1,000 miles long.—New York Herald.

He Knew Him.

Several travelers were waiting for a train on the veranda of a southwest Georgia hotel. It was a dismal, rainy day, and one of them remarked:

"This reminds me of one of Longfellow's poems, 'The Day Is Done.'"

At the mention of the name Longfellow a tall stranger leaned forward and said:

"Longfellow? What do you know 'bout him?"

"Little," replied the first speaker, "except that he wrote books."

"An is he a-writin of books?" asked the tall man. "Why, the last time I heard of him he wuz runnin fer sheriff an makin of stump speeches."

"I fear you are mistaken in the man," said the first speaker, laughing.

"Not me," replied the tall man. "Don't I know him? Bill Longfellow—had a squint in one eye an a cut over the other. An jest ter think—the durned fool's took ter writin."—Macon [illegible]

DUSKY NEW WOMEN.

Females of an Arab Tribe Who Go Unveiled While Their Men Cover Their Faces.

Many an Arab lady never leaves her house from the time she is married until she is carried out to be buried, says Pearson's Weekly. A woman of the middle class is allowed more liberty, and occasionally goes out for walks, accompanied as a rule by a servant. The poor creature is enveloped in masses of white drapery, which make her look like a walking bundle, and in front of her face she arranges a large black scarf embroidered with blue, red and white flowers. It falls low in front, and, even by holding up the ends, she cannot see more than a foot or two of the road before her. I often wonder that she does not get run over when she goes out alone, for I am sure she needs a dog to guide her quite as much as any blind man. Servants and other women of the lower classes wear pieces of black crepon wound tightly round their faces, leaving just a slit for their eyes to peep through, and they are equally muffled up in white draperies. Seen from a distance, they might be men with masks or thick black beards, as in Arab countries it is by no means easy to tell a man from a woman at first sight. The older and uglier a woman is the more prudish she seems to be about covering up her face, which, after all, is rather considerate on her part. Even the greater number of negresses wear the yashmak, but the Bedouin women never do. Indeed, I am told that in the interior there is one Arab tribe whose men wear veils, and whose women go about with their faces uncovered. These are probably the "new women" of Africa.

A BOY HERO.

The Pittsburgh Youth Who Fought at Manila and Met Admiral Dewey.

One of the heroes of the battle of Manila is a 13-year-old boy, who is popularly called "Boots" by his comrades. "Boots" lately returned on the transport City of Para, and has had the distinction of having had a personal interview with Admiral Dewey, who gave him a free trip to Hong-Kong on the Olympia because of his services in the siege of Malate and the fight before Manila. He is the boy who came from Pittsburgh with the regiment. The men smuggled him aboard the transport, but he had hard luck, as he fell down the hatchway on the third day out and broke his arm. He was all right when Manila was reached, and in the trenches before Malate he carried water and ammunition and paid no attention to the bullets. As he said: "There was no chance to dodge 'em, they came so quick." He was among the first to enter Manila with a captured Spanish rifle, which he brings back with him. On August 13 he learned that the Olympia was to go to Hong-Kong, so he determined to make the trip. He boarded the ship and asked to be shown to the admiral's cabin. Dewey was sitting at a table with the captain of the ship.

"Boots" said: "I salutes and says: 'Admiral, I want to go to Hong-Kong,' and he says, pleasant like: 'Well, my boy, you come aboard and we'll take you.'"

He was 13 days on the Olympia. When he got back to Manila Col. Hawkins feared that he might catch the fever, so he sent the boy to New York on the transport.

FORMOSAN CITY ABANDONED.

Residents of Plague-Stricken Teckham Are Compelled to Leave It.

The Japanese government has ordered the destruction of the city of Teckham, Formosa, and the removal of all its inhabitants to a new location. The city is situated on the northwest coast of the island, and has been frequently subjected to pestilence. In 1896 and 1897 plagues visited Teckham with enormous fatality. This fact being called to the attention of the government, an investigation was ordered by sanitary experts, who reported that the city was built upon a swamp, whereupon an order was issued to the governor to select a new location as convenient to the old as possible, where the natural conditions were healthful. A new city was laid out, and each property holder in the old one was assigned a site that corresponded in area with the one he occupied at Teckham and was given 12 months to move his buildings and belongings. Sewers, railroads and sidewalks, public buildings, waterworks and all other public improvements were laid out by the government in the new city without expense to the people, but they were required to pay the cost of the removal of their own property. Most of the houses and other buildings in Teckham are built of very light wooden material.

First Weather Prophecy on Record.

The first attempt at scientific forecasting of the weather was the result of a storm which during the Crimean war, November 14, 1854, almost destroyed the fleets of France and England. As a storm had raged several days earlier in France, Vaillant, the French minister of war, directed that investigations be made to see if the two storms were the same, and if the progress of the disturbances could have been foretold. It was demonstrated that the two were in reality one storm and that its path could have been ascertained and the fleet forewarned in ample time to reach safety.

Conjurer Brought to Book.

Mr. Maskelyne, the London conjurer, has been compelled by the courts to make good his offer of £500 to anyone who could imitate his box trick. He had made the offer with impunity for years, but, when two young clerks took it up, refused to pay.

HAS TWO HEARTS.

Colored Man Generously Endowed by Nature Is a Puzzle to Medical Men.

Medical men of Plainfield, N. J., are deeply interested in the discovery of a man with two distinct and separate hearts and two breast bones, all of which he can move about at will.

The man who is thus generously endowed by nature is William King (colored), who claims to be 100 years old. His home is in New Bedford, Mass., and he has been visiting his cousin, Thomas Martin, the jail warden in New York city, for several days.

That he has two hearts Dr. M. B. Long, chief of the Muhlenburg hospital staff, says is undeniable. Dr. Long, together with several other prominent physicians, examined King and found to their astonishment that the man's statements were true. They found that King not only had two hearts, but that they were capable of displacement. Just to show that he had his hearts completely under control King moved them about.

Although the two hearts were thrown far apart on either side, they still beat in unison. Usually King keeps his hearts, one on the right and the other on the left side of his body. By a muscular movement he can suddenly move one heart to the lower part of his abdomen, while the other remains stationary.

When he had finished doing things with his two hearts King called attention to his breast bones. With a violent muscular movement he forced one breast bone lower and lower, until he had a complete wall of bone from his throat down.

ATTACKED BY A SAVAGE LION

Frank C. Bostock, manager of the Hagenbeck zoo, which is wintering at Kansas City, Mo., was terribly bitten and lacerated by Brutus, the big lion which has already maimed several men. He was saved from being killed by the energetic action of Mme. Pianka, the lion tamer.

At the afternoon's rehearsal, just prior to the public performance, Mme. Pianka had trouble with Spitfire, a sulky lioness, and called Manager Bostock to her assistance. Bostock entered the cage cracking his whip and striking at Spitfire. As he did so Brutus, with a savage roar, sprang upon him, sinking his teeth to the bone in Bostock's thigh and lacerating the victim's back terribly with his claws.

Mme. Pianka fired several blank cartridges from her revolver full in Brutus' face and was about to fire the one ball cartridge when the beast loosened his hold. Mme. Pianka then threw her arms about the animal's neck and held him while Bostock was removed from the cage by attendants. Bostock, while dangerously hurt, will probably recover.

A GAY BEGINNING.

Lord Curzon of Kedleston, the new viceroy of India, and Lady Curzon start for India on December 16. They evidently intend to make a lavish beginning of their hospitality, as they have already ordered 10,000 ball programmes, 5,500 evening party cards, 1,500 garden party cards, 4,000 dinner party invitation cards, 5,500 "at home" cards, and 4,300 menu cards.

It appears that before assuming the title, young Curzon called upon Baron Curzon, the title borne by Earl Howe, head of the Curzon-Howe family, and asked him if he objected to his so doing. The baron said he had no objection if Curzon undertook to be known as Baron Curzon of Kedleston and allowed the title to drop when he succeeds his father as Lord Scarsdale.

WEDDED ON A HIGHWAY.

Guests Asked to Wait While the Ceremony Takes Place in Another County.

William H. Webb and Miss Angeline Kensel were married upon the public highway near Farmer City, Ill., the principals sitting in a carriage, while W. C. McMurray, a justice of the peace, occupied a buggy near by. The bride's home is in Piatt county, and it was intended that the wedding should occur there. The groom, however, inadvertently procured the license in De Witt county, and, to be legal, the ceremony had to be performed in De Witt. The bride, groom and justice accordingly asked the assembled guests to excuse them for an hour, while they drove over the county line. As soon as the party reached the opposite county the horses were halted and the binding words uttered. The three then returned to the bride's home.

Pitiful Poverty in Russia.

Statistics just published show that in Russia only 347,468 families out of a population of about 130,000,000 souls have an income of over $500 a year, or that practically more than 99 per cent. of the whole population are constantly in a state of abject poverty and pauperism in their various degrees. The figures become appalling when one considers the case of the peasantry, which forms the overwhelming majority of the population. The average yearly income of a peasant family consisting of six members ranges from $60 to $75 a year, out of which between $25 and $35 has to be paid to the government in direct taxes.

Government Creameries in Canada.

The Canadian government creameries in the northwest turned out 80,000 pounds of butter last month.

DRINKS IN OTHER DAYS.

The earliest mention of wine in the Bible is a reference to Noah planting a vineyard and getting drunk with the wine.

The Roman lover, when drinking to his lady, often drank as many cups of wine as there were letters in her name. Warm water was sometimes regarded by the Romans as an agreeable drink at the conclusion of the chief meal.

Famous among drinkers were the Vikings, whose liquors were ale, beer, wine and mead. Quaffing ale from the skulls of their enemies formed one of the chief attractions of the promised Valhalla.

The Egyptians, who have been ungallant enough to leave behind them delineations of the fair sex in a state of intoxication, had several kinds of wine more than 6,000 years ago, in addition to a beer called hega, made from barley.

A drink much in demand in the time of Chaucer was bracket, made of the wort of ale, honey and spices. By the time of Edward IV. drinking had become so productive of crime that few places were allowed more than two taverns. London had to be content with 40.

The drinks of antiquity were sometimes, to say the least, peculiar. The Greeks and Romans, whose customary drink was wine, often mixed it with sea water. Other ancient beverages were honey and rainwater; honey, salt water and vinegar, and a mixture of honey and myrrh seed.

Under the Stuarts drunkenness was at its height. Thirst provokers were largely taken, and a man's claim to distinction was largely due to his bottle capacity, while ladies of the court thought it no shame to become inebriated. The three or five bottle man was an object of envy to his fellows.

BOWS OF THE ANCIENTS.

The Greek bow was not more than three or four feet in length, but was so stout and stiff that it required considerable strength and skill to use it.

The Romans carried the bow to Britain, where it at once obtained favor, and during the middle ages was extensively used, forming an important element of the armies of that period.

While universally used by the ancients, the form of the bow varied with different nations. The Scythian bow was in form of the letter C and the bow of the Tartars—descendants of the Scythians—still keeps that shape.

It is said that the first Greek bows were made from the horns of a species of goat, the bases being united by means of a metallic band. Afterward other material was used in their manufacture, but they still retained their original shape. These bows were too short to be of much use, and, comparatively speaking, but a small portion of the troops were armed with them.

The English archers were said to be the finest in the world, and their skill decided the battles of Crecy, Poitiers and Agincourt. The bows used were of two kinds, the long bow and the arbalest or cross-bow. The arbalest was made of steel or horn, and was of such strength and stiffness that it was necessary to use some mechanical appliance to bend it and adjust the string. The arbalesters carried a quiver with [illegible] arrows, and were placed in the van of the battle.

WHY?

Why isn't a telegraph line an outline?

Why aren't theatrical properties playthings?

Why isn't a lawyer's offer of marriage a legal tender?

Why does a loafer always complain of being unable to get work?

Why isn't a stiff lower jaw as useful as a stiff upper lip?

Why does a man's shoestring invariably break when he is in a hurry?

Why do late hours slip by the man who is engaged in keeping them?

Why isn't it the darkest hour when we are unable to find the matches?

Why are the men who say women are delusions and snares always snared by delusions?—Chicago Daily News.

THE ENGLISH LIBRARIES.

In Canada the public libraries contain over 1,500,000 volumes.

There are 1,750,000 volumes in the library of the British museum and more than [illegible] miles of shelving.

In 1896 the United States, according to government statistics, possessed 4,026 public and school libraries, containing 33,051,872 volumes.

There are 844 public libraries in Australia, with 1,400,000 volumes; 295, with 330,000 volumes, in New Zealand; 100, with 300,000 volumes, in South Africa.

There are now about [illegible] public libraries in Great Britain, says Science. These libraries contain over 5,000,000 volumes and issue about 27,000,000 books each year. The annual attendance of readers is about 60,000,000.

Rumor has it that Dr. Francis will locate in Thief River Falls in the near future where he has an exceptionally large practice. We will be sorry to lose the genial doctor and his estimable family but there is one consolation he will be near at hand.

Don't send away from home for any thing that you can buy at home. It is not economy to send away from home because possibly the price of an article is a few cents below what it can be bought for at home. Trade with home merchants and keep your money at home, and it will be money in your pocket in the end.

In looking over the list of births and deaths of Red Lake County for the year 1898 published in last weeks Gazette, St. Hilaire is not visible in either column and the question naturally arises and the Gazette would like to know whats the matter with St. Hilaire? Our officers must have neglected their duty. We should be represented in both columns.

No matter if the hens do have the run of the farm. There are many farms where chickens have been kept so long that limestone and other egg forming materials have been used up and this must be supplied or eggs cannot be produced. All grains have a small quantity of lime in them, but not enough to furnish eggshell material for a hen that is laying regularly.

The Young Ladies of the Lutheran Synod church organized on the 2nd day of March 1899. A sewing society titled "The Willing Workers." Fifteen members were present. The officers elected are as follows:

President—Selina Hoff.
Vice President—Rosa Gigstad.
Secretary—Clara Halverson.
Cashier—Mary Hoff.

The society will meet at Dahl's next Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

A young married lady got on the train with her new babe and didn't have time to purchase a ticket in advance. She tendered a five dollar bill to the conductor for her fare. As the official took the money he casually glanced down at the baby and inquired: "Haven't you anything smaller"—meaning in money. She replied: "No, I've only been married a year and this is my first child." So the papers say, and "it must be so."

Crookston Times of last Friday says: "H. F. Brown leased the room in his block on second street that was recently vacated by W. W. Hoch to Rosenberg Bros., a firm that will occupy it in the near future with a stock of clothing. The new tenants have a large business in Minneapolis and branches in several Minnesota towns. The business here will be under the management of Mr. Ben Rosenberg, who has recently been in charge of the branch at St. Hilaire.

Some one wanted to know the opinion of a Hickens county farmer on the question: "Is marriage a failure?" says the Record. His reply was: "I should say not. Why, Lucinda gets up in the morning, milks the cows, starts our children to school, looks after the others, feeds the calves and pigs, skims twenty pans of milk, washes the clothes, gets the dinner and does lots of other work. Think I could hire anybody to do it for what she gets? Not much! Marriage is a grand success, sir; grand success."—Exchange.

An exchange truly says that it is always best to wait for evidence before passing judgment. When you hear reports detrimental to young ladies or gentlemen, don't be hasty in forming conclusions. It is better to be charitable when anyone is in trouble. To day it is somebody else's girl or boy; tomorrow it may be yours. Trouble comes to us all and we should be willing to extend the same charity we expect from others. Gossip distorts and magnifies occurrences that have no foundation in fact, and injustice is often done to innocent parties.

SCHOOL DISTRICT NOTICE.

WHEREAS, a petition duly signed and the signatures thereto duly acknowledged, has been duly presented to the Board of County Commissioners of Red Lake County, Minnesota at a session of said Board held on the 20th day of January, A. Knights of Pythias.

Sometime ago the SPECTATOR called attention to the fact that Crookston was a first-class town but not up-to-date without a K. of P. organization. Now we take it all back as last Thursday March 2nd 1899 was the red letter day when they instituted a lodge of this kind at that place which was an elaborate affair to say the least. Fully five hundred Knights were present from the different states. The Crookston band met all incoming trains and escorted visiting members to Castle Hall. Grand Forks came over with over one hundred strong accompanied by the K. P. band while Grafton sent a good delegation. Barnsville was up with an excellent degree team and a large escort of Knights. This team exemplified the work in the first and second degrees while Grand Forks executed the work of the third. Both teams doing the work in a first-class manner and much credit is due them. A large class numbering thirty-four were made full fledged Knights, the work commencing at 2:00 p. m. and completed at 1:30 a. m. At 11 o'clock the guests repaired to the spacious dining hall at the Hotel Crookston where a sumptuous repast was served. Witty speeches were made by Grand Chancellor Wooley, Grand Keeper of Records and Seals Wheaton and other noted speakers while A. D. Stephen acted as toastmaster.

All credit is due H. T. Murray, J. E. Jerome and J. E. Rasmussen who have brought about a successful organization of Crookston Lodge No. 25. Their names will go down in history as prime movers of one of the best lodges ever started in Minnesota as well as the largest, and material of the very best, there being over seventy-five members.

Say, there is a whole carload of sense in the following squib which is floating around among the newspapers at present and as usual is credited to that nonenty—an exchange: A preacher came at a newspaper man in this way. "You editors dare not tell the truth. If you did you could not live; your newspaper would be a failure" The editor replied: "You are right: and the minister who will at all times and under all circumstances tell the whole truth about his members dead or alive, will not occupy the pulpit more than one Sunday, and then he will find it necessary to leave town in a hurry. The press and the pulpit go hand in hand with whitewash brushes and pleasant words, magnifying little virtures into big ones. The pulpit, the pen and the gravestone are the great saint making triumvirate." And the minister went away looking very thoughtful, while the editor turned to his work and told about the surpassing beauty of the bride while in tact, she was as homely as a hedge fence.—Anoka Union.

ODD FELLOWS HOME.

Odd Fellows and their families all over the state are interested in the big new Odd Fellows Home now about to be built by the Odd Fellows of the State at Northfield. From the Minneapolis Tribune we clip the following description of the new home:

"Bids have been asked for the erection of the Odd Fellows Home at Northfield in accordence with the plans and specifications prepared by Harry W. Jones of this city. The bids will be opened March 7 and work commenced on the building just as soon as practicable.

"The home will be a beautiful structure and will be a model of convenience. Almost perfect arrangements are provided for, for the comfort of the occupants, and the building itself will be a credit to the city of Northfield.

"The home will be 176 feet in length by 61 feet in depth. It will consist of practically three separate buildings one for the male inhabitants of the home, one for the women and girls at the right side and the main building between the two. The two wings will be connected with the main building by narrow passageways which will be nothing more or less than a continuance of the corridors which extend the entire length of the building. In the men's end of the home there will be situated a large playroom for the boys, for use in cold and inclement weather. On the first floor will be situated sitting rooms, dormitories, bath rooms and clothes rooms for the old men, and on second floor will be the boy's day room, or parlor, and their dormitory, bath rooms and linen rooms. The part of the building set apart for the women and girls will be arranged along similar lines; in fact will be practically the same except that separate sleeping rooms will be provided the women instead of the dormitory as furnished the men.

"The basement of the main section of the building will be given up to the laundry, the servants' apartments and the storage rooms. The first floor will contain the large dining room and the office and reception rooms, and on the second floor there will be a large assembly hall, 55x36 feet, and a number of single bedrooms.

"The engine room and heating plant will be situated in what will be practically a seperate building, a driveway running between it and the main structure by a passageway containing the pantry, over the drive.

"The building will be constructed of red brick and cream colored stone, and will be ready for occupancy by the early fall."

The Best Cough Remedy on Earth.

Warner's White Wine of Tar Syrup, Consumption Cure, cures a cold in 24 hours if taken in time and does not stop a cough in ONE MINUTE, by paralyzing the throat, but it cures the disease and leaves the throat and lungs healthy and strong. 25 and 50 cts. For sale by the Imperial Drug Co., St. Hilaire.

March Ladies, Home Journal.

The March Ladies' Home Journal has a noteworthy feature in the page showing "Pope Leo XIII as he Lives in the Vatican." The pictures were made by the only photographer who has been admitted to the Vatican for a number of years, consequently they offer the first close view the public has had in a long time of the Pope and his surroundings. An article that will be widely read figures out "The American Girl's Chances of Marriage," and another, "Social life in America's French City," gives a really charming glimpse into the exclusive Creole circles of New Orleans. "The Most Wonderful Musical Festival in America" recalls the great Peace Jubilee held at Boston in 1872, with its seventeen hundred instrumentalists and chorus of seventeen thousand. "Churches Decorated for Weddings," "The Prettiest Country Homes in America," "Flowers and Flower Beds," and "Fifteen Good Mantels and Fireplaces" are shown from the photographs submitted in the contest for Journal prizes. "In Nature's Garden" pictures and describes our wild flowers so their identification will be easy. The article is by Neltje Blanchan and is the first of a series.

On his editorial page Edward Bok pays deserved tribute to his late associate editor, Isabel A. Mallon, who also wrote for the Journal under the pseudonym of "Ruth Ashmore." As a matter of course considerable of space is given to Easter hat and frocks, etc, and illustrated from orignal designs. Besides the concluding chapter of "The Girls of camp Aready" and the experiences of "The Jamesons in the Country there is an excellent short story. "The Touch of a Child," and a humorous sketch by John Kendrick Bangs. Mrs. S. T. Rorer continues her cooking lessons and advice upon domestic economies, and every phase and condition of home life is considered. By the Curtis Publishing Company, Philadelphia. One dollar per year; ten cents per copy.

MERIT ALWAYS WINS.

A SUCCESSFUL ENTERPRISE IS BASED ON MERIT.

The Importance of Informing the Public of the Value of an Article Through the Leading Newspapers.

The few remedies which have attained to world-wide fame, as truly beneficial in effect and giving satisfaction to millions of people everywhere, are the products of the knowledge of the most eminent physicians, and presented in the form most acceptable to the human system by the skill of the world's great chemists; and one of the most successful examples is the Syrup of Figs manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. Unlike a host of imitations and cheap substitutes, Syrup of Figs is permanently beneficial in its effects, and therefore lives and promotes good health, while inferior preparations are being cast aside and forgotten. In olden times if a remedy gave temporary relief to individuals here and there, it was thought good; but now-a-days a laxative remedy must give satisfaction to all. If you have never used Syrup of Figs, give it a trial, and you will be pleased with it, and will recommend it to your friends or to any who suffer from constipation, or from over-feeding, or from colds, headaches, biliousness, or other ills resulting from an inactive condition of the kidneys, liver and bowels.

In the process of manufacturing the pleasant family laxative made by the California Fig Syrup Co., and named Syrup of Figs, figs are used, as they are pleasant to the taste; but the medicinal properties of the remedy are obtained from an excellent combination of plants known to be medicinally laxative and to act most beneficially. As the true and original remedy, named Syrup of Figs, is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only, a knowledge of that fact will assist in avoiding the worthless imitations manufactured by other parties. The company has selected for years past the leading publications of the United States through which to inform the public of the merits of its remedy, and among them this paper is included, as will be seen by reference to its advertising columns.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucus surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

THE LEGISLATURE

Business Transacted by Minnesota Solons.

St. Paul, Feb. 28. — The Miner bill was read the first time in the house last evening. This bill is the measure that is designed to permit evidence taken upon a complaint before the railroad and warehouse commission to be certified to the district court on appeal, and amounts to making the commission the judges as to the facts, leaving the court nothing but the questions of law. Mr. Jacobson asked to have it laid on the table where it could be taken up at any time. Mr. Ferris, chairman of the railroad committee, opposed this motion. He made the point that it would take a two-thirds vote to put it on the table and demanded a roll call on the motion. The motion was defeated—23 to 15—and Speaker Dare referred the bill to the railroad committee.

The following bill was introduced:

Relating to punishment of witnesses for failure to obey subpoena. Under the present law a judge may only fine witnesses who refuse to obey a subpoena to the maximum of $20. This bill raises the limit of the fine to $250, and also adds the alternative of imprisonment not to exceed six months.

The senate was not in session.

St. Paul, March 1.—Several bills of more than ordinary interest were passed by the senate yesterday. Among the more important of those were the bill to make elective the state railroad and warehouse commission, which has now passed both houses; the Horton bill, to authorize the state capitol commission to issue certificates of indebtedness for the unexpended balance of the appropriation to defray the cost of building the new state capitol; the road and bridge bill, to create a permanent road and bridge fund, to be raised by taxation; the bill raising the age of consent from fourteen to sixteen years; the Brower bill, prohibiting the use of any but stone quarried in Minnesota in the construction of state public buildings, and the Greer tax commission bill.

The House.

The house, in committee of the whole, spent the entire forenoon in the consideration of Mr. Fosnes' bill providing that no action may be maintained to enforce the payment of a note, mortgage or other evidence of indebtedness unless it has been listed for assessment and taxation under conditions fixed by this act. After a long discussion the bill was referred back to the author for amendment.

In the afternoon the house tackled the bill prepared by the committee on judiciary providing for the infliction of the death penalty at Stillwater. The house, after some discussion, voted—61 to 12—to indefinitely postpone the bill. The next bill was the one prepared by the committee on education, providing for printing text books on contract by the state. This bill called out considerable discussion. No conclusion was reached, the bill being finally recommitted to the committee on education for further consideration.

The following bills were passed:

To require insurance policies, etc., to be marked "Assessment plan" or "Non-assessment plan." — To prohibit blacklisting. — Appropriating $1,000 annually for the promotion of the live stock interests of the state.

The following bills were introduced:

Relating to the jurisdiction of justices of the peace. — Relating to the assessment and collection of taxes. — Prescribing methods for inspecting grain of certain kinds. — Abolishing the requirement of seal of grantor on deeds or conveyances.

St. Paul, March 2.—The senate yesterday passed more than a quarter of a hundred bills, clearing up its calendar, and getting rid of a lot of routine work that has been pending. It was a good day's work and leaves the senate in splendid shape. Among the bills passed were the Wallace house bill to protect bicyclists and bicycle paths; the Wheaton civil rights bill; the bill to prevent judges of probate from practicing in their own courts; to enforce the payment of taxes which became delinquent prior to 1897; to prevent fraud in the sale of garden and grass seeds; to provide against the adulteration of syrups, etc.; to prevent occupants from acquiring title to roads, streets, etc., by adverse possession; to limit the time in which actions may be brought to enforce stockholders' double liability, etc. The Yale house bill to abolish days of grace in the payment of notes, etc., was killed by a vote of 26 to 27. This is the first bill to be voted to death on the calendar.

Among the bills introduced were the following:

To amend the laws relating to district court appeals. — To provide for the purchase of road-making machines by road districts. — To fix the amount of rights of way and grants of transportation companies. — To provide for the purchase of municipal bonds of Minnesota with earnings of the state school fund. — Relating to the disposition of moneys belonging to the inmates of state institutions.—To amend and repeal laws relating to the duties of public examiner. — Relating to negotiable instruments. — Regulating the incorporation of religious societies. — Relating to the Maintenance and establishment of free public libraries and reading rooms. — To prevent the employment on state work of any but journeymen plumbers.

The House.

The Somerville bill, requiring the payment of a license fee by foreign corporations in proportion to the amount of their capital stock represented by their business and property in Minnesota, was fought to a finish in the house yesterday, the contest ending in the passage of the bill with some amendments, by a vote of 62 to 46, the margin being just three votes. The following bills were introduced:

Relating to farmers' mutual fire insurance companies. — Relating to proclamations by villages. — Relating to the compensation and fees of sheriffs. — Authorizing any city incorporated prior to the adoption of the constitutional amendment of 1897, or any village in this state desiring to incorporate as a city, to frame its own charter. — To provide for the filling of vacancies in school boards and boards of education. — To declare unlawful all combinations to lessen free competition. — To prevent the combination of fire insurance companies to control rates. — To amend section 1605, General Statutes 1894, relating to certificates of sale of real property sold for taxes. — To regulate the sale of poison.

St. Paul, March 3.—Senator Schaller (Dem.) of Dakota county yesterday introduced in the senate for Public Examiner Pope, a bill to increase fees for the examination of state banks and trust companies and compelling savings banks to pay fees, which heretofore they have not been required to do. Furthermore it provides that the fees shall be paid directly into the state treasury instead of being placed to the credit of the public examiner's department to defray the cost of making the bank examinations as is required by the present law.

Other bills introduced were:

Relating to railway companies as common carriers. — To amend the Statutes of 1894, relating to the incorporation of Modern Woodmen and Workmen. — To provide for the issuance of school bonds to build schoolhouses in districts which are co-ordinate with city bonds. — To provide for the erection of a suitable monument on the state capitol grounds to commemorate the various battles in which the Fourth Minnesota volunteers were engaged during the Civil War. — To reimburse towns for the care of county poor. — To amend the laws relating to petitions for hearings relative to the organization of school districts.

The House.

The attendance in the house was light, amounting to considerably less than a quorum in the afternoon, and the session was devoted to work in committee of the whole, where a score of bills were considered.

The following bills were introduced:

To amend section 1045, Statutes of 1894, as amended by chapter 61, Laws of 1897, relating to the organization of cities. — To amend section 1059, Statutes of 1894, relating to elective officers of cities. — To appropriate $200 for the reimbursement of the town of Kandiyohi for expenses incurred in caring for non-residents. — Proposing and amendment to become section 37, to article 4, of the Constitution, relating to initiative and referendum. — To amend chapter 64, Laws of 1895, providing for the publication of a legislative manual. — Proposing an amendment to the Constitution authorizing the taxation of mortgages and other real estate securities. — To amend section 2024, Statutes 1894, as amended by chapter 154, Laws 1897, relating to liquor licenses. — To amend section 3, chapter 107, Laws 1883, relating to annuity safe deposit and trust companies. — To prohibit boycotting. — To amend section 481 of the Penal Code, relating to malicious mischief.

St. Paul, March 4.—The senate yesterday recommended for passage the Wilson bill to place the state oil inspector on a salary basis, and the Bean bill to repeal the beet sugar bounty law of 1895. Both bills were the occasion of lengthy debate.

The senate spent most of the day in committee of the whole and a large number of bills were advanced to the calendar.

The following bills were introduced:

Proposing an act for a state convention to revise the state constitution. — To amend the laws regulating the keeping of disorderly houses. — To abolish the use of private seals. — Granting powers of notaries public to members of the legislature during their term of office; passed under suspension of the rules. — To prohibit false advertisements conveying statements that are not true relative to business chances.

The House.

The work that the house accomplished yesterday may have been of the greatest value to the State of Minnesota, but from the standpoint of passing interest, the session was about as dull and dreary as any that has been held since the convening of the legislature. Some of the new bills contain matter of importance. During the forenoon some work was done on the calendar and five bills were passed as follows:

Providing for the return of summons issued by justice of the peace between 9 o'clock a. m. and 5 o'clock p. m. — Authorizing villages incorporated under the general law to construct and repair sidewalks and assess the cost on abutting property. — Authorizing telephone companies to condemn right of way for poles on the right of way of railroads. — Authorizing cities of less than 15,000 inhabitants to sprinkle streets and assess the cost upon abutting property. — Amending the election law so as to provide for alternating names in certain cases, etc.

The following bills were introduced:

To provide for an annual tax levy for road purposes, and creating a state highway commission. — Relating to insurance companies. — Relating to the compromising of claims by cities. — To establish a board of immigration. — Declaring the effect as evidence of the records of the engineering departments of municipalities. — To restrain and license peddlers in the organized townships of the state.

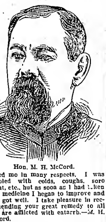
The government has also ordered the prosecution of Gen. Linares, who was in command of the Spanish forces at Santiago at the time of the capitulation to Gen. Shafter.

GOVERNOR M'CORD.

Recommends Pe-ru-na to All Catarrh Victims.

Hon. Myron H. McCord, ex-governor of New Mexico, in a letter to Dr. Hartman, from Washington, D. C., says:

Gentlemen—At the suggestion of a friend I was advised to use Pe-ru-na for catarrh, and after using one bottle I began to feel better in every way. It helped me in many respects. I was troubled with colds, coughs, sore throat, etc., but as soon as I had taken your medicine I began to improve and soon got well. I take pleasure in recommending your great remedy to all who are afflicted with catarrh.—M. H. McCord.



Hon. M. H. McCord.

Thousands of cases of chronic catarrh have been cured by Pe-ru-na during the past winter. In spite of changeable weather, in spite of the natural set-backs from catching cold, and confinement to illy-ventilated rooms, the great catarrh remedy—Pe-ru-na—has effected these cures. But now spring is here. The days are longer, the sun is warmer, and the blizzard is gone for another year. This presents a much more favorable opportunity for the permanent cure of chronic catarrh, especially old, stubborn cases. Now is the time to begin treatment. Other things being equal, one month's treatment in the spring is worth two months' treatment during the inclement weather of winter. Insist upon having Pe-ru-na. There are no successful substitutes for this remedy. Send to Dr. Hartman, Columbus, O., for a free catarrh book.

Oats and Peas as Cow Feed.

Mr. H. E. Niles, of Farmington, Minn., who relates his experience in this method of feeding in the Northwestern Farmer as follows:

I wish to add my testimony for the above named crop for summer feed for the dairy or other stock. That this crop is not generally known to be valuable as it is, I think we find proof as we look among the dairymen who practice summer feeding and see how little of it is grown. At Westwood stock farm, after all other small grains were sown one and three-fourths acres of peas and oats were sown in the usual manner, the peas being plowed under at the rate of one bushel per acre and, a few days after, the oats were sown with seeder broadcast and harrowed in; oats sown at the rate of two bushels per acre. The crop was not put in early, as there was evidence of good pasture for some time, but pastures are getting so they deceive us and just when we want them most they fail, and it was so this season in this locality. July 1 the peas were just beginning to pod and the oats to head out. On that day I cut the first feed, and I give you some figures just for what they are worth and not as proof positive of anything. We continued to feed from this plat once a day for twenty days, all they would eat, to the following stock: Fifty-four cows and heifers, not all in milk; these were fed the whole twenty days. The first eight days twenty calves and three aged bulls were fed about what they would clean up at a feed. As the milk from the herd is weighed at each milking, I give you the figures for the last seven days before feeding the peas and oats, 5,060 lbs. The first seven days of July the milk weighed 5,232 lbs, and the next seven days 5,091 lbs. This brought us up to July 15, when the peas and oats began to show the effect of the continued dry, hot weather, but the cows ate them clean until the last. July 21 we began feeding drilled corn on which the ears were well set but not much corn on them. Fed all the cows would eat up once a day for seven days when the milk record showed 4,459 lbs., an average of 638 lbs per day, against an average for fourteen days on peas and oats of 737 lbs, and to help out my hobby a little more, will state that on the 22d of July, the second day we fed corn, one heifer's milk was added to the mess, averaging 18 lbs. per day. After this date we began feeding twice a day of the corn, and with the help of two more of those special purpose heifers, brought the mess up to 700 lbs. per day. This is not all. It took less rods of land to feed of the peas and oats than of the corn, which was a good growth.

Potatoes Scientifically Raised.

A report sent out by the Cornell Experiment Station says: Such remarkable results in potato growing have been secured during the past three or four years on the Cornell Experiment Station grounds, that it has been thought desirable to test the methods employed here to ascertain whether they will give similar results on other soils and in other hands. It is hoped, also, by having the tests made by the farmers themselves on their own farms, to attract the attention of potato growers throughout the state, more emphatically than it has been possible to do by the work done at the station.

The land used for these experiments at the station is a gravelly soil which analysis has shown is carrying little more than half the potential plant-food found in average soils. It has not been manured or fertilized since the autumn of 1893, and has produced heavy crops of grain or forage each season till planted to potatoes.

In 1895, eight plants averaged at the rate of 352.6 bushels, ranging from 304 to 415 bushels, according to treatment. That year was especially favorable for potatoes and the average for the state was extra high, being 122 bushels per acre.

In 1896, nine plats averaged at the rate of 319.4 bushels, ranging from 245.8 to 350.3 bushels. The average yield of potatoes in New York for that year was 89 bushels per acre.

In 1897, ten plats averaged at the rate of 322 bushels per acre, ranging from 234 to 384 according to treatment. The average in the state for this year was 62 bushels per acre.

The experiments of 1898 were similar to those of 1897, and are described in Bulletin 156. The average yield of eleven plats was 292.3 bushels, ranging from 206 to 398.6 bushels, according to treatment.

Poisoning Rabbits.—The Port Lavacan tells of two brothers engaged in raising cabbage extensively in Calhoun county, who had suffered considerable loss from the ravages of rabbits. The following plan of destroying the pest was resorted to by the brothers and proved successful: They soak sweet potatoes in strychnine twenty-four hours. The potatoes are then cut up and pieces fastened on pointed sticks driven into the ground. This is tempting food for the rabbits and a few bites are always fatal. The destroyer dies on the spot and at best seldom gets over an acre away before dropping. More than a hundred rabbits have already been killed at the Kelty cabbage field and if the custom is generally followed the country will soon be entirely free from the pests. A piece of sweet potato at the end of each row is all that is necessary.

The Hungry Rhubarb Patch.—One of the first rhubarb growers I met was Seth L. Low. Mr. Low has three-fourths acre of rhubarb from which, he tells me, he has marketed twelve tons of the stalks in a season, writes a contributor to Rural New Yorker. I asked him how he obtained his big crops, and he told me it was purely a matter of feeding. Rhubarb is always hungry, and it must be fed with a good stable manure, and plenty of it. A deep, rich soil is needed to produce the heavy, juicy stalks that the market demands, and it appears impossible to manure the rhubarb patch too heavily.

A light meal in the morning, with a full meal at night, is better than feeding the fowls three times a day, as they should be so fed as to induce them to scratch and exercise, instead of remaining in a condition of idleness during the winter.

Good leghorn hens may be kept until they are five years old.

IN THE GREAT NORTHWEST.

Letter From the Kansas and Nebraska Delegates to Dauphin.

Prince Albert, Sask.,
17th August, 1898.

William McCreary, Esq., Immigration Commissioner, Winnipeg, Man: Sir—We, the undersigned delegates from Kansas and Nebraska, U. S. A., in reporting the results of our trip to Dauphin, and subsequently to Regina, Prince Albert and the middle Saskatchewan country, beg to say that our tickets were limited to 21 days, and as we had other large regions to visit, we could only spend a short time in the Dauphin country. We examined, however, the principal cultivated areas in the southern parts of township 25, range 19, the great wheat fields of Wishart, Buchanan, Owen, Smith, Ross, Sinclair, the Whitmores, Drinkwaters, etc., and subsequently, others to the north, and never, in our experience, have we seen finer grain. The whole country is watered by numerous streams flowing from the slopes of Riding Mountain, and excellent well water is found everywhere at from 9 to 18 feet. Extensive forests of spruce and tamarack cover the northern parts of the mountains, from which timber is manufactured in Dauphin and elsewhere, and sold at $12 a thousand at the mills. Wild hops and wild fruits are abundant, and ripen in the open air. Vegetation throughout is surprisingly luxuriant, and without hesitation we would rank the whole region amongst the best grain growing areas of the continent. The output of wheat last year was about 75,000 bushels; but this year it is estimated at over a million. Westward lie the homestead lands which now, and when fresh surveys are completed, will afford comfortable homes to thousands of diligent families. The great Gilbert Plains, also, we were unable to visit, where grain growing has been conducted with the best results for years, and which will become a vast wheat field as soon as a branch railway reaches there. Settlement is speeding in all these regions, reminding us indeed of the early days in our own states; and, as we have examined, since our visit to Dauphin, a portion of the great country lying south and east of Prince Albert, we can readily imagine the tide of immigration which will soon flow into the Canadian west.

Baltimore & Ohio Railroad's New Steel Rail.

The recent purchase of 28,000 tons of 85-pound steel rails by the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad brings the total amount of rail bought since March 1st, 1896 up to 115,300 tons, enough to relay 570 miles of track. Of the new rail ordered, eight thousand tons is to be laid on the lines west of the Ohio river, and twenty thousand tons is to be used as follows:

44 miles on the Philadelphia division.
11 miles on the Second division.
13 miles on the Third division.
30 miles on the Fourth division.
21 miles on the Fifth division.
10 miles on the Connellsville division, and 21 miles on the Pittsburg division.

Much of the rail that will be taken up is still good enough to be relaid on branches where traffic is not heavy. The Southwestern division, between Parkersburg and St. Louis, will have forty thousand tons of rail to lay this spring.

VOLUME XVIII. ST. HILAIRE, MINNESOTA, WEDNESDAY. MARCH 15, 1899. NUMBER 33

GEN. GOMEZ IMPEACHED

SUMMARY ACTION TAKEN BY THE CUBAN ASSEMBLY.

Failure in His Military Duties and Disobedience to the Assembly Are the Reasons Assigned for the Assembly's Action—The Acceptance by Gen. Gomez of the Propositions of Robert P. Porter for the Paying and Disbanding of the Cuban Troops Is Disapproved—Soldiers and Property Holders Generally Are With Gen. Gomez.

Havana, March 14.—The Cuban military assembly, in public session Saturday afternoon, impeached Gen. Maximo Gomez and removed him from his command as general-in-chief of the Cuban army, the first ballot taken resulting in 26 votes being cast in support of the motion to impeach and remove Gen. Gomez against 1 in opposition.

Gen. Gomez's main supporters were Gen Cespedes and Gen. Nunez. The original motion, which was introduced by Senor Manuel Sanguilly, provided for the abolition of the grade of general-in-chief, but an amendment was offered to this by Senor Aguerro, which read:

"To abolish the grade of general-in-chief and to remove Gen. Gomez for failure in his military duties and for disobedience to the assembly."

Senor Aguerro declared that Gomez was insubordinate and should be punished, and Senor Sanguilly insinuated that the general was a traitor to Cuba.

Much passion was evident in the speeches, in some of which Gomez was declared to have been delinquent in his duties and disobedient because he had accepted the proposition of Robert P. Porter, President McKinley's special emissary, without consulting the assembly; because he had taken upon himself the arrangements for the payment and disarming of the Cuban troops independent of the assembly, and because he had declared to the assembly that he would observe its rulings in so far as he considered them beneficial to Cuba.

The assembly then declared that the $3,000,000 is insufficient, and has not yet accepted the proposition.

The discussion of this question will soon be taken up, now that Gen. Gomez has been removed.

The position of the assembly is notably weak, as the military administration supports Gen. Gomez, as also do the planters and property owners, who are tired of the Cuban army, which subsists half upon charity and half upon contributions levied by means of threats.

Gen. Gomez received a telephone message announcing the assembly's action. He answered calmly:

"All right. I enjoy the situation."

He then came to Havana to dine with friends.

Gov. Gen. Brooke when seen was much interested to learn the details of the assembly's proceedings. He said he could not express an opinion as to the effect of the assembly's action upon the future relations between Gomez and the United States, particularly in the matter of disbursing the $3,000,000 offered by Washington to the Cuban troops as a condition of disbandment, but the impression seems to be among the American authorities that as the assembly has never been officially recognized by the United States government its action, so far as Washington is concerned, will not amount to more than the resolutions of any other body of individuals. The assembly is being strongly censured by Cubans on all sides, and there were popular demonstrations in favor of the deposed commander-in-chief, the crowds shouting "Long live Gomez!" "Death to the assembly!"

Gen. Gomez during the day received numerous visitors, all of whom assured him of their affection and loyalty and that the declaration by the assembly could not represent even the army, as the elections which gave them their present positions are voidable for illegality and political jobbery. There is no doubt that the majority of the public support him as against the assembly.

CONSULS PROTEST.

London, March 14.—A Shanghai dispatch says the Russian consul has joined the German, French and English consuls in their protests against the extension of trading concessions until the Russian demands have been satisfied. The Russian consul protested against concessions of land in Shanghai to England, America and other foreign interests which do not include French concessions. The French government maintained its claim that the ground occupied by English and American traders is outside the limits of the old concessions.

TRAINS COLLIDE.

Thre Killed and Four Injured in a Wreck on the Burlington Road.

Lincoln, Neb., March 14.—A blinding storm of snow and wind was the cause of a bad collision on the Burlington railroad two miles west of here, resulting in the death of three persons and the serious injuring of four others.

Chicago Laid Up for Repairs.

Hampton, Va., March 14.—The cruiser Chicago has arrived at Hampton Roads from Havana. She will go into the yard at Newport News for repairs. The Mead has also arrived. She is bound for Cuba to pay off the Cuban soldiers.

Wellington, N. Z., March 14.—Five persons were killed and forty injured in a collision between two excursion trains near Rakaia, on Rakaia river, South Ireland.

REBELS ARE IN FULL RETREAT.

Gen. Wheaton Sweeps Everything Before Him.

Manila, March 14.—Gen. Wheaton's newly formed divisional brigade advanced at 7 o'clock this morning at San Pedro Macati for the purpose of corralling the enemy. It is now moving on Pasig, meeting with slight resistance, as the rebels are in full retreat. A gunboat is clearing the jungle along the river banks which have been carried as far as Guadeloupe. The purpose of the move is to clear the country to Laguna de Bay.

The Filipinos apparently had planned an attack upon the lines of Gen. Otis and Gen. Hale yesterday morning, but their courage seemed to fail, though they fired signals and afterward kept up the fusillade along the American front for an hour. Our troops, in obedience to orders, refrained from shooting with the exception of two companies of newly arrived men, who replied until they had suppressed a regiment of Aguinaldo's red brigade. The body of rebels seemed under better leadership than most of the others, and a white man was seen among the officers endeavoring to lead the attack, but apparently all efforts to induce them to leave the trenches were futile. They believe that the

The Natives Are Cowed.

The presence of the families of officers is discouraged, and many are leaving on board the transports, some going to Japan for temporary residence. Gen. Otis has remarked: "Manila is no place for women. This is a war—not a picnic."

The British cruiser Narcissus has sailed for various ports in the island of Luzon to take on board British subjects who desire protection.

The Twentieth and Twenty-second infantry and seven companies of the Oregon volunteers marched to San Pedro Macati to join Gen. Wheaton's new divisional brigade, which is to consist of the Twentieth and Twenty-second infantry, eight companies of the Washington volunteers, seven companies of the Oregon volunteers, three troops of cavalry (mounted) and a battery of light artillery. Although the rain that fell this morning has cooled the temperature to 82 deg., many dropped from the ranks overcome by the heat. Several soldiers were sunstruck in the streets of Manila this morning. Most of them were men not yet acclimated. Brig Gen. Charles King has recovered from his indisposition and resumed command at the San Pedro Macati bridge. The enemy are very active north of the river, though not doing any firing just now.

LEFT TO THE MEN.

The Thirteenth Regiment Can Come Home If They Wish.

Washington, March 14.—The Minnesota Volunteer Auxiliary association is again insisting that the Thirteenth regiment be brought home from Manila at once. The matter was placed in the hands of Senator Davis and he called at the war department and had a talk with Adjt. Gen. Corbin. Senator Davis was assured that the Minnesota boys would be returned on the first expedition that brings troops home from Manila, provided the regiment is anxious to come. It has been the policy of the war department all along to ascertain the wishes of volunteer organizations relative to being mustered out. As a matter of fact there are a large number of the Minnesota men who want to stay in the Philippines until a great final victory is won and Aguinaldo either surrenders or is captured.

WHEELER WANTS TO FIGHT.

General Hopes the President Will Send Him to the Philippines.

Washington, March 14.—Gen. Joseph Wheeler saw the president Saturday concerning his future status. Subsequently he said that while the question of his standing in the army has not been definitely decided, it was probable that he would not remain in the service. He thought the president would be unable to find a place for him and he was not pushing the matter. "But I would like to remain in the service," he said with animation, "and be sent to the Philippines, where there is some fighting. I would not care so much to stay in the army if I had to remain in this country."

OPPOSES RELEASE OF PRISONERS.

Aguinaldo Redoubles His Efforts to Keep Them.

Madrid, March 14.—It is reported here that Aguinaldo has redoubled his opposition to the Spanish prisoners now in the hands of the insurgents because Gen. Polavieja, now minister of war, caused Dr. Rizal, who drew up the statutes of the Philippine league, and was, therefore, practically the instigator of the revolt in the islands, to be shot in December, 1896.

KING OSCAR WILL STAY.

Not to Return to Stockholm Before the Middle of May.

Stockholm, March 14.—It is announced that King Oscar, who is now at Biarritz, will not return to Stockholm before the middle of May.—A bill has been introduced in the lower house of the Swedish parliament to remove the customs duty of 25 cents a bushel imposed upon corn. Consul General Winslow is endeavoring to convince the legislators that if Sweden admits corn duty free, it will become possible to export meats in quantity.

Paris, March 14.—The Eclair confirms the report that the government inquiry regarding the explosion of the naval powder magazine at La Goubron has shown that it was not of accidental origin and much credence is now given to the rumor that it was an anarchist outrage.

BUY SAN JUAN HILL.

Scheme to Have the United States Buy It and Turn It Into a ark.

Santiago, Cuba, March 14.—A movement is on foot here to persuade the United States government to purchase San Juan Hill to be used as a public park. The idea is that a certain portion could be set apart to be used as an American cemetery and the site of a mortuary church. A few thousand dollars spent upon the rest would make a beautiful recreation ground, including a half-mile race track, a base ball diamond and tennis grounds. Gen. Leonard Wood, military governor, and other prominent Americans favor the project, believing if the land can be obtained at a reasonable figure the suggestion should be carried out in memory of the heroic charge of the American troops.

VICTORIA VISITS.

London, March 14.—Queen Victoria started for the continent on Saturday. The sea was calm. The princess of Wales, Princess Victoria of Wales and Prince Charles of Denmark also left England, by way of Dover and Calais, on their way to aris. Immense crowds awaited the arrival in the Boulogne harbor of the special steamer bearing the queen, while the town and all the vessels in the port were decorated with bunting and the route from the quay to the railway station was lined with troops. A brilliant gathering of military and naval officers and prominent civil officials boarded the steamer and were introduced to the queen, who, speaking in French, cordially thanked them for the welcome extended to her.

FIRE WALL FELL.

Completely Demolishing an Adjoining Building, Causing a Loss of $215,000.

Chicago, March 14.—The massive fire wall on the eight-story structure, 207-211 Jackson boulevard, which was partly destroyed by fire Saturday night, fell almost without warning yesterday, completely demolishing the adjoining building and setting the ruins on fire. Loss on building and contents is estimated at $215,000; fully insured. So sudden was the collapse of the wall that a score of firemen barely escaped being caught under the mass of masonry.

VETERANS' ACT VOID.

Statute Giving Them Preferment in Civil Service Appointments Declared Illegal.

Chicago, March 14.—Judge Gibbons has declared that the act of the legislature of Illinois passed in 1897, giving veterans of the Civil War preferment over other candidates in civil service examinations, is void, because it gives a special or exclusive privilege and because it is inconsistent with the basic principles underlying the nature of our institutions. An appeal was allowed to secure a final adjudication in the supreme court.

DEWEY'S HEALTH.

His Constitution Is Unimpaired, but He Needs Rest.

Manila, March 14.—The reports of ill health of Admiral Dewey have been greatly exaggerated. One year, however, in this Eastern climate, with the severe cares, not only of battle, but of subsequent difficult diplomatic situation, tired the admiral out and necessitates a well-earned rest. His constitution is still unimpaired, but no man can stand the strain of affairs here indefinitely.

Charged With Embezzlement.

Boston, March 14.—W. A. Doucette, 22 years of age, was arrested at St. Cecilia church, Belvidere street, on a charge of embezzling $4,000 from the collection box of the church. Marked bills were found on his person.

Oshkosh Flooded.

Oshkosh, Wis., March 14.—A thaw, a freeze, a sleet storm and a heavy rain, occurring in the order given, have resulted in flooding various portions of the city. Many houses are surrounded by water.

THE LEGISLATURE

Business Transacted by Minnesota Solons.

St. Paul, March 7.—After clearing up the calendar the house worked in committee of the whole all day long. There were no committee reports and only four bills introduced. Final action was taken on but two bills. Senator Collier's bill providing that the summer meeting of the county commissioners shall begin on the third Monday in June, instead of the second Monday in July, was finally killed. The remainder of the time was given over to Mr. Dwinnell's proposition to increase the salary of the supreme court reporter from $2,000 to $3,500. It was finally determined to make the figure $3,000, an amendment to that effect being accepted. In that form the bill was recommended to pass. Senator Greer's bill for the appointment of a tax commission to revise the tax laws was recommended for indefinite postponement.

The following bills were passed:

Authorizing county commissioners to allow clerk hire not to exceed $500 to all judges of probate whose salary exceeds $1,000.—Amending the law fixing the fees of notaries public so as to allow them but 50 cents for copies in protest cases.—Authorizing elective boards of library directors to fill vacancies that may arise.—Allowing the expenditure of road taxes and labor on cartways.—Relating to hail insurance.—Appropriating $2,000 annually for the salary of the second assistant attorney general.

The following bills were introduced:

To increase the facilities for the transfer of traffic and to provide for the freer transportation of cars over connecting lines.—Authorizing the holding of certain township elections within the limits of villages, and certain township officers to be held by electors of the villages.—To repeal chapter 48, Laws of 1895, relating to roads.

The Senate.

The session of the senate yesterday afternoon, following adjournment over Sunday, was devoted principally to picking up odds and ends and the introduction of bills. The committee on rules took advantage of the opportunity to make a report, which was adopted, on matters submitted to it during the season, and several minor amendments were made to the senate rules of procedure.

The following bills were introduced:

To provide for a uniform form of affidavits.—To amend the laws of 1878 relating to cemeteries.—To amend the constitution relating to the taxation of unused lands—To authorize mutual insurance companies to organize as stock companies.—To appropriate funds for the state reformatory.—To amend the laws relating to the stopping of passenger trains at county seats.—To amend the statutes of 1894 relating to powers of county commissioners.—To authorize boards of education to issue bonds to refund outstanding bonds.—To amend the Laws of 1897 relating to delinquent personal property taxes.—To amend the Statutes of 1894, relating to the discharge of mortgage records.—To amend the Statutes of 1894, relating to drainage of wet lands.—Proposing an amendment to the state constitution, so as to give the people of the state authority to propose measures which must be enacted by the legislature and referred back for the people to adopt or reject by popular vote.

St. Paul, March 8.—The Somerville senate bill, requiring all foreign corporations to incorporate under the state laws, was repassed yesterday by the senate, and is now awaiting the signature of Gov. Lind to become a law. The house amendments were concurred in, but not without a fight. For the most part these were of minor importance, being directed more toward shaping the verbiage than for aught else. The amendment of greatest importance exempts from the application of the law agents of foreign banks. The bill also exempts the Duluth shipping interests, manufacturers of canned goods and agricultural implements and fancy stock breeders.

The following bills were introduced:

Relating to state aid to higher education.—Appropriating $2,500 for the erection of a monument in commemoration of the victims of the Hinckley fire.—Relating to administration and distribution of estates of intestates.—Relating to the foreclosure of mortgages, etc.—To provide for a custodian of public documents and supplies in the office of the secretary of state, etc.—Giving the board of county commissioners in all counties of the state having a population of 200,000 inhabitants or over, the exclusive control of the expenditures of all moneys appropriated by such boards out of the general road and bridge fund.—Fixing the compensation of judges of probate and clerks of the probate court.—Relating to garnishment; exempts property in the hands of common carriers for transportation.—Relating to proceedings at hearings of supervisors in the matter of laying out, altering and discontinuing roads.—To authorize the common council or other governing body of municipalities to reduce and rebate assessments for local improvements in counties where the provisions of chapter 290 of the General Laws of 1897, have been made applicable.

The following bills were introduced:

To amend the statutes relating to homestead holdings.—To amend the statutes relating to the establishment of model schools in normal schools.—To amend the statutes relating to the draining of shallow lakes.—To provide for a uniform rate of taxation in all villages.—Relating to the preservation of the right of homestead claims.—To amend the laws relating to mutual fire insurance companies.—To transfer to the state the special fund of $1,473 to redeem certain bank notes of banks now out of existence, said fund being in the hands of the public examiner.—Relating to the bonds of county officers.

The House.

The question of the care of the insane wards of the state occupied practically all of the house session yesterday. The Grondahl bill, providing for the adoption of the Wisconsin system of county care for chronic insane in a considerably modified form, and the Staples bill, looking to the erection of so-called district hospitals on the site already owned by the state at Anoka and a designated site to be purchased at Hastings, were set for consideration together. The discussion yesterday, which occupied about five hours, was entirely devoted to the former bill. The merits of the Staples bill were not once touched upon. The special order was continued until 11 o'clock to-day.

St. Paul, March 9.—By a majority that was simply crushing in its magnitude the house yesterday rejected the Grondahl bill providing for the care of the chronic insane by counties, and probably settled for all time to come the policy of the state in caring for the most unfortunate class of its wards. When the roll was called the bill received but 15 votes, while 91 members of the house recorded themselves in the negative.

The following bills were passed:

Authorizing the holding of the elections of townships in certain cases within the limits of certain villages, and the holding of township offices by electors of the village.—Increasing the compensation of the supreme court reporter.—Restoring the annual appropriation of $20,000 for support of the soldiers' home.—Providing for a boiler inspector for each congressional district.—Allowing townships to own property in incorporated villages for town hall purposes and to hold elections therein.

The following bills were introduced:

To regulate bicycle riding outside the limits of cities and villages.—Relating to consolidation of railroads.—Prohibiting the diminution of the term of office or the salary of any public office during the term.—For the appointment of a mine inspector.—To provide for the care and treatment of crippled and deformed children.—To prescribe the duties of the deputy state treasurer.

The house spent a couple of hours in committee of the whole at the close of the afternoon session, Mr. Foss in the chair, devoting all the time to the Snyder bill for the creation in the three large cities of a teachers' retirement fund. The result was the defeat of the bill by a vote of 52 to 41.

The Senate.

The senate devoted most of its time yesterday to consideration of the measures relating to beet sugar bounty, insane hospitals and the proposition to place state fee officers on a salary basis.

The beet sugar industry received a severe setback by the passage of the Batz bill to repeal the law of 1895, under which a bounty of 1 cent a pound was offered for the manufacture of beet sugar, and again, in the slaughtering of the Knatvold bills of the present session which proposed the limitation of the bounty to $30,000 a year and its equal division between the manufacturer and the farmers that grow the beets.

The insane hospital question was easily disposed of. The senate seems to have made up its mind to let the house take the initiative in this matter, and yesterday afternoon when the several propositions of this nature that were made a special order for 2:30 o'clock in the afternoon was reached, the senate followed the lead of the house and postponed consideration of the measures until 2:30 o'clock Thursday afternoon, March 16.

The proposition to put state fee officers on a salary basis was under discussion most of the forenoon. It was decided to investigate the reports of fee officers' earnings as recently made to the senate.

St. Paul, March 10.—Senator Thompson of Fillmore county yesterday introduced a measure embodying the so-called "colony plan" of caring for the state's insane, which is advocated by the superintendents and resident directors of the insane asylums of the state. The plan is proposed as a substitute for the county plan, and, also, for the so-called district proposition, which has in view the establishment of two more comparatively large institutions, one at Anoka and the other at Hastings. The Thompson bill provides for the construction of an equal number of detached cottages on each of the three large insane asylum sites at St. Peter, Rochester and Fergus Falls.

The following bills were introduced:

Relating to appeals from the decision of county commissioners in the matter of claims.—To prohibit the sale of prison-made goods without their being plainly marked.—To amend the statutes relating to the pay of county commissioners.—To amend the statutes so as to give county commissioners $3 a day compensation.—To regulate the incorporation and management of building and loan and savings associations.

The House.

The house decided yesterday in committee of the whole to report favorably on the bill prepared by Adjt. Gen. Lambert providing for the payment of the national guardsmen who were accepted as volunteers by the general government, at Camp Ramsey during April and May of last year, at the rate provided by the military code of the state for national guardsmen in actual service, for the period between the order of the governor mobilizing the guard and the muster of the three regiments.

The following bills were introduced:

To repeal chapter 395, Laws of 1897, relating to school boards.—To amend section 27 and 48, chapter 22, Laws of 1893, as amended, defining a legal newspaper.—Relating to the taxation of insurance companies.—To appropriate $5,000 for 1899 and $7,000 annually thereafter for the use of the state dairy and food commission in enforcing the laws relating to the adulteration of foods.—To prevent the taking of fish from lakes within the limits of incorporated cities between Nov. 1 and March 1.—Relating to the composition, duties and membership of the state agricultural society.—To amend the laws relating to game and fish.—To construct three cottages for the insane and to appropriate money therefor.

St. Paul, March 11.—When the senate was called to order yesterday forenoon Senator Horton called up his concurrent resolution petitioning President McKinley to recall from the Philippines the Thirteenth Minnesota volunteer regiment, and it was adopted by a unanimous vote.

Considerable time was spent in committee of the whole and a number of bills were acted upon.

The following bills were passed: To amend the laws relating to town elections and powers of supervisors—To amend section 1050, Statutes of 1894, so as to allow a justice of the peace to hold his office in a different ward from that in which he is living; relates only to cities of between 2,000 and 15,000 population that are incorporated under the general statutes.

The following bills were introduced: To amend the Statutes of 1894 relating to limitation of the time of beginning actions—To prevent the manufacture and sale of adulterated and unwholesome dairy products.

The House.

Three bills designed to straighten out the taxation at Duluth were recommended to pass. A large number of other bills were acted on in committee of the whole. None of them were of any great general interest.

The following bills were introduced: To prevent fraud in the sale of dairy products—Directing the railroad and warehouse commission to investigate the reasonableness of certain rates—To amend chapter 107, Laws of 1883, relating to trust companies—To amend chapter 318, Laws of 1897, creating a board of state drainage commissioners—To amend section 5, chapter 1, Session Laws of 1878, relating to exemptions from taxation.

St. Paul, March 13.—The house Saturday emphatically rejected the proposition contained in Mr. Staples' bill creating a legislative committee of five members to conduct an investigation during the recess into the conduct of the correctional and charitable institutions of this and other states, with a view to possible legislation in the direction of a state board of control.

The following bills were passed:

Providing for a revision of the list of delinquent road tax by road overseers before the same is returned to the town supervisors.—Providing for the payment of arrears of pay to the enlisted men of the national guard.—Providing for a Minnesota standard policy for mutual hail insurance companies.—Providing for judgment and costs, pending stay of execution, shall draw 7 per cent interest.—Making tax receipts, stubs, etc., prima facie evidence of taxes paid and by whom paid, in actions concerning rights to real property.—Providing for a second edition of 10,000 copies of the legislative manual.—Enlarging the powers of councils in villages of more than 3,000 inhabitants relative to the removal of snow, etc., from sidewalks.—Providing a method for dedicating land for public roads or cartways.—Providing that no occupant of a public street or other public grounds may acquire title by adverse possession.—Making it a misdemeanor to dock the tail of a horse.

The following bills were introduced:

To prevent the desecration, mutilation or improper use of the flag of the United States or the flag of the State of Minnesota.—Enabling owners of land to test the validity of tax certificates at any time.—To amend the Laws of 1895, regulating the use of pound nets.

RELATIONS ARE STRAINED.

Sweden and Norway are Not in Harmony.

Christiana, March 14.—Norwegians are not pleased with the temporary government of the crown prince, who is much more strict than his father, and has now shown that he will not allow Norwegians any little demonstrations in favor of independence. He has decided that Sweden and Norway will send only one representative to the peace conference at The Hague. This representative will probably be a Swede.

Some days ago the strained relations between Swenden and Norway were pointed out during a debate in the storthing, and Col. Bassoe took the opportunity of saying that the Norwegian fortresses were good for nothing.

The minister of war hotly contradicted the statement, and several other members also criticized Col. Bassoe, but the whole affair is causing great uneasiness here, as the mere suggestion of war between the sister countries in parliament is proof of the jealousy which exists.

King Oscar has just had his life insured in the Sweedish Company Norden. The premium is 37,000 kroners per year. I understand that some of the American companies competed without getting the chance. King Oscar of Sweden is seventy years old this year, having been born Jan. 21, 1829.

RAILROADS CRIPPLED.

Snow Storm Interfers With the Running of Trains.

Milwaukee, Wis., March 14.—Most of the railroads between Milwaukee and St. Paul are in a crippled condition on account of the storm in the northwestern part of the state. Throughout the Wisconsin valley districts large drifts are reported, the snow being from one to four feet on the level and drifts much higher. The Wisconsin Central trains were all several hours late. The tracks between Milwaukee and St. Paul and Minneapolis, however, are reported open by both the Milwaukee and the Central roads, though the latter is badly hampered north of Abbottsford.

The snow that accompanied the blizzard is not the only condition that railroads are fighting. Many of the streams in Eastern Minnesota and Northwestern Wisconsin overflowed Friday and Saturday and in territory west and north of La Crosse there are bad washouts.

A $250,000 Fire.

Jacksonville, Fla., March 14.—Almost the entire plant of the Cummer Lumber company, four miles north of here, was destroyed by fire, entailing a loss of over $250,000, with 80 per cent insurance.

"Goodyear Rubber Company Believes in Expansion."

The Goodyear Rubber company came to St. Paul in 1885, locating at 181 East Third street, subsequently moving into the stores Nos. 98, 100 and 102 East Seventh street, the buildings having been extended on the first floor in order to give them facilities for their wholesale business.

The jobbing business of the company in St. Paul has increased steadily each year for the past four years, and they have now rented the upper part of the adjoining building, giving them two floors of Nos. 92, 94 and 96—size of rooms 50x90 feet—which really adds 50 per cent to the space they formerly had for carrying stock. The variety and quantity of goods necessary to meet the demands of the trade in this section of the country made it necessary for the company to have more room. Their brands of goods have become well and favorably known; so that in many instances dealers are seeking the agency for the sale of the goods.

Any dealers who have not had business relations with this company can obtain, by sending for it, one of their catalogues of overshoes mackintoshes, mechanical goods or sundries. Their catalogues are furnished only to dealers. Ninety-five per cent of the business of the company at St. Paul is wholesale.

A Bush Woman.

Close to the wagon we met a bush woman, one of Indowyoka's people, reduced by starvation to the most emaciated and pitiable condition. Her husband had been killed by lions some days before, though she herself had escaped with her life. On her back and shoulders were the marks where the same lion had ripped away great strips of flesh. Long clots of blood had dried on her body; the wounds had not even been washed. I gave her some meat, which she seized upon and at once ate ravenously. The bones were almost through her filthy skin; her little beady eyes set close together under a low, retreating forehead, her flattened nose and large protruding lips, concealing what little chin she possessed, gave her a look most uncanny and repellent.

Altogether more like an animal than a human being, she seemed to me the lowest type of womankind that it has ever been my fate to look on. There are numbers of bushmen and their wives who live in this miserable condition, wandering through the veldt with no other means of subsistence than such trash as wild roots and berries. Some of the men have guns and ammunition, and they spend their whole time in shooting. When they kill a buck within reach of water—say ten miles—the whole family congregates on the spot, sits round the body and gorges itself until every scrap of flesh and skin has disappeared.—Blackwood's Magazine.

The First John Jacob Astor.

Although Mr Astor had led a life mainly devoted to business interests, he found great pleasure in the society of literary men, says Mrs. Julia Ward Howe in The Atlantic. Dr Cogswell made his home with us for some years after the closing of his famous school, but finally went to reside with Mr. Astor, attracted partly by the latter's promise to endow a public library in the city of New York. This was accomplished after some delay, and the doctor was for many years director of the Astor library. He used to relate some humorous anecdotes of excursions which he made with Mr. Astor. In the course of one of these the two gentlemen took supper together at a hotel recently opened. Mr Astor remarked: "This man will never succeed."

"Why not?" inquired the other.

"Don't you see," replied the financier, "what large lumps of sugar he puts in the sugar bowl!"

Once, as they were walking slowly to a pilotboat which the old gentleman had chartered for a trip down the harbor, Dr. Cogswell said, "Mr Astor, I have just been calculating that this boat costs you 25 cents a minute." Mr Astor at once hastened his pace, reluctant to waste so much money.

Resuscitated the Pet Kitten.

A well known East End doctor tells a story of his experimenting days when he was at college. A girl whom he knew and admired had a pet kitten that in frisking around broke one of its hind legs. The fair mistress was in despair and in extremity asked her medical student admirer to try his skill on the pet. He consented and took his father's messenger boy, who was used to the surgery, to apply the anesthetic. The doctor made the amputation and was sewing up the flap beautifully, when the boy gave a yell and said the cat was dead. It had been chloroformed to death.

The doctor knew that the demise of the pet would kill his hopes with the mistress. He had only one alternative, artificial respiration, and seizing the forepaws he set to work. In ten minutes he saw he was saved, for the kitten began to breathe. It was restored, minus one of its clawers, to the girl, who never knew how near it came to being buried in the back garden.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

A Wall Paper Trick.

"An old fellow came along the other day," says a Philadelphia restaurant keeper, "who gave me a pointer I had never dreamed of. He came in and offered to patch up all the bad places in my wall paper and so skillfully that I couldn't find a place after it was done. Well, I hadn't any patching to do, but I bet the old chap a quarter and his dinner that he couldn't do what he said. I tore a patch out of the wall paper, and when he was through eating he went to work.

"The first thing he did was to cut a piece of blank wall paper big enough to cover the hole and paste it over. Next he took a brush and painted a ground the same as the other paper. Then, kick me if he didn't take other brushes and colors and paint in the design of the paper. I willingly yielded up a quarter with the dinner and was satisfied when I saw the alacrity and ease with which the fellow did his work."—New York Tribune.

Wise Lad.

"What will happen to you if you are a good little boy?" asked the kindly old woman.

"I'll get a stick of candy for being good."

"And what will happen to you if you are bad?"

"I'll get two sticks of candy for promising to try to be good."—Chicago Post.

Freddie's Papa—What do you intend to do with the hole in that doughnut when you get all the cake eaten from around it?

Germany has a superabundance of race horses and an insufficiency of heavy horses. The latter are annually imported in large numbers, while the others are a drug in the market.

Bamboo pens still retain their hold in India, where they have been in use for more than 1,000 years.

A Shoemaker's Accounts.

There was a shoemaker I met not long ago, says a writer in Chambers' Journal, who had a most elaborate method of keeping his "books." Against the wall of his workshop he had a large board erected, which he painted black. Into this board he used to drive hobnails, tacks, brass and steel rivets and other nails used in his trade to represent work done. For instance, the soling of a pair of boots would be represented by a small piece of leather tacked on to the board by means of a brass rivet, but if the boots were hobnailed, then a hobnail was used instead of the brass rivet. A steel rivet indicated a patch on the sole, and a patch on the upper was shown by the addition of a piece of thin leather. New boots were shown drawn in chalk, as were also the hieroglyphics representing the customers' names.

Some peculiarity of manner, dress or surroundings was chosen to indicate whose account it was. The parson's account was placed under the rough drawing of a church; the curate, who wore glasses, was represented by a sketch of them; a couple of circles, one blank and one with a dot in the center, stood for the postman, who had lost one eye. A beer barrel was the innkeeper's sign; the village pump did duty for the milkman, while the schoolmaster was personated by the drawing of a cane. The old man was a great wag, but he never had his accounts challenged in spite of their quaintness.

Concerning Appendicitis.

Dr. H. R. Lemen of Alton, Ills., says: "I often meet people who have such a whole some fear of appendicitis that they do not eat grapes, tomatoes, figs or fruits containing little seeds because of a fear that these seeds will lodge in the appendix and cause appendicitis.

"Whenever I hear a person say he denies himself fruits because of this fear I take occasion to assure him that it is useless to take any such precautions. If you like fruit, eat it, for appendicitis, seven in ten instances, is due to other things than seeds. Little particles of food of any kind can lodge in the appendix and produce appendicitis, even a bread crumb being capable of it. In addition, a great many cases are caused by something entirely outside the appendix, something causing the inflammation.

"To all I would say, 'Go ahead and eat anything you like, for all precautions you may take are not going to save you from appendicitis if you are going to have it. The inexplicable things to which the majority of cases are attributable cannot be guarded against, and it is useless to fight the minority.'"

Sam Hodgkins' Will.

"Sam Hodgkins," says the Lewiston Journal, "was in his day and generation a much respected citizen of Hancock, and, like his son Dudley, better known as Uncle Dudley, was well known all over the eastern portion of the county. An amusing story is told by some of his old acquaintances to an eastern Maine paper of how he once made his will. It happened to be done at a time when the old man was in one of his happiest and most generous moods, and, realizing no doubt the uncertainty of human life, concluded that he would bequeath to his seven sons—Dudley, Zechariah, Moses, Sam, Shem, Gee and Elliot—his worldly goods and possessions.

"He was very anxious that the will should be legal, and was careful lest any of his children might be left unmentioned in some way. So the old man drew up the instrument, in part like this: 'Half to Dud, half to Zack and all the rest to Moses. Shem is blind, Sam is poor, Gee has moved to the Falls (Sullivan Falls) and Elliot is the baby.' As the will was never probated it answered the purpose just as well as any."

Bismarck and the French.

Bismarck had no great opinion of the French. He believed that they are too easily swayed by popular catchwords. "Talk to a Frenchman about liberty, equality and fraternity, tell him that his nation is the greatest in the world, and you can do anything with him. You can impress the French more than any other people if you tell them it is done in the name of freedom."

Asked his opinion in the case of a certain French spy, he said: "It's a sad case. You've got to hang him, but do it with the utmost politeness, so as not to hurt his feelings."—Exchange.

Equal to a Fairy Story.

Bilkins was seated in an easy chair enjoying his paper while his wife was busy with fancy work. Bobby, the 4-year-old son of the household, on the floor was fighting a battle with tin soldiers. Presently the little fellow tired of his play and exclaimed:

"Mamma, won't you please tell me a fairy story?"

"I don't feel like it tonight, Bobby," said Mrs. Bilkins. "Go and get your papa to tell you what detained him down town so late last night."—Ohio State Journal.

Missed the Combination.

He is one of those gushing old beaus who think flattery the key to favor with the gentler sex. The other evening he was at a reception with his wife, and they met the handsome Miss Blank, at whom he fired a whole battery of compliments. Then turning to his wife he said, "It's a good thing I didn't meet her before I married you, my dear."

"Indeed it is," she smiled sweetly, "for her. I congratulate Miss Blank."—Exchange.

A Delicate Distinction.

"How much does your position pay?" asked the rural relative.

"I don't know as I could figure it up offhand," answered Senator Sorghum.

"You surely know your own salary?"

"Yes, but that isn't what you asked me."—Washington Star.

SCHOOL DISTRICT NOTICE

Whereas, a petition duly signed and the signatures thereto duly acknowledged, has been duly presented to the Board of County Commissioners of Red Lake County, Minnesota at a session of said Board held on the 30th day of January, A. D. 1899, asking for the formation of a new school District to be composed of the following described territory, to-wit:

Sections 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 34, 35 and 36 in Twp. 151 of Range 40.

Representing:

(1) That there are 160 persons now residing within the boundaries of said purposed new district and no other or greater number.

(2) That there are 26 children of school age residing therein.

Now therefore notice is hereby given that a hearing of the parties interested in the matter of said petition will be granted at the next session of said Board, commencing on the 27th day of March, A. D. 1899, at the office of the County Auditor in Red Lake Falls in said County.

By order of the Board of county commissioners.

ADAM ZEH,
Clerk of Board.

A FEW DATES.

During the month of March there will be a number of first-class attractions at the Grand Opera House, Crookston.

On March 22nd, John Griffith, well known through his former visits in "Faust" will be seen in a romantic drama. Mr. Griffith is a great favorite throughout this section of the country.

Tuesday afternoon, March 28th, Sousa's full concert band will give one of their incomparable concerts. Reduced rates will be made on all railroads and trains run so as to allow everyone to attend. This attraction will draw the largest audience that have ever attended a theater in Crookston.

Wednesday March 29th, that great actor, Lewis Morrison, will present his version of "Faust." Mr. Morrison ranks as the greatest Mephisto who has ever appeared on the stage, and his visit to Crookston will give all an opportunity to see this great play presented by the actor who has made it famous.

Every farmer who writes a letter occasionally should get envelopes with his name and address printed in the corner. We will furnish 100 of the best quality printed in any style for the small sum of 75 cts. Send in your order.

FOOLED IN A HORSE TRADE.

This Animal Possessed Several Remarkable Traits.

A prominent English landlord was one day riding across a common adjacent to his preserves when he overtook one of his tenants who was also mounted. After the usual salutations they rode on in silence for some minutes, when the tenant slightly spurred his horse, a likely animal, whereupon it dropped to its knees.

"What's the matter with your horse?" asked his lordship. The embarrassed tenant remarked by way of explanation that his steed always acted that way when there was game to be found.

A moment later, to the tenant's satisfaction and surprise, a frightened hare jumped out of some bushes near by.

This so impressed the landlord that he at once drove a bargain by which he secured the tenant's broken kneed beast in exchange for his own fine animal, perfectly saddled. With much agility the tenant leaped to his new horse, and all went well until they came to a small stream, whereat the landlord's new nag immediately balked. A drive home with the spurs brought it again to its knees.

"Hello, what's up now? There's no game here," said his lordship.

"True, my lord," was the ready reply, "but I forgot to tell you 'ee's as good for fish as 'ee is for game."—San Francisco Argonaut.

The Audience Got Angry.

There was a scene of wild excitement during the last week of May, 1892, at the Gaiety, London, and all owing to the singular behavior of a policeman. Two popular entertainers were on the stage, and one of them asked the audience a little conundrum, "Why is a policeman an utter scoundrel?"

A gentleman in blue who was apparently on duty in the body of the theater at once took offense. He jumped on to the stage and, seizing the offender, attempted to drag him off.

The audience rose in indignation. Men shook their fists and shouted, "What has he done?" One frenzied young lady in the front of the gallery seized a tumbler and would have thrown it at the policeman if her arm had not been arrested.

The policeman then dragged his captive off the stage amid the hisses and shouts of the audience. But anger was speedily changed to laughter when Mr. Policeman reappeared with his victim and stood revealed as one of the Cosmo trio. I never saw an audience so completely taken in.—London Correspondence.

Pigs and Witchcraft.

Two women of the lower class were quarreling violently the other evening in Heavitree, a suburb of Exeter. One yelled to the other: "You wretch, you always keep a black and a white pig, so that you can witch us! You ought to be scragged!" The one so addressed, it seems, has lived in her cottage some 20 years. She has during this period, it is said, always kept a couple of pigs, one of each color, and her neighbors consider she does this so that she may enjoy the very questionable powers of witchcraft. No butcher in the neighborhood will buy her pigs, as if he was known to do so he would certainly lose the local custom upon which he relies.—Notes and Queries.

Mortgage Foreclosure Sale.

Whereas, default has been made in the condition of a certain mortgage, made, executed and delivered by Kate Wilmes and Michael Wilmes, her husband, mortgagors, to Anna Erlesson, mortgagee, dated the 17th day of October 1895 and recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of Polk County, Minnesota on the 21st day of October 1895, at four o'clock p. m. in Book 56 of Mortgages, on page 183, thereof conveying and mortgaging lands and premises therein described as follows: All those tracts or parcels of land lying and being in the county of Polk and State of Minnesota described as follows to-wit: Lots numbered 21 and 26 in Champagne and Dow's addition to the village, now city of Red Lake Falls, according to the plat thereof on file and of record in the office of the register of Deeds in and for the county of Polk and State of Minnesota; and

Whereas, that part of said Polk county, in which said land and premises were at the time said mortgage was executed and recorded as aforesaid, has since been duly set off, organized and created as Red Lake county in the State of Minnesota, and the aforesaid record of said mortgage has been duly transcribed to and recorded in book 28 of Mortgages, on page 91 thereof in said Red Lake county, Minnesota and said lands and premises above described are now situated in said Red Lake county; and

Whereas, said mortgagors, covenanted in and by said mortgage to pay all taxes which were then or might be thereafter assessed upon the said premises and in case of their failure to do so that said mortgagee might pay the same and that said taxes so paid would become a part of the debt secured by said mortgage. Said mortgagors further covenanted that in case of default in any of the conditions of said mortgage therein contained said mortgagee was duly authorized and empowered to consider the whole sum secured by said mortgage as immediately due and payable.

That default has been made in the condition of said mortgage in this—that the mortgagors have neglected and refused to pay the taxes on said above described premises for the years 1896, 1897 and 1898 and that there is now $17.95 delinquent taxes against said above described premises. That said mortgagee has elected to and does hereby declare and consider the whole sum secured by said mortgage as now due and payable, being the sum of one thousand one hundred and twenty-nine dollars and ninety-five cents ($1129.95), the amount due and claimed to be due upon said mortgage at this date. And no action or proceeding at law or in equity has been instituted to recover the debt secured by said mortgage or any part thereof.

Now, therefore, notice is hereby given, that by virtue of the power of sale in said mortgage contained and therewith recorded and pursuant to the statutes in such cases made and provided said mortgage will be foreclosed by sale of the above described mortgaged premises by the Sheriff of said Red Lake county at public auction, at the front door of the Court House in the city of Red Lake Falls, in the county of Red Lake and State of Minnesota, on Saturday the 29th day of April, A. D. 1899, at ten o'clock in the Forenoon to satisfy the amount which will then be due on said mortgage and the debt secured thereby, together with the cost and charges of said foreclosure, including the sum of Fifty dollars ($50.00) Attorney's fees as stipulated in said mortgage.

The Affairs of Europe

are faithfully portrayed in the original and exclusive cable dispatches which THE CHICAGO RECORD prints daily from the leading capitals of the old world. This magnificent special service is in process of being greatly extended so as to include every important city in Europe; and it is supplemented by the full regular cable service of The Associated Press.

The Chicago Record, alone of all American newspape[illegible] New York city, now pri[illegible] and exclusive cable [illegible] from the [illegible] Europe.

VICK'S SEEDS

Bulbs and Plants have gone to thousands of satisfied Customers for a half century and to celebrate the 50th year in business we have issued a Special Golden Wedding Edition of VICK'S GARDEN AND FLORAL GUIDE, which is a work of art. It has 24 pages in colors, 4 pages souvenir, and nearly 100 pages filled with handsome half tone illustrations of Flowers, Vegetables, Plants, Fruits, etc., elegantly bound in white and gold. A marvel in Catalogue making; an authority on all subjects pertaining to the garden, with care for the same, and a descriptive catalogue of all that is desirable. It is too expensive to give away indiscriminately, but we want everyone interested in a good garden to have a copy, therefore we will send the Guide with a Due Bill for 25 cents worth of Seeds for only 15 cts. It tells how credit is given for full amount of purchase to buy other goods.

Vick's Little Gem Catalogue. A perfect little gem of a price list. It is simply the Guide condensed, finely illustrated, and in handy shape. FREE

Vick's Illustrated Monthly Magazine, enlarged, improved, and up to date on all subjects relating to Gardening, Horticulture, etc., 50 cents a year. Special 1899 offer—the Magazine one year and Vick's Garden and Floral Guide, for 25 cents.

Our new plan of selling vegetable seeds gives more for your money than any other Seed House in America.

DEFENDING THE NATION.

Catarrh is our country's enemy. Lagrippe, lung troubles and other diseases of the mucous membrane take hold of our people and fatal results follow with alarming frequency. All of these troubles are catarrh, and cannot exist where the membranes are clean and healthy.

Mrs. Lou Davis, Fayetteville, Tenn., tells in her letter how Dr. Hartman's great catarrh remedy, Pe-ru-na, cured her of la grippe and serious lung complication. She says:

"I was afflicted with a disease commonly known as la grippe two years ago; the doctors said I had consumption. I got one bottle of Pe-ru-na and the second night my cough stopped. I took several bottles, and I will say that I believe I would be a dead woman now if it had not been for Pe-ru-na."

Mary M. Pruitt, Palpa, Mo., says:
Pe-ru-na Medicine Co., Columbus, O.

"I had la grippe for three successive years; it seemed to get a tighter hold on me each year. It seemed I was in the jaws of death. What had helped me before would not do me any good. I saw an advertisement of Pe-ru-na. I procured two bottles and it cured me. I have not felt any symptom since. You may use this in any way you please."

THISTLE DOWNS.

Lighter and whiter than a flying flake
Of winter snows through wan air winnowing,
The thistle downs their sudden journeys take
O'er meadows wide in vagrant wandering.
No more shall they to earth reluctant cling
As a moss lined and slowly sinking stone
Left lying in an outer waste alone,
Beside the edge of some remote morass,
But high they toss above the fields new mown,
Like disembodied spirits of the grass.

The drowsy atmosphere in lines opaque
Leans to the sun, that fast is gathering
The last faint dews, his fiery thirst to slack,
While swallows dip, on ever restless wing,
Across a dusty road the robins sing,
And bumblebees upon the clover drone,
While thistle downs in airy spaces lone
Along the skies in happy freedom pass,
Voyaging afar to mystic climes unknown,
Like disembodied spirits of the grass.

TRICKS OF A MIND READER.

"Speaking of telegraphy," said a gentleman who takes an interest in occult studies, "reminds of an incident which created a great stir some years ago, but is now about forgotten. A New York lawyer, who claimed to be able to project thought, had a committee of skeptics select a playing card at random and then wired a friend in San Francisco, asking him to think of a card and telegraph back what one came into his mind. The card selected was the five of spades and the reply was correct. All the parties were well known, and the experiment caused an immense sensation.

"The newspapers discussed it by the column, and it was exploited as a positive demonstration of thought transference, but as a matter of fact the whole thing was merely a clever trick. I had it afterward explained to me by one of the people on the inside. It had been prearranged with the San Francisco man that the cue to the right card was to be the wording of the message. The denomination was indicated by the number of words in the second sentence. If, for instance, it was an ace, the sentence would be only one word, 'Answer;' if a deuce it would be 'Answer immediately,' and so on.

"As it happened to be a five the message ran, 'Telegraph reply quickly as possible.' The suit of the card was revealed by the signature. Signing the name in full meant hearts, the first only meant clubs, the last name meant spades, and the initials meant diamonds. The system was beautifully simple, and the message seemed on its face perfectly innocent. It was carefully examined to find a hidden word, but baffled the investigators. As far as I know, the truth about the affair has never been printed."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Diplomacy.

One day a gentleman was holding a conversation with his wife in the presence of their 5-year-old son, and among other things mentioned was "diplomacy."

"Pa," said the youngster when a break in the conversation allowed him to interfere, "what does diplomacy mean?"

"Diplomacy, my son," said the father, "is this—doing exactly the right thing at exactly the right moment."

"Then I suppose I used diplomacy when I got out of the pantry yesterday, dad, did I?"

"What do you mean?" was the reply.

"Why," said the son, "I got into the back yard with that meat pie just at the moment ma caught the cat in the pantry and told you to drown her for thieving."—Pearson's Weekly.

He Wasn't Proud.

The London Telegraph says that while a certain bishop was waiting for a train at Waterloo station, a porter, who often sees him into a compartment and shuts the door, in order that his lordship may be alone, came up to him in a state of excitement and asked:

"Your reverence, do you see that gentleman standing in the doorway over there?"

"Yes," answered the bishop.

"Do you know who it is?" continued the porter.

"No," said his lordship.

The railway man then whispered: "It's the 'Coffee Cooler,' your reverence. Oh, he ain't proud! He'll shake hands with your reverence if you like."

The "Coffee Cooler" is a noted colored prizefighter.

Ingrowing Nails.

To prevent an ingrowing nail a strip of cotton should be worked between the nail and the flesh, left large enough to cover the entire nail. A piece of cotton is then twisted into a long roll and placed on the other side of the nail groove over the sound skin. The space between is filled with lead nitrate, heaped up, and the larger piece of cotton folded over it, with more cotton outside, held in place with a moist bandage. This dressing is renewed every day, and in two or three the exuberance is reduced until the edge of the nail can be seen, and cotton inserted between it and the flesh beneath, when the nitrate can be discontinued.

Mormonism.

The good wife looked at her mending basket and sighed. If she hadn't seen them there she wouldn't have believed her husband could have worn holes in so many pairs of socks in so short a time.

"There are occasions," she said at last, "when I am almost ready to believe that it would be a good thing for a man to be a Mormon."

Then she went at the job she would willingly have shared with a few other wives.—Chicago Post.

JACK AND HIS WILL.

A Special Act of the British Parliament Arranges That Matter.

Jack has the proud distinction of having had an act of parliament passed for the express purpose of deciding the way in which he must make his will, so that while all other Britons are lumped together in this matter under the wills act of 1838 sailors testamentary documents are made under the naval wills act of 1866. The most important proviso of this act is that all wills made by sailors or marines must be witnessed and attested by the chaplain or some other officer if they are actually made on board ship, and this is somewhat curious.

If a sailor likes to make his will on shore, any one can witness it for him, but on board ship the case is different. Needless to say they almost all to a man choose the latter course, as they know that things will be straighter for bearing an officer's signature. If, however, supposing that the vessel was in action and a man was to be struck down who had not previously made a will, if he had to do so before he died, even if it were not attested by an officer, the admiralty has full power to act on the merits of the case and to dispense with that or any other formality that it was impossible to comply with. Another thing—a sailor shares with a soldier the privilege of when on active service being the only men who can dispense with a written will and make a verbal one.

In former times any one could make his will verbally if he so desired, but this, as may be supposed, opened the door to no end of fraud, and it was consequently repealed in the 1838 act, except in the case mentioned above. On the night before a ship or a regiment goes into action there is no more pathetic sight than to see the men, young and old, laboriously writing their wills in case tomorrow should be their last day in this world, and what with witnessing wills and making them on the forms issued by the authorities for those who cannot write—and this class has now almost entirely disappeared from both the navy and the army—the officers have a very busy time.—London Golden Penny.

THE FIREMAN'S LIFE.

He Cannot Always Finish His Toilet Before a Mirror.

"Of course everything about the fire department interests us always," said Mr. Glomby, "but there is one little thing in particular that I've seen I suppose hundreds of times that appeals to me more every time I see it, and that is the firemen getting into their coats as they go along. You see this among the men on trucks and on hose wagons. The men on the engine have to use their hands to hold on.

"It's a simple enough thing in general to see a man putting on his coat, but here he isn't standing up in his room before a mirror, but he's jumped out of bed and taken his coat under his arm and slid down a shining pole and is completing his dressing sitting on top of a rack of ladders going through the street like mad, drawn by three great horses at one end, with a man seen at the other end steering this outfit with a wheel. This sight never loses its novelty or its interest. You may see the same thing on a hose wagon.

"But what set me to speaking about this now was seeing a man on a fire patrol wagon, sitting on one of their long seats, facing outward, pulling up the tops of his high boots—red wagon, galloping horses, banging gong, men in fire hats and rubber coats, the whole blooming outfit on the dead jump and this man sitting on the side seat reaching down for the tops of those boots and straightening up with each one as he got it and swaying back a little as he pulled it up into place, just as a man would sit on the edge of his bed at home to put on his stockings and slippers and just as cool and comfortable."—New York Sun.

Geography For Women.

The introduction to Parkinton's "Modern Atlas," published in 1815, has a reference to "the sex" which ought to be very interesting to our modern college girl. The learned author says:

Geography is a study so universally instructive and pleasing that it has for nearly a century been taught even to females, whose pursuits are foreign from serious researches. In the trivial conversation of the social circle, in the daily avidity of the occurrences of the times, pregnant indeed above all others with rapid and important changes that affect the very existence of states and empires, geography has become a habitual resource to the elegant female, as well as the profound philosopher.

Stopping a Big Steamship.

To stop the Etruria, whose displacement is 9,680 tons, horsepower 14,321 and speed 20.18 knots an hour, 3 minutes and 47 seconds are required, and during the process of stopping the ship will forge ahead 2,464 feet, or nearly half a mile. The United States cruiser Columbia, with a displacement of 7,350 tons, 17,991 horsepower and a speed of 22.8 knots an hour, can be stopped in 2 minutes and 15 seconds and within a space of 2,147 feet. In each case the vessel is supposed to be going at full speed and the stoppage produced by reversing the action of the propeller.

Dumas' Quick Wit.

Dumas found a man asleep in the Theatre Francais during the playing of a piece by his friend Soumet. "You see that?" said he, "that's your work."

Next evening a Dumas comedy was put on. The two friends looked in again and found a sleeper.

"You see, dear Dumas," said Soumet, "your works can produce sleep."

"Do you refer to that man?" replied Dumas. "Why, that's the man who was there last night. He's not awake yet!"—San Francisco News Letter.

DYED DIAMONDS.

Yellow Stones Can Be Made to Look Like Gems of the First Water.

"There are tricks in every trade" has grown to be an adage, and this proverb holds especially good with regard to the jewelry trade, which for "ways that are dark and tricks that are vain" fairly takes the palm for roguery.

Although a great deal of capital, time and labor have been devoted to counterfeiting the diamond, very little success has been obtained from a fraudulent point of view, as the diamond possesses extraordinary qualities of hardness and brilliancy, with which no imitation, up to now, can attempt to vie. "Paste" of all kinds can be tested by means of a sharp steel file, which scratches its surface.

A method of successful imposition with diamonds has, however, been discovered, and the originator of this swindle actually defrauded the pawnbrokers of London alone in one year of upward of $500,000.

The general public, as well as jewelers, are aware that diamonds of a yellowish tinge, or, as they are called in the trade, "straws," are worth very little. Large stones of this color, even when weighing from 10 to 100 carats, are quite common and will only fetch in the market from $5 to $20 per carat, the value, of course, increasing in ratio with weight. Diamonds of the same weight, if of the first water, or perfectly colorless, would be worth from five to ten times as much.

The methods of the individual referred to were as follows: He purchased a quantity of "yellow" stones, and then by a simple yet ingenious process succeeded in imparting to them an evanescent purity of color. This was done by procuring two ordinary glasses, a kettle of boiling water and a threepenny packet of mauve dye.

The "yellow" diamond, which was perhaps set in a gold ring or pin, was merely dipped in the glass containing the dye, and then in clean boiling water half a dozen times, and allowed to dry, when it presented all the appearance, even to the eye of an expert, of a magnificent stone of the first water.

The next move was to place the ring on the finger, and the well dressed diamond dyer would sally forth, enter a pawnbroker's and pledge the ring for at least three times its worth. Within 12 hours, however, the effects of the dye would have disappeared, and the pawnbroker could only wonder what on earth was wrong with his eyes when he advanced so much money on such a yellow stone.

Fortunately, owing to the magnitude of this individual's operations, the fraud was discovered, and now pawnbrokers, if they are suspicious of a diamond's color, immerse it in nitric acid, which destroys any dye that may be present without in any way injuring the stone.—London Mail.

GOOD MONEY FOR BAD NEWS

Paid to Learn That Sight Would Leave Him in Six Months.

Somehow it made me feel bad, this happening that I am about to relate. I was in the office of an oculist, one of the leading men in his profession in Pittsburg. A big, strong and healthy looking man entered. His appearance indicated that he had many years of life before him. He was well dressed, keenly intelligent and of pleasant countenance.

"Doctor," he said, "my eyes have been troubling me, and I would like you to make an examination of them and treat them."

After a few preliminary questions the doctor told him to strip himself to the waist. He took off his clothes and stood there, a magnificent specimen of manhood. The doctor examined him, paying particular attention to his back, for a reason of which I knew nothing. Having finished, he said:

"Put on your clothes. I can do nothing for you. Your sight may last six months, but no longer. Treatment will do no good. Blindness is sure to come."

"What's the matter, doctor?" he asked quietly, with a faint tremor in his voice.

The doctor told him in technical language and then explained that the trouble came from the wasting of a nerve leading from the spine.

"What's your bill, doctor?" asked the man when he got his clothes on.

"Five dollars," replied the doctor.

He paid it and left the office without another word. In the fullness of life he walked out into the blessed light of day, doomed within six months to darkness until death. It was an incident to the doctor; to me it was a tragedy.—Pittsburg News.

Irving Didn't Read.

Sir Henry Irving appeared at the Theater Royal, Edinburgh, in 1857, and two years later he went to Linlithgow to give a reading there. He was delighted to see his name in big letters on the posters on arriving in the town. He went to the hall, but there was no crowd there—in fact, the caretaker had not arrived, having forgotten all about the reading. Irving went in search of him, and things were got ready; 8:30 o'clock arrived, but no one came to the hall—not even a small boy. In recalling the incident Sir Henry was wont to say, "I never slept better than I did that night."

Its Natural Effect.

"How many of these sheep get out of here?" asked the angry farmer.

"I don't know," replied the new hired man, rubbing his eyes. "After I'd watched five or six of 'em jump over the fence I seemed to lose the count. That always puts me to sleep."—Chicago Tribune.

Of No Avail.

"Prisoner," said the court, "have you anything to say for yourself?"

"What's the use?" replied the culprit; "you guys wouldn't believe me."—Philadelphia North American.

MANY SECRET MINES.

ENGLAND'S COAST STUDDED WITH THESE DEFENSES.

Their Locality, Approaches and Firing Points Are Mysteries That Foreign Spies Have Often Tried, but Always in Vain, to Solve.

England has the most formidable navy in the world, but she does not rely upon it alone in the event of war to prevent a foreign force from landing upon her shores. London Tit-Bits, in an article on the secret coast defenses of Great Britain, says:

In the event of war no alien army could approach our shores without imperiling its navy by encountering our explosive mines, scores of which surround our coasts at all places likely to be selected for attack by a foreign foe. The Thames is also carefully shielded by similar secret mines, one of these being in the vicinity of Blackwall. The precise locality of these mines is, however, for obvious reasons, kept a dark and inscrutable mystery, and the approaches to them are so cleverly constructed and concealed that no one save an expert would suspect their real character.

An innocent looking cellar at the basement of a certain tradesman's shop is the entrance to one important mine, but even the tradesman himself is not aware that the government rents his cellar, nor does he ever surmise the true nature of the operations carried on therein. The mines are equipped with explosives of the most potent kind and admirably connected with the secret chambers on shore by means of electric wires.

Each mine is controlled by a button, over which are printed particulars relating to the location and character of the mine. This button is placed in the wall of the secret chamber and covered by a double door, securely locked, the outer door so closely resembling the wall of the chamber that no one but those in the secret could detect its presence. The chambers are double locked and approached by passages protected in a similar manner.

Every lock and key is specially made for the government and is unlike any other. Only a few of the very highest officials are allowed to use these keys, and they are solemnly sworn to preserve their secret rigidly. No persons apart from those especially empowered may inspect or visit any of the secret chambers at any time except by express written permit personally procured from a certain high official. This is exceedingly difficult to obtain, and in fact is rarely ever granted.

Prior to such a permit being issued the officials assure themselves that the possessor of the document bears a blameless character, is British born and has no ulterior reasons for preferring his request. This settled, he is sworn to secrecy in the most solemn manner, blindfolded and conducted by a circuitous route to the secret chamber, where he is permitted to use his eyes, but not his tongue, no questions being answered by the attending officials.

Strange stories have been told of attempts made by foreign spies to penetrate the privacy of these mysterious mines.

A young lieutenant in the navy, whose honorable character won the confidence of his superior officers some years since, was accorded the privilege of guarding one of these secret mines and intrusted with certain information concerning its character.

Soon after his appointment he became engaged to a charming young French lady of whom he was desperately enamored. By some inexplicable means his fiancee got to hear of his appointment, and by alternate threats and persuasion induced him to take her to see the secret mine under his care.

On the evening arranged, after extracting a solemn vow of secrecy from his ladylove and getting her to don the dress of a naval officer for the occasion, he was about to set out on his secret mission when, to his surprise and alarm, he and his companion were arrested by detectives. In some mysterious manner the authorities had been enlightened as to the proceedings on foot and were in time to stop them.

For "breach of regulations" the young lieutenant was subsequently court martialed and reduced, while his charming companion, who proved to be a spy in the employ of the French government, was conveyed back to her own country, with a caustic caution.

On another occasion a German gentleman contrived to locate the entrance to one of the secret chambers and actually hired a member of the Bill Sikes fraternity to aid him in negotiating the double locks one dark November night. But so splendidly fitted and fortified were these appliances both the visitors were doomed to disappointment. Returning from the rendezvous, both the plotter and his accomplice were arrested and imprisoned.

Worth Waiting For.

During a performance at at the Tynemouth Aquarium, a couple from Old Hartley were among the audience. When half time arrived, an attendant placed on the stage a board inscribed with the word "Interval."

"W'at's that, Geordie?" asked the wife. Geordie spelled the word.

"I-n, in; t-e-r, inter; v-a-l, interval."

"But w'at is't?"

"An divvent knaa, lass. Tha foaks is aall gannin oot; but we'll stop to see it!"—San Francisco Wave.

In 1666 the great fire in London burned over 436 acres, destroying at least $35,000,000 worth of property. In 1872 the Boston fire burned over 60 acres, at a loss of $1,000,000 an acre. If the same fire occurred today, it would cost, at the very lowest estimate, $100,000,000. In 1893 the loss on the 2½ acres burned over was over $350,000,000.

POPULAR PROVERBS

SOME THAT ARE FAIRLY BRIMFUL OF ABSURDITY.

Maxims Often Quoted and at Times Advanced as Argument Which Have Neither Wit Nor Wisdom to Commend Them—Contradictory Sayings.

There is a mistaken notion abroad, says a writer in London Tit-Bits, that proverbs are epitomes of wisdom, the concentrated experience of generations, and that to quote one of them in a discussion is to advance an unanswerable argument. And yet what is there to recommend many of them beyond their jingle? Take our familiar friend:

Early to Bed and Early to Rise, Makes a Man Healthy, Wealthy and Wise.—Obviously, the main idea was to find a word to rhyme with "rise," and "wise" was the unfortunate word chosen. And now, trustful little boys are persuaded to go to bed at unreasonably early hours in the hope of becoming a sort of Sandow-Rothschild-Solomon, though we all know milkmen and market gardeners who get up at 5 a. m. and are neither rich nor clever, and members of parliament who go to bed late and are, if not clever, at least not poor and infirm. Since the invention of gas and electric light this ridiculous old proverb has outlived its original modicum of truth, and proves we must not venerate proverbs on account of their hoary antiquity.

The Early Bird Catches the Worm.—The mistake made here is that it assumes we are all birds. But some of us are worms. If we were not, what would become of the birds? And, therefore, while the birds do well to be early, let the worms be late—the later the better.

The Pitcher That Goes Oft to the Well Is Broken at Last.—Note, it does not say "is broken first," but "is broken at last." Of course, every pitcher, whether it goes to the well or stays on the shelf, is broken at last, and the only result of this absurd proverb is to encourage lazy folk to do as little work as possible and unnecessarily keep out of harm's way.

If You Want a Thing Well Done, Do It Yourself.—There's shocking bad advice with which to start a youth on life's journey. If he wants a button well sewed on, he's to do it himself; if he wants his hair well cut, he's to cut it himself. He must mend his own chairs, shoe his own nag, darn his own socks. In short, from buying a horse to blacking his boots, he must do it himself. Poor fellow!

A Contented Mind Is a Continual Feast.—Can any one say what that means? Does it mean that the owner continually feasts on his contented mind or that the contented mind is continually feasting? Probably the latter, as we sometimes hear that "a hungry man's an angry man," and we all know that a satisfied appetite is the source of contentment. Hence it is not the contented mind which makes the feast, as the silly proverb implies, but the continual feast which produces the contented mind.

There's No Rule Without an Exception.—This is not only a proverb; it is also a rule. But obviously there is no exception to this rule, because if there were a rule with an exception this proverb would be untrue. But the proverb is a rule which has no exception, which, as Mr. Euclid would say, is absurd. Which was to be shown.

Where Ignorance Is Bliss, 'Tis Folly to Be Wise.—For oracular stupidity this proverb may be classed with the one about the pitcher. Granting it true, the difficulty is to know where ignorance is bliss and of course the proverb gives no assistance where it is most needed. Most people quote it as "Ignorance is bliss," in their blissful ignorance, but if a proverb gives rise to error it is not only absurd: it is also dangerous. When people say—

A Little Learning Is a Dangerous Thing—They make that a reason not for learning more, but for learning less.

Love Me, Love My Dog.—If I go a-courting, and my ladylove bids me love her scented, dyspeptic poodle, which is not necessary to her health and comfort, must I not much more love her glass eye and false teeth and hair, which are? Yet common sense revolts at the notion, and I therefore assume that a proverb which, logically treated, makes such unreasonable demands on my affections is wrong and absurd.

Seeing Is Believing.—How can any reflecting person repeat these words? For very often we believe we see what really we do not. If a conjurer were to take this proverb as his motto, every one would see its absurdity. A straight stick half submerged in water looks crooked. Fortunately, another proverb says, "Trust not to appearances." And this brings us to the exquisite absurdity of popular proverbs which run in contradictory pairs and support both sides of an argument. Thus one proverb says, "Look before you leap;" another, "Who hesitates is lost." Sometimes we hear that "Second thoughts are best;" at other times that "Delays are dangerous." The desperate man relies on "Nothing venture, nothing have;" the cautious man on "Never venture out of your depth till you can swim." The impatient matrimonial candidate believes that "Happy's the wooing that's not long a-doing;" the tardy one that one may "Marry in haste and repent at leisure." And so on ad infinitum. "Absence makes the heart grow fonder"—"Out of sight, out of mind," "It's never too late to mend"—"A fool at 40 will never be wise." "Too many cooks spoil the broth"—"There's safety in numbers" and "Two heads are better than one."

Therefore, let us examine our proverbial coinage before we pass it into the moral currency.

PEOPLE WHO GAMBLE.

Chinese and Italians Especially Addicted to Games of Chance.

Of all the nations of the earth who gamble—and they all do it more or less—the Chinese come in an easy first. Superstition and the gambling mania go in double harness, and while the mandarins fly kites to decide what should be done about Wei-Hai-Wei and Talien-Wan the humbler Celestials gamble for dear life to pass the time away. "The Chinese play night and day," says a traveler, "till they have lost all they are worth, and then they usually go and hang themselves," from which it would appear that the yellow danger is not so formidable after all.

The Chinese laborers in the United States squander their earnings in a game called "white pigeon's ticket." White, by the way, is the unlucky color for the gamer and the lucky one for the keeper of the gaming house. These gentry keep orange peel in a box, believing that it will bring them luck.

The Italians are no less superstitious, and they gamble persistently, the poor people especially, in the government lotteries. Everything has a number; a cat, a dog, a gondola, and the "Libro dei Sogno"—the lotto player's oracle—will tell you what the number is and the rules for interpreting the appearance in dreams. Visitors to Venice, which has always been a stronghold of gambling, may have seen the declaration of the winning figures from the Campanile of St. Mark's—the silent, eager crowd gathered in the square and the group of officials gathered round the boy with the bandaged eyes who draws the numbers from the cage.

There is a story told in Venice of a madman who hailed a gondolier from the window of the madhouse on the island to tell him the numbers he had dreamed. The man put his money on them and won, and from that day to this the gondoliers go near the window as they pass in the hope that the madman will call again. The story is true.—London Chronicle.

VORACIOUS LITTLE ROBINS.

Each Required Fourteen Yards of Angleworms Every Day.

A would be philanthropist relates his experiences trying to play mother to a nest of little robins, which had by some accident been deprived of their rightful mother's care. He diligently set to work digging angleworms, and supposed that he was fulfilling his whole duty, when one of the poor little songsters died. Upon examination of the body, which was reduced to skin and bone, the foster parent came to the conclusion that it must have died of starvation.

Deeply grieved at his shortcoming, he redoubled his efforts, determined to at least save the other two. It was not long, however, before a second one died, evidently of the same malady. The good man then resolved that, whatever the third one died of, it should not be starvation, and took off his coat and went to work in earnest. He kept on with the angleworm diet until he found that his one little bird was consuming from 14 to 18 yards of angleworms a day. This was too much for his patience, and he proceeded to substitute the more easily managed diet of bread and milk and other delicacies, which were, however, not nearly so much to Miss Robin's taste.

Waiting to discover whether he had been catering to a family of abnormal appetites, our friend took to watching the methods of a real mother bird and found that she fed her young every two minutes. He then consulted the learned books upon birds and discovered that 14 yards of worms a day, with meals every two minutes, is the average rate of feeding fledgelings. He has therefore decided that he does not care to take up raising birds by hand as a business.—Boston Transcript.

He Got the Ad.

"You're not on that horrid paper, are you," cried the girl who speaks her mind, "though I did once meet a reporter from it who was rather nice? He came to see about getting an advertisement— What! Not a reporter? Why, I thought he was. Well, anyway I had lost a dog, and he said he had heard of it and wanted to know if I didn't want to advertise in his paper for it. I told him I didn't believe I liked his old paper, and he said he didn't think much of it himself, but he thought it was pretty apt to reach the class of people who stole dogs. And so since he was so polite about it I thought I might as well advertise in it. But I didn't get the dog."—New York Commercial Advertiser.

Show Your Best Qualities.

Honesty does not require us to hang our oil paintings faced to the wall in order that our friends may see that they are made on coarse canvas. It is right to appear always at our best. Why does the boy hate the beer?

He doesn't—he loves it because it is Hamm's delicious brew. It is the medicine his kind aunty has mixed in it that he dislikes. Never mind he is to have a drink of the pure article afterwards to take the bad taste away.

The band instruments arrived Monday. The little boy is in his glory and the older ones of this quiet little village will have no peace for the next two or three weeks.

B. E. Burkee was at Thief River Falls last week on business. He was an important witness in the case of long standing—some fifteen years ago that was being tried.

Village Election.

The village election held yesterday was a rather tame affair compared with former years. There was only one ticket in the field—that being the caucus ticket put up Saturday evening. Following are the officers elected for the ensuing year:

President—Emil J. Holmes.
Councilman—D. Patterson.
" —J. C. Dahl.
" —W. A. Sorsoleil.
Recorder—J. L. Johnson.
Treasurer—Leonard Holmes.
Justice of the Peace—K. O. Gigstad.

Ed. Rushton, a volunteer who left here last spring and seen service in Cuba arrived Sunday. He [illegible] [illegible] the Red Lake country [illegible] he has been looking up [illegible]. He reports the Indians [illegible] north shore as being as bad as the Spaniards and expects an outbreak most any day.

There are reasons for saying that some sensational testimony will be given in support of the charges of General Miles when the Military Court of Inquiry returns from its present needless trip to Chicago. The latest rumor is that the canned meat which made so many soldiers sick will be proved to have been horse-meat and not beef at all.

The Hallock News, speaking of the second wreck on the St. Hilaire line, says the train was going at the rate of about 30 miles an hour. The editor must have got his information from some one who never traveled over this line. We don't believe anybody in the employ of Jim Hill would dare to take a chance of mating over one third of that speed on this line.

Mr. and Mrs. B. Rosenberg left yesterday for Crookston where they will make their future home. Mr. Rosenberg will manage a large clothing store opposite the Beckett block in the course of ten days, as it will take until that time to unpack and display their immense stock of goods now there. Ben is a good business man and we bespeak for him a good trade in that lively city.

Will Prepare to Build.

Judge Ives left to-day for Cass Lake where he goes to do the preliminary work of preparation necessary to his comfort when he shall locate there for the practice of his profession. He will let the contract for a suitable building for office purposes, but will likely abandon his plan for making it large enough for a residence also. The land on which all the improvements are located is yet reservation property, and a title cannot be secured at present. The structure contemplated will be such as can be easily removed later.—Crookston Times.

Good Seed.

After the harvests of the year have all been gathered, and the appointed season of thanksgiving has been duly observed, the husbandmen, quite naturally, turns his attention to plans for another year's plowing, sowing and reaping. One of the most important items, which ought always to receive careful attention, is the quality and character of the seed to be used for the future crop. Success or failure depend largely upon whether the seed be strong in vitality, true to name and gathered from fully matured plants; and, also whether it be seed acclimated to conditions such as pertain to the locality where it is to be used.

Most of the seed grown in our more southern states does not possess the vigor and vital stamina needed in this high latitude. It is also slower in development, requiring a longer season for perfecting the plant, and consequently such seed is not well adapted for use in our short summer season. When partaking of a large luscious watermelon, imported from Georgia or Tennessee, there is a great temptation to save the seed for planting here in Minnesota but such experiments are liable to be disappointing for the reason that Minnesota summers are much shorter than those of our southern states. Northern grown seeds is safer and best for the farmers and gardeners of Minnesota.

It is, as a general rule, found that dealings with either seedsmen or nurserymen in ones own neighborhood is more safe and satisfactory than similar business dealings with those located in remote sections of the country, whose extravagant and laudatory advertisements have attracted attention. If seedsmen and nurserymen would spend more time, energy and money in securing good and reliable seed and stock, and very much less for highly colored, illustrated catalogues and some extravagantly be-praised specialty, which, usually has little or no merit, they would be more likely to secure the confidence and generous patronage of the intelligent community. Northwestern Agriculturalist.

To Cure a Cold in One Day.

Take Warner's White Wine of Tar Syrup, the best cough remedy on earth. 25 and 50 cts. For sale by the Imperial Drug Co., St. Hilaire.

The postoffice department at Washington has ruled that the writer of a letter has the right to regain possession of it providing he can prove to the satisfaction of the postmaster at the office from which the letter was sent that he was the one who wrote it. Even if the letter has arrived at its distination and before it is delivered to the person to whom it was sent, it may be recalled through a telegram through the mailing office. The reason assigned is that the United States is only the agent of the writer while the letter is in transit.

Mr. Daniel O'Leary chief factory inspector of New York, testified before the Industrial Commission, now sitting in Washington, that he had reported to the War Department some time ago that clothing for the U. S. army was being made in the sweat shops of New York city, which shows how much sincerity there is in the claim of the republican party to be the friend of the working classes. Mr. O'Leary said the prices paid for this work were about as follows: coats 32½ cts, infantry pants 22 cents, cavalry pants from 26 to 35 cents, and vests from 11 to 14 cents. Nice friendship, to be a party to making men and women work for such prices, isn't it?

The Best Cough Remedy on Earth.

Warner's White Wine of Tar Syrup, Consumption Cure, cures a cold in 24 hours if taken in time and does not stop a cough in One Minute; by paralyzing the throat, but it cures the disease and leaves the throat and lungs healthy and strong. 25 and 50 cts. For sale by the Imperial Drug Co., St. Hilaire.

MRS. COOPER.

Mrs. M. C. Cooper of the Royal Academy of Arts, London, England, is undoubtedly one of the greatest living sculptors. She has modeled busts of half the nobility of England, and is now in Washington making busts of distinguished Americans. Mrs. Cooper has just completed a bust of Mrs. Belva Lockwood, which is now in the Corcoran Art Gallery. Ruskin, the great artist, placed Mrs. Cooper as one of the greatest sculptors and painters of this century. Mrs. Cooper is an ardent friend of Pe-ru-na and in a letter dated January 26, written from Washington, says the following: "I take pleasure in recommending Pe-ru-na for catarrh and la grippe. I have suffered for months and after the use of one bottle of Pe-ru-na am entirely well."—Mrs. M. C. Cooper.

DEFINITE RESULTS ACCOMPLISHED BY THE REFORM ADMINISTRATION IN ONE DEPARTMENT.

The Public Examiner—Flshes Scooped Up in a Single Drag of His Official Net. State Funds in Banks Without Interest and Without Security—The University Cordially Accedes to the Examiner's Findings and Suggestions, and the Funds Hereafter Go to the State Vaults. Waiting on the Legislature For Resources For More Work of the Same Sort—Will They Be Forthcoming? Clear Statement of the Situation—It Is Up to the Republican Legislature, Now For More Than a Month—"What Shall the Harvest Be?"

Democratic Reform Press Bureau.
St. Paul, March 6, 1899.

Although the administration of Governor Lind has been installed but sixty days, and some of the departments are not yet under reform control, yet there are definite and substantial results to record. In the aggregate these may be said to be surprising, especially when it is considered how slow the machinery of a great state moves, of necessity, when there is a complete change in the working gear, grown so great in the development since it was put into operation.

Nevertheless, in the departments, as fast as they get under way, there are substantial results to record. Dealing at this time with that of Public Examiner, and not going beyond the official record, accessible to all, there is that to present which will be highly gratifying to the people of the state, and give them the utmost assurance for its administration, provided the department is not crippled by the inaction of the legislature.

The first report of General Pope, public examiner, making examinations of institutions and departments, was prepared by him Feb. 11, and reached the legislature at the hands of Governor Lind on Feb. 20. It followed the report of the state auditor made Feb. 1, in which he plainly stated the needs of immediate passage of a deficiency appropriation for the examiner's department to enable it to carry on work of the same kind. The state auditor's report and General Pope's recommendation, was referred to the house committee on appropriations, and has thus been in possession of the legislature for more than one month without action.

The Report Summarized.

Though no move has been made as yet to supply the needed means for making the examinations required by law, still Examiner Pope has done what he could, within reach of his department. The results are embodied in the report referred to, which will well repay a close inspection. The examination covered five institutions and departments, as below summarized:

1. Offices of State Auditor and Treasurer, reporting only on the methods of bookkeeping and accounting.—Found to meet the unqualified approval of the Public Examiner.

2. Dairy and Food Department.—Found that the department, following, as yet, the precedents of Commissioner Bowler's predecessor, was violating the law as to deposit of the fees in banks, instead of turning them over to the State Treasurer. Commissioner Bowler immediately corrected the errors, adopting a system of vouchers and receipts not hitherto in practice.

3. State Board of Health and Vital Statistics.—Found that there was violation of the laws in the handling of fees and payment of expenses by the secretary and accountant. A month's receipts of $580 was disbursed in part, without vouchers or state authority, among items paid being "Examiners," "Doctors of Labratory," Pioneer Press for Printing, and an item "U. Press," the balance being reported as deposited on a specific date in the St. Anthony Falls bank, to credit of State Board of Health, but the bank's report of the given date, of public funds on deposit, did not give the item of deposit. Subsequently, however, the bank cashier reported the deposit, and also another to the credit of Secretary H. M. Brocken of the board, amounting to something over $100, concerning which no information as yet has been obtained. The violated law requires the turning over to the state treasurer of all fees, and the payment of expenses only on vouchers audited by the board and approved by the governor. The public examiner is enforcing the order.

4. University of Minnesota.—Found a defective and unauthorized system of bookkeeping and accounting, especially in the care of "Miscellaneous Receipts," a large item of university administration. Suggestions for improvement of the same have been incorporated in a bill by Examiner Pope, which has been approved by the state auditor and attorney general, and is in the hands of the legislature.

State Funds in Banks Without Security.

The examiner also found that state funds to the amount of $112,191.85, were on deposit in the St. Anthony Falls bank of East Minneapolis, of which J. E. Ware is cashier, Mr. Ware being also treasurer of the university. Of this amount the state treasurer has in his name $40,409.76, drawing interest, leaving the balance of over $62,000 standing to the credit of different individuals and interests. Thus there is a so-called "University regular account," of about $6,000; "Collisum Insurance," $4,500; "University Fees," $20,500; "Minnesota Fruit Farm," $6,600; "J. A. Vys, Secretary" (secretary of the agricultural station), $4,800; "Salt Springs Land," $7,200; "Cyrus Northrup, President," $11,800; "D. W. Sprague, Accountant," $1,200, and the State Board of Health before referred to, $857. Not an item of the total, except the Salt Springs money, belonging to the geographical survey, and the Sprague item, is lawfully held, the examiner shows, but should have been in the state treasury. Thus the sum of $112,000 state money is on deposit in a bank whose capital stock is but $100,000, without security except as the state treasurer may have provided security for the $49,000 of his state deposit, but certainly over $60,000 without security and drawing no interest. How long this has been going on is not stated, but the one item, "Colliseum Insurance," has been there presumably since the Colliseum fire years ago.

Since the action taken by the department, Hon. J. S. Pillsbury, president of the board of regents of the university, has expressed to the department his satisfaction with the proposed corrections to conform to the law's requirements, and promised his cordial co-operation and the compliance of all departments of the University therewith. The funds for the month of February and monthly hereafter, will be turned over to the state treasurer, President Pillsbury assures the department.

Funds in a Failed Bank.

5. In the experimental station it was found also that the same law as to turning over miscellaneous receipts was being violated, and irregularity as to use vouchers, etc., in payments of expenses, all of which will be cheerfully corrected, says the report. The money here was partly on hand and partly deposited with the Germania bank, St. Paul. The examiner also found that at the time of closing of the Allemania bank, St. Paul, the experiment station had $1,560.53, as balance (Jan. 4, 1897) which deposits, withdrawals and balances have never been officially reported to the university accountant or to the state officials and of which President Pillsbury was ignorant. This unauthorized deposit and subsequent loss, is specially referred to the attorney general and the governor for such action as is deemed proper.

Such is the result of such work as the public examiner has been able to do within the reach of his office, the funds for such examination having been practically exhausted by his predecessor. The fact concerning this is that at the close of six months of the fiscal year of 1898-99, the sum of $3,806.09 has been expended out of a total requirement and allowance of $4,425, leaving but about $600 for the remaining six months. However, in the past six months, only about one-third of the examinations required have been made. So that the situation in summary, as to continuing these examinations, of which the first has been so fruitful, is that about one-eighth of the funds remain with which to do two-thirds of the whole work. To be explicit and exact, on March 1, after one month's work in the line, but $285.49 remained with which to do the remaining five month's work, nearly two-thirds of the whole, and from this the salary of one examiner $930, is to be repaid, as well as the expenses of all the examiners in the field and the clerical force and expenses of the office!

The sum required, $4,200, is covered in the deficiency bill above referred to, as weeks ago approved by State Auditor Dunn, and in the house of representatives to the house committee on appropriations. Is it not fair, therefore, to say that the question whether the state approves the sort of work that has been done thus far by the examiner's department, and desires substantial results further, is up to the legislature?

"Field Work," "Short Stop," "Battery."

It is under such a state of facts that Pecksniffian papers like the St. Paul Dispatch, ignoring what has been accomplished in fact, see fit to make flings at the department, especially as to bank examinations, that the department is deficient in its "outfielders," and the like. Some of the country press have been misled by these flings, but not many of them. More have commented on the fact that The Dispatch is solemnly silent on what the department has in fact been accomplishing, and as to its needs, and what it has been doing with its "infielders," "short stops" and "battery," such as this report, and such as the closing of the rotten savings bank at Minneapolis, if deficient in "outfielders." As to examinations of banks, the law requires four yearly, and these at least will be made, whether or not the department follows the previous practice of making five, following the national bank practice. But it is not time yet for the first call for reports, since the last was made in December, not three months ago.

Meanwhile the examiner's department being restrained by lack of funds, until action by "Leader" Jacobson's committee, will probably be content with preaching the gospel in Jerusalem. Whether or not it is wanted to be "spread through Judea," is up to the Republican legislature. We shall see.

It Is Up to the Legislature.

Meanwhile the department has prepared, and Senator Shaller has introduced, for codifying the laws for the department, a Public Examiner's Act, which shall remodel existing laws and simplify the same, and cover the needs of the department for efficient service. One needed assistant examiner is asked for, and funds for the expenses of the examining force. As a companion to this regular act another revises the fee list for examination of institutions under state supervisions, including savings under which have hitherto paid no fees. The fees of the large institutions are largely increased so that these will hereafter approximately pay the cost of examinations. The net increase estimated is $4,280 per annum. Under the plan all of the laws relating to the department are embodied in the two bills instead of several as is now the case. Also, the plan will give two annual examinations of the institutions instead of one as now. The aggregate appropriations called for, covering the increased force and all expenses, is $21,000. At present the old law provides, but little over $13,000, so that adding the increase from raising the fees, and there will be but a little over $4,000 increase, to cover deficiency and really double the service in the field. It will provide for Examiner, one Deputy, and four assistants, and provide funds for the expenses of five men in the field, 300 days each, per year, which ought to be "outfielding" enough to satisfy even The Dispatch, while the exact amount is also supplied for the office force, supplies and expenditures.

Certainly this is now up to the legislature.

LOSS OF LIFE FEARED.

Six-Story Tenement Building Destroyed by Fire.

New York Special.—A six-story tenement at 4 Bayard street caught fire early this morning. Twenty families were aroused from their slumber and it is believed by Chief Bonner that some lives were lost. As yet no bodies have been found. The tenement burned like tinder and a number of people were forced to drop from the windows into nets.

Several little children were thrown from the windows and were caught by the firemen below, all escaping uninjured. Fifteen persons were carried from the upper floors to the street by the firemen. The panic was intense and it is not considered probable that everybody escaped.

No Carriage.

One of the most amusing instances of misunderstanding a word is told by an old church warden of Wallingford, England.

At one time the Bishop of Oxford sent round to the church wardens inquiries, among which was:

"Does your officiating clergyman preach the gospel, and is his conversation and carriage consistent therewith?"

To this the church warden of Wallingford replied:

"He preaches the gospel, but he does not keep a carriage."—Chicago Democrat.

Modern Science Recognizes RHEUMATISM
as a Disease of the Blood

There is a popular idea that this disease is caused by exposure to cold, and that some localities are infected with it more than others. Such conditions frequently promote the development of the disease, but from the fact that this ailment runs in certain families, it is shown to be hereditary, and consequently a disease of the blood.

Among the oldest and best known residents of Bluffs, Ill., is Adam Vangundy. He has always been prominently identified with the interests of that place. He was the first President of the Board of Trustees, and for a long time has been a Justice of the Peace. He says: "I had been a sufferer of rheumatism for a number of years and the pain at times was very intense. I tried all the proprietary medicines I could think or hear of, but received no relief.

"I finally placed my case with several physicians and doctored with them for some time, but they failed to do me any good. Finally, with my hopes of relief nearly exhausted I read an article regarding Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, which induced me to try them. I was anxious to get rid of the terrible disease and bought two boxes of the pills, I began using them about March, 1897. After I had taken two boxes I was completely cured, and the pain has never returned. I think it is the best medicine I have ever taken, and am willing at any time to testify to its good merits."—Bluffs (Ill.) Times.

Sculpture as a Fine Art.

"I think I could have been a sculptor," remarked Whinger, in the bosom of his family.

"Do you, now? Just think of that," exclaimed Mrs. Whinger, admirably.

"Yes," continued the great man, musingly, "all it needs, you see, is a big hunk of stone, and then you just knock off what you don't want, and that's all."—Judy.

WHAT SAY THE PEOPLE

DO THEY WANT TAXATION LIGHTENED BY INCREASE OF RAILWAY GROSS EARNINGS TAX?

If so, They Will Have to Act—The Railroad Lobby Is Out to Kill the Pending Measure—Let the People Be Heard From—Otherwise They Will Continue to Carry the Railroad "White Man's Burden"—Recent Additional State Appointments—An Echo of the Gold Standard Campaign in Minneapolis. Little Windy Grondahl's Press Bureau. Honored Tribute to Governor Lind's Message—Notes and Comments of the Week.

Reform Press Bureau.
St. Paul, March 13, 1899.

Do the people want their taxation burdens decreased and justice done by raising railroad taxation to its just share? is the burning question of the week, presented in the situation of the measure proposing to increase the gross earnings tax 1 per cent. The bill was introduced by Mr. Jacobson of the house, in conformity with the earnest recommendation of Governor Lind in his inaugural message. It met the fire of the railroad lobby from the start, but was able to do no more than delay the bill, which was No. 39, one of the early ones, for it has marched through the house triumphantly. It is threatened with death in the senate, however, where the lobby has its machinery in far better shape, and the smaller body to deal with.

It should not need a word to arouse the people to the importance of action. The reasons for raising the railroad tax were so clearly set out in Governor Lind's message, and the matter has been so well presented by the press, that it would seem that all that would be necessary would be to inform the people of the situation, and the determination of the corporations to defeat the measure if in their power, to cause immediate and efficient effort to wake up the senate and secure the law beyond all question.

This is the case in a nutshell, condensed from Governor Lind's message. The roads of the state paid in 1887 $1,128,000 on something over 6,000 miles of road. With the low valuation of $10,000 per mile the taxable railroad property would be $60,000,000, and at the rate other property is taxed, 24 mills on the dollar, would have paid $1,440,000 for that year, or a loss to the state of over $300,000, which if paid would reduce the people's taxes just that sum.

But another aspect of the case appeals with greater force, to-wit, our relation to the other states in the Northwest group, in which the lines interested also operate, those of Wisconsin, Iowa, Nebraska and the two Dakotas. The roads are not operated with reference to state lines, but the gross earnings are apportioned among the states in proportion to the mileage in the states. Now those states of the Minnesota group all have greater gross earnings tax than our own—Wisconsin having 4 per cent, Iowa 4, Illinois 7 per cent. The average rate collected in those states was 4.3, or more than one-third higher than the rate in Minnesota. That is, if we had had a rate as high as the average of these neighbors we should have increased the railroad taxes, and thus reduced the amount necessary for the people to pay, more than $600,000. But as railroad taxes are simply a part of their expense account and thus apply in the net totals on which earnings and dividends are based, it follows that we get no benefit of lower freight or passenger rates by a low gross earnings charge, and it follows that our neighbors by the higher tax do get the lower rates. Our people simply help to pay taxes in the other states.

Thus in the state our people take up the railroad "White Man's Burden," and Minnesota takes up the same "Burden" for her neighbors.

The lobby is applying against the bill every stock argument and effective means. Especially are they now using the time worn racket of having employes and others get up petitions and remonstrances in the railroad towns, and along the lines, claiming that to reduce the rate will reduce the wages of employes.

It is suggested that the people take prompt steps to meet this and other moves, and by petition, resolutions, letters and otherwise, inform their senators of their sentiments in the matter. Too much is at stake to warrant delay or hesitancy.

The most important measure becoming a law by the governor's signature in the past week is perhaps that making the railroad commissioners elective. The Republicans made the bill as partisan as possible, throwing the election of the long terms into presidential years, when they calculate they have more chance of carrying the state. But we shall fool them, at least in 1900—and, as Long John Silver, the pirate, would say in "Rescue Island," "You may lay to that."

Speaking of commissioners, it would have done farmers good to have seen Chief Inspector Clausen inspect wheat before the Jacobson committee. Not one sample did he make the same grade and dockage as had been certified to by his "efficient and scientific" subordinates at the terminal elevators. In each case Clausen declared that if the grades were given as stated, they were gross wrongs. That is what's the matter. Not one charge as made against the grain department in the last campaign has been disproved, but evidence has accumulated that the department is rotten from head to foot, especially about the head; say rotten at the head and smells badly at the foot!

Not one-half of the principal appointments at the disposal of Governor Lind have been made. Those since last report are as follows, distributed by counties:

Hennepin county—H. C. Barrows, oil inspector; J. E. Osboro, grain department; Paul Waldt, labor department; W. Corbett, dairy department; A. T. Williams, game and fish commission; E. E. Youngteo, grain department.

Ramsey county—E. T. Quinliven, oil inspector; Clemens Debold, boiler inspector; W. Pitt Murray, training school board; Jacob Danz, II, game and fish board; P. J. Smalley, dairy and food commission.

St. Louis county—C. J. Towne, oil inspector; F. W. Lonegrin, grain department; Z. H. Austin, deputy insurance commissioner; John Bentner, game and fish commissioner; John D. Brady, surveyor-general of logs and lumber; G. H. Lo Sage, dairy and food department.

Otter Tail county—S. Falkedal, oil inspector.

Isanti—Rev. G. Wahlund, board of corrections and charities.

Meeker—J. Anderberg, oil inspector.

Washington—J. A. O'Shaunessy, insurance commissioner.

Dakota—Lawrence C. Hodgson, department of public instruction.

Brown—W. R. Hodges, oil inspector.

LeSueur—A. J. Capphger, oil inspector.

Rice—H. B. Marlin, oil inspector; Edgar H. Loyhd, institute for defectives.

Goodhue—L. G. Loehrder, oil inspector.

Houston—William Thomas, oil inspector.

Filmore—S. M. Wilder, oil inspector.

Olmsted—Jos. H. Wagoner, insane hospital board.

Mower—Jacob Gnto, oil inspector.

Freeboro—T. J. Wanek, oil inspector.

Reoville—B. F. Benson, grain department.

McLeod—Jas. C. Fallon, grain department.

During the past week the organized woodworkers of Minneapolis, covering the sash and door factory men, have been defeated in their effort to have wages raised. In 1896 these employes were carrying sash and wearing yellow ribbons in Republican parades, under promises of better times and increased wages when McKinley had "opened the mills." In the Minneapolis meeting of employes and employers, the men quoted the reports of increased prosperity of the manufactories, and were informed by the employers' spokesman, ex-Senator J. T. Wyman, that such was not the situation. Then one of the woodworkers fired at the senator his speeches of 1896, when he promised return of vanquished prosperity by the election of McKinley. The reply was that in the heat of campaign a man "was liable to make rash statements." Senator Wyman's speeches of this character will be remembered as made from the Fourth street platform, Minneapolis, under the auspices of Colonel Tom Shevlin and others. It transpired that one of the reasons why Minneapolis cannot pay the demand of $1.75 per day is on account of the 90 cent wages in the same line in Wisconsin. How many of these deluded workmen will stand ready to march in the gold standard parades next year? We shall see.

In the current Republican press letter, imputed to Jens Grondahl, after the usual references to Governor Lind's lack of backbone, character, heart, and a few other vital essentials, a harrowing story is told of two little girls who have been pleading with the governor to retain their Republican father in some subordinate position. "Imagine the feelings of the little girls," cries Little Windy, "when informed that their request could not be granted." Of course Little Windy does not care to have any one imagine the feelings of the children of the Populist or Democratic father, who he declares will get these "spoils." Poor Little Windy. The general verdict about the legislature is that he must either have less mouth or less wind, or the whole fabric of the state kintergarten will be endangered.

Dairy Commissioner Bowler has promulgated official notice that violators of the food laws will be proceeded against without further notice. If rumors are correct something is liable to "drap" almost any time among food adulterators. Major Bowler does not propose to promote the embalmed food industry.

Among many prized comments on Governor Lind's inaugural message received by the governor, was one from Professor Richard T. Ely, director of the School of Economics, Political Science and History of the University of Wisconsin. Dr. Ely wrote:

"I received a copy of your message and find it extremely interesting and valuable. I like particularly what you say about forestry, and also about mineral reservations. I have reached similar conclusions, especially with respect to the reservation of rights by the state. The next time my class in the Distribution of Wealth meets I shall read extracts from your work as illustrative of the fortunate drift of opinion on the part of those who truly have the public welfare at heart."

"Less have some more prosperity," said a lumber baron who pulls the leading springs at Minneapolis. "All right," says the Lumber association, and they mark up lumber 50 cents per thousand, which means, if they own 500,000,000 feet that they have "made" $250,000 by the stroke of the pen. Of course it don't make any difference whether the people can buy their lumber or not. How would it do for the farmers to get together and "make some money" in the same way with their wheat?

The price of wheat has run along for months about 10 cents ahead of the market price of silver. Suppose silver by free coinage was raised to par, as it would be, and wheat kept pace with silver, as it would, as it always has, how would that suit the farmer? G. S. C.

AMERICAN FORCES REORGANIZED.

Thirteenth Minnesota Placed in Gen. McArthur's Division.

Manila, March 20.—The entire American force has been reorganized, two divisions of three brigades each being formed. Gen. Lawton assumed command of the First, which consisted of the Washington, North Dakota and California volunteers under Gen. King, six troops of the Fourth cavalry, the Fourteenth regulars, the Idaho volunteers and a battalion of Iowa troops, under Gen. Overshine, the Third and Twenty-second regular infantry and the Oregon regiment, under Gen. Wheaton, and Dyer's light batteries.

Gen. McArthur's division consists of two batteries of the Third artillery, the Kansas and Montana volunteers, under Gen. H. G. Otis; the Colorado, Nebraska and South Dakota regiments and six companies of the Pennsylvanias, under Gen. Hale; the Fourth and Seventeenth regulars, the Minnesota and Wyoming volunteers and the Utah artillery.

A separate brigade will be assigned to provost guard in the city, consisting of the Twentieth and eight companies of the Twenty-third infantry.

CHEMICALS WERE USED.

Emphatic Testimony of a Commissary Sergeant.

Leavenworth, Kan., March 20.—The army beef court of inquiry concluded taking testimony at Fort Leavenworth at noon yesterday and at 4:15 departed for Chicago, where the session will be resumed Monday. The sole witness examined was Sergeant Edward Mason, Troop A, First United States cavalry, located at Fort Robinson, Neb., who served as regimental commissary sergeant at Lakeland, Fla., and during the Cuban campaign. Sergeant Mason's testimony was probably the most direct that has been adduced since the court left Chicago, witness declaring that meat received at Lakeland for use in his regiment was "undoubtedly chemically treated. An agent of Armour & Co.," he further testified, "told me at the time that this meat had been treated with what was called preservaline." Witness had refused to accept the meat. Sergeant Mason was interrogated individually by each member of the court and could not be shaken in his testimony.

WINTER WHEAT DAMAGED.

Peculiar Weather Conditions Responsible for This.

Chicago, March 20.—That the winter wheat sown last fall under the most favorable conditions has been seriously damaged by the peculiar weather conditions which have prevailed is shown by reports from all the winter wheat producing states. The estimates as to the damage vary in a marked degree, some states reporting almost a total loss, while others report that the crop will be of fair size, but of poor quality.

PUTNAM ACCEPTS.

He Resigns His Position in Boston to Become Librarian of Congress.

Boston, March 20.—Herbert Putnam, librarian of the Boston public library, will accept the appointment to the librarianship of the library of congress. Mr. Putnam has placed in the hands of the president of the trustees of the Boston public library his resignation as librarian and clerk of the corporation. The date when his resignation will take effect has not yet been determined.

UNKNOWN DEAD.

One-fourth of the Dead Soldiers Disinterred Not Identified.

Washington, March 20.—The quartermaster's department has received a report from Santiago saying that out of more than 300 disinterments of the remains of soldiers to be brought to this country, 26 per cent are unknown dead. It is expected the percentage of unknown will be much less than this when the list is complete.

MINNESOTANS PUNISHED.

Six Men of the Fifteenth Committed to Prison.

Augusta, Ga., March 20.—Six men of the Fifteenth Minnesota have gone from here to St. Francis barracks. It is understood their sentences were for one year, except in the case of Williams, the ringleader, who got six years. This is not official, however, as Gen. Young, the reviewing authority, has published no orders.

TURNED DOWN.

The Czar Orders Finnish Deputation to Go Home.

St. Petersburg, March 20.—A Finnish deputation of 400 persons who recently arrived here to petition the czar against the Russification decrees has been ordered to return home immediately, the czar refusing to receive its members.

Klondike May All Be Ours.

Seattle, Wash., March 20. — News has reached here that five Finlanders claim to have discovered evidences of the origin of the Russian boundary line inscribed on a series of old mounds, which, if established, will place the klondike country within the United States. It is said that United States Consul McCook, at Dawson, will communicate with the Washington authorities regarding the matter.

Sherman Steadily Improving.

Kingston, Jam., March 20. — The American line steamer Paris, Capt. Fred Watkins, with the party of Americans touring in West Indian waters, arrived here yesterday. John Sherman is steadily improving, though he is still a very sick man, and cannot, with safety, be transferred to-day to the United States cruiser Chicago. Great interest is manifested in his recovery on board the Paris.

China Declines.

Peking, March 20.—Sir Claude MacDonald has been urging the tsung li yamun to grant the Belgian demand for a concession at Hankow, but China declines, and the British advocacy is regarded as unreasonable.

Dr. Marcy Passes Away.

Chicago, March 20. — Dr. Oliver Marcy, dean of the Northwestern university and professor of natural history in that institution, died at his home in Evanston, after a long illness, aged seventy-nine.

THE LEGISLATURE

Business Transacted by Minnesota Solons.

St. Paul, March 13.—The house Saturday emphatically rejected the proposition contained in Mr. Staples' bill creating a legislative committee of five members to conduct an investigation during the recess into the conduct of the correctional and charitable institutions of this and other states, with a view to possible legislation in the direction of a state board of control.

The following bills were passed:

Providing for a revision of the list of delinquent road tax by road overseers before the same is returned to the town supervisors. — Providing for the payment of arrears of pay to the enlisted men of the national guard. — Providing for a Minnesota standard policy for mutual hail insurance companies. — Providing for judgment and costs, pending stay of execution, shall draw 7 per cent interest. — Making tax receipts, stubs, etc., prima facie evidence of taxes paid and by whom paid, in actions concerning rights to real property. — Providing for a second edition of 19,000 copies of the legislative manual. — Enlarging the powers of councils in villages of more than 3,000 inhabitants relative to the removal of snow, etc., from sidewalks. — Providing a method for dedicating land for public roads or cartways. — Providing that no occupant of a public street or other public grounds may acquire title by adverse possession. — Making it a misdemeanor to dock the tail of a horse.

The following bills were introduced:

To prevent the desecration, mutilation or improper use of the flag of the United States or the flag of the State of Minnesota. — Enabling owners of land to test the validity of tax certificates at any time. — To amend the Laws of 1895, regulating the use of pound nets.

St. Paul, March 14.—The attendance of the house was light, but a heavy day's work was accomplished. The house was in committee of the whole almost all day and twenty-five bills were acted upon to a conclusion, while considerable progress was made on half a dozen more.

Mr. Jackson's bill to straighten out the horsethief bounty law and to reduce the bounty from the indefinite amount fixed by existing law to $25, and to put owners of bicycles and mules on an equal footing before the law with the owners of horses, was recommended to pass, but not until it had been very materially amended.

A communication was received from Secretary of State Hay conveying the protest of the Swiss minister against a discriminating tax on foreign insurance companies.

The following bills were passed: Making the term of office of municipal judges in cities of less than 5,000 inhabitants four years instead of three— To legalize certain sales of real estate under order of probate court—Relating to the addition of plotted territory to villages—Requiring railroads to adopt standard gauge—Authorizing municipal judges in cities of less than 5,000 inhabitants to call in an attorney to try cases in which the judge is or may have been interested.

St. Paul, March 15.—The senate put in a busy day yesterday, following its adjournment over Sunday. Senator Knatvold introduced a bill, which was passed under suspension of the rules, appropriating $1,500 for the use of the governor to defray the cost of cablegrams, etc., conveying for the benefit of relatives, information as to the condition of sick and wounded members of the Thirteenth Minnesota volunteers, now stationed at Manila doing heroic duty as the police force of that city. Among other matters of general interest that the senate did was to pass the Swenlagsen bill, requiring manufacturers of "process" or "renovated" butter to so brand the same before placing it on sale, and the advancement to the calendar of the Grindeland bill to license commission men and compel them to give a bond.

The following bills were passed:

Relating to exemption from taxation, exempts but one person of each family living in the same house who may own $100 or less of personal property. — Providing for the giving and enforcing of a lien for labor and services performed in cutting, hauling, banking, rafting driving, cribbing or towing logs, cedar poles, etc., gives employes first lien. — Providing for an investigation of Sunday labor by the commissioner of labor. — Providing for the issue of bonds for the purchase of sites and erecting school houses in independent school districts. — Relating to the ownership of real estate by corporations. — An act to provide for the incorporation of villages and to define their duties and powers, and to repeal certain laws in relation thereto. — Relating to the admission to practice of attorneys and counsellors at law. — To provide for clerk hire of county treasurers in counties where the treasurer's salary is fixed by special law.

The following bills were introduced:

Relating to the title to real estate by descent. — Relating to the practice of veterinary medicine. — To authorize county commissioners to appropriate money for the erection of monuments in memory of Union soldiers. — Relating to garnishment proceedings; exempts $9 a week. — To enable city councils of a certain class to assess abutting property benefitted by local improvements.

The House.

The house spent most of the day in passing the bills which had accumulated on the calendar for several days preceding. There was a list of twenty-eight of them. Not all of them were passed.

The combination horse-bicycle-thief-bounty bill was amended by reducing the bicycle bounty from $25 to $15, but even in this form could not command quite a majority. The vote was 36 to 38, which defeated the bill. Mr. Donahue gave notice of a motion to reconsider. Later in the day Mr. Donahue's motion was adopted and the bill recommitted to the committee of the whole. The anti-boycott bill went through by a vote of 66 to 15.

Among the more important bills passed were the following:

Providing that the provisions of the Chattel Mortgage Law of 1897, with respect to notice of sale, etc., shall apply to all conditional sale contracts, seed grain, liens, etc. — Defining the duties of contractors with respect to mechanics' liens. — Relating to farmers' mutual fire insurance companies.— Providing for the organization of towns in certain cases. — Authorizing county commissioners to pay for services of physicians called in emergencies to treat county patients. — Prohibiting boycotting. — Providing for a maximum penalty of $250 or six months' imprisonment for witnesses failing to obey subpoena. — Providing that right of way for public roads or cartways over property owned by a ward in guardianship or by the estate of a deceased may be obtained as right of way of railroads is now obtained. — making the removal of a bicycle malicious mischief. — Allowing the owner of property sold for taxes to pay one year's delinquent taxes at a time. — Raising the age of consent from fourteen to sixteen years. — Providing that a person convicted of non-support may give bond instead of going to jail. — Authorizing courts to hold sessions outside of county seats for the purpose of naturalization. — Relating to the incorporation of religious societies.

The following bills were introduced:

To amend section 3759, Statutes of 1894, relating to the apportionment of school funds. — Relating to apportionment of county school funds. — To provide for the punishment of persons from seven to sixteen years who commit a crime. — Relating to land titles. —Relating to the assessment and collection of taxes. — To allow territory to be detached from one school district and attached to another in certain cases.

St. Paul, March 10.—The Argetsinger bill carrying appropriations in aid of all classes of public schools was a special order for 10:15 yesterday and occupied the time of the house until 12:30. The bill was passed with several amendments. The appropriation for rural schools was increased from $50 to $75. The appropriation for high schools was reduced from $1,000 to $800. The specific appropriation for the expenses of the high school board —$8,000—was eliminated. The changes in the rural and high school items made possible a reduction of $20,000 in the aggregate in the one case and made necessary an increase of $8,000 in the other. Thus the bill carries $162,000, or $20,000 less than as it left the committee of the whole, but $74,000 more than the present law. The bill was strongly opposed by the Ramsey, Hennepin and St. Louis delegations and defended by the country members. The vote was 82 to 30.

The house devoted the entire afternoon to the discussion of the Staples bill providing for district insane hospitals at Anoka and Hastings, and adjourned without reaching any conclusion.

The following bills were introduced:

Providing for the collection and publication of statistics. — Declaring certain dogs to be public nuisances and providing for their destruction. — Providing for the leasing of the elevator site owned by the state at Duluth to the Grain Growers' Co-operative association. — Relating to corporations organized for the purpose of operating cemeteries or crematories. — To establish a naval reserve. — Relating to the state training school.

The Senate.

The senate spent most of its time yesterday in committee of the whole in consideration of bills on general orders. A large number of measures were disposed of.

The following bills were introduced:

To establish a naval reserve. — To provide for the better enforcement of the liabilities of corporations. — To appropriate money for the maintenance of the Fergus Falls insane asylum. — Relating to cemeteries in townships and villages of 500 inhabitants. — Relating to the removal of bodies from cemeteries. — Relating to private cemeteries and cemetery associations. — To prevent the erection of fences more than six feet high. — To fix the legal residence of insane persons and paupers. — To define and regulate tramps and beggars. To amend the laws relating to safe deposit and trust companies.

St. Paul, March 17.—The house yesterday got the insane hospital question off its hands temporarily, at least, and if the senate follows its lead, permanently, except as to the appropriation necessary to carry into effect the decision recorded yesterday. The Staples bill, very materially amended over its original form, was passed by the very substantial vote of 74 to 42. In brief, the bill provides for the immediate erection of a hospital institution, after the cottage plan, on the site already owned by the state at Anoka, and the purchase of the Hastings site for the location of the next hospital, when needed, at a cost of $15,000.

The bill to appropriate $1,500 for a governor's contingent fund to pay for cablegrams as to the condition of the Thirteenth regiment was passed.

The following bills were introduced:

Relating to the inspection of steam boilers. — To amend the statutes relating to stay of execution. — Relating to fees to public officers when witnesses in cases in which the state or any city or county is a party. — Relating to uniform heights of water to certain lakes.

The Senate.

The senate yesterday afternoon in committee of the whole, with Senator Chilton in the chair, took up for the first time the Wilson bill to parole the Younger brothers and the McGowan eight-hour bill. The McGowan bill was discussed at length and amended until the clerk could not read it, after which it was referred to a special committee to be whipped into shape in line with the amendments. The Wilson bill was discussed solely by its author, Senator Wilson of Hennepin, who had not completed his argument at the hour of adjournment, and progress was reported on the measure.

The following bills were passed:

Relating to the establishment of a board of inspectors to inspect steam vessels and steam boilers, increases the number of districts and inspectors from five to seven. — To amend the statutes, making the wife jointly liable with her husband for debts contracted for necessaries of life, such as groceries, etc. — To license and regulate the business of commission merchants or persons selling agricultural products on commission, and to require them to give bond, etc.

The following bills were introduced:

Relating to the assessment and collection of taxes. — To appropriate money for the St. Peter insane hospital. — Relating to savings banks. — To prevent the riding of bicycles on public sidewalks. — To amend the statutes relating to religious corporations. — To provide for the better enforcement of the liability of stockholders. — To amend the laws relating to the time allowed for presentation of claims. — To amend the statutes relating to counties and county officers. — To prevent fraud in the manufacture and sale of baking powder and vinegar.

St. Paul, March 18.—Immediately after routine business had been transacted the senate resolved itself into committee of the whole, and, with Senator Knatvold in the chair, spent the rest of the day in consideration of bills on general orders, with the satisfying result that twenty-five measures were advanced to the calendar.

The finance committee reported back with recommendation that it pass, the bill to place the state oil inspector on a salary basis. The bill is amended so as to make it effective as soon as it becomes a law, and also so that all salaries are to be paid out of fees collected from the inspection of oil and turned into a fund known as the "state oil inspection fund."

The senate adjourned over until Monday.

The following bills were passed:

To amend the Laws of 1893 defining legal newspapers. — To amend the laws relating to privileged communications to physicians. — Relating to duties of county commissioners. — To repeal chapter 87, Laws of 1885, relating to the redemption from tax sales. — To amend the insurance laws. — To regulate the sale of poisons. — Relating to the organization of counties.— To provide for the drainage of state swamp lands. — To make the seventeenth day of March a legal holiday. — To allow the lease of the state's grain elevator site at Duluth to the State Grain Growers' association. — Relating to the allowances of executors and administrators.

The House.

The chief interest in the house proceedings yesterday morning centered around Mr. Dwinnell's bill to change the basis of representation on the state board of equalization from one member for each judicial district to three for each congressional district. The country rallied against the bill and succeeded in getting a report for indefinite postponement from the committee of the whole. The house transacted considerable business in committee of the whole, being thus occupied most of the day. About forty bills were taken off general orders, thirty of them being recommended to pass, eight were killed and two were laid on the table to await action by the senate on similar bills.

The following bills were passed:

To prevent any city from assessing or collecting a water frontage tax for a longer period than five years. — To empower cities of more than 50,000 to restore to their original purposes streets or highways which have been taken for parkways.

The following bills were introduced:

Relating to property of corporations not organized for pecuniary profit. — Relating to town insurance companies. — Relating to newly organized counties.— To amend statutes relating to notaries public. — To provide for the regulation of private detective agencies. — Ratifying the proceedings of county commissioners in authorizing the construction of street railway lines on highways outside the limits of any city or village for a term not exceeding twenty-five years.

MUST WAIT AWHILE.

Volunteers Will Not Be Discharged at Once.

Washington, March 19.—Contrary to an expectation that seems to have obtained in some quarters, the signature of the treaty yesterday does not involve the immediate discharge of all the volunteer soldiers. It was stated positively at the state department that legally the treaty does not go into effect until the ratifications have been exchanged, and it will be further necessary for the president of the United States to proclaim it before the people of the United States, including the soldiers, can know officially that the war is over. In all respects, however, the state department will treat the war as at an end.

It is expected here that the Spanish government, immediately after the exchange of the ratifications, will proceed to negotiate a treaty of commerce, trade and amity, the old treaties having been abrogated by the outbreak of war and there being nothing in force to protect trade between the United States and Spain.

Conspiracy to Defraud.

New York, March 19. — D. B. Kellogg, Samuel Keller and Myron S. Bernard, members of the old bucketshop firm of E. S. Dean & Co., were each held in $2,000 bail for trial. They are charged with acting in conspiracy to defraud several thousand persons throughout the United States who forwarded them money to put in what was known as discretionary pools. The concern failed with over $200,000 liabilities.

Seriously Crushed.

Harmony, Minn., March 19.—Charles Thompson was seriously injured by one of his horses. He went to the barn and picked up a blanket which he attempted to put upon the animal, which took fright and crowded him up against the manger with terrible force, injuring him severely.

En Route to Manila.

Singapore, March 19.—The transport Sherman, from New York on Feb. 3, with the Third infantry and four companies of the Seventeenth infantry on board, has arrived here.

Editor Ordered to Jail.

Washington, Iowa, March 19.—Judge Scott has ordered Editor Hencock, of the Brighton Enterprise, to jail in this city to serve six months for libel.

Mrs. Harold Frederick, widow of the well known American correspondent who died in London in October last, is dead of cancer in London.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of Testimonials.

Buck Taylor Says "Pe-ru-na Is the Best Catarrh Cure on Earth—Cured Me."

Sergeant Buck Taylor, one of the famous Rough Riders, is a personal friend of Governor Roosevelt of New York. He accompanied Governor Roosevelt on his great stumping tour through upper New York state. He was promoted through gallantry in the field during the late war.

The Sergeant has the following to say of Pe-ru-na: "I think there is no better medicine on earth than Pe-ru-na, for catarrh. It has cured me. It would take a volume to tell you all the good it has done me. Pe-ru-na is the best catarrh cure on earth, and I know, for I have tried nearly all of them. Respectfully, Buck F. Taylor."

Winter weather causes catarrh. Everybody knows this. But everybody does not stop to think that winter weather delays the cure of catarrh. It takes longer to cure a case of catarrh in the winter generally, than in the warm season. Spring is here. Now is the time favorable to the treatment of old and especially stubborn cases of catarrh.

CLOTHES SPECIALS.

Queer Pockets and Things Tailors Have to Put In Garments.

"No special."

With that remark to the assistant who took down the measurements the tailor dismissed his patron and said that the suit would be finished "sure" on a certain day.

"What did you mean by saying 'no special' to your clerk?" asked the customer.

"Well, that means that you want your clothes made all right and without any crank things about them. Pockets are the great specials. We have customers who want, besides the regular pockets, places in their waistcoats for pencils, eyeglasses and all sorts of things. Some pencil pockets are made to hold only one pencil and some for a bunch. Eyeglass pockets are also ordered in keeping with the shape and style of the glasses, and pockets for cigars are ordered for all sizes, from the little half pencil shape to the great big perfecto. Freak pockets, inside of other pockets, are also in demand, and chamois lined pockets, which we usually make for the watch side of the waistcoat, are ordered often for trousers by men who carry silver trinkets in them."

Another class of special customers are those whose garments are made with a view to the wearer's health. Many men have an inner band of red flannel put on the waist of their trousers as a cure for rheumatism, and some driving coats are made so that sheets of stout paper may be slipped between the breast lining and the cloth when driving against the wind.

"On the whole," said the tailor, "a man in my business has the best opportunity to find out the kinks and queer points about men, not only as to their persons, but their minds."—New York Tribune.

FINERTY'S SERMON.

It Brought Praise From the Preacher Who Didn't Deliver It.

Before ex-Congressman John Finerty became famous as the great American British lion tail twister he was one of the best reporters in Chicago. He was on The Tribune and one day a certain city editor (best known to fame as the man who always wore a straw hat and smoked a corncob pipe) decided that Mr. Finerty should be disciplined.

It was Saturday, and some time after midnight. Mr. Finerty was assigned to report the morning sermon of an obscure minister way down on the South Side. Finerty was the senior, and his associates were thunderstruck. They expected an explosion, at least, but Finerty remained calm and dignified, although a trifle pale. "Then he will resign," they thought, but Finerty walked out and made no sign. To the surprise of every one, he reported the next day as usual and turned in an abstract of the sermon. Every one read it on Monday morning, and it was certainly an eloquent and carefully reported sermon.

That afternoon a man of clerical cut called on the city editor and asked to see the young man who had reported his sermon the morning before. Mr. Finerty was introduced. The man of the clerical cut would like to see Mr. Finerty alone for a few moments. Out in the hallway he asked, "Of course, you were not at my church yesterday morning?"

"No," replied Finerty.

"Well, I simply stopped to thank you for the sermon. It was far more eloquent than the one I preached."

Finerty had composed the sermon in a neighboring cellar beer saloon on Saturday night.—Lippincott's Magazine.

Fog In Photography.

One serious and at the same time unsuspected source of fog in photography is often due to the fact that the blacking has slightly worn off the lens mount and there is a reflection which results in a loss of brilliancy in the negative. Constant use and endless cleaning of the lens in time wear the blacking off, and this should be attended to and all metal parts kept well blocked. Where lenses are mounted in aluminium still more care is necessary in this respect, as, wherever in such cases the blacking wears off, white light instead of yellow light is reflected into the lens.

Sometimes diaphragms of the iris pattern are greatly at fault in this respect. By reason of its construction the leaves or vanes in this diaphragm are in constant friction while being set, and thus become polished and reflective, for which reason some photographers avoid having iris diaphragms in their lenses, notwithstanding their convenience. A careful examination of the apparatus will insure safety in this matter. Stops of the ordinary pattern become in time little better than bare metal, especially at the edges of the aperture.

Some Clerical Jokes.

"Do you have matins in your church?" "No, we prefer linoleum." Another clerk gave out in church, "Let us sing to the praise and glory of God a hymn of my own composure." A lady asked the dean to read at her bedside "that beautiful lesson * * * there was summat about greaves in it." The dean read her I Samuel, xvii. "She listened with arms outstretched and made no comment until I came to the verse, 'He had greaves of brass upon his legs.' At this she raised her hands in ecstasy and said, 'Ah, them greaves, them beautiful greaves!'"—"Phases of My Life," by Dean Pigou.

FREAKS OF MEMORY.

QUEER PRANKS FOR WHICH THERE IS NO ACCOUNTING.

Some Instances of the Singular Effects Produced Upon the Mind by Gazing Steadily at a Crystal—Forgotten Incidents Recalled.

The queer freaks of memory are a constant puzzle to those who study psychical phenomena. Who has not been driven to the verge of distraction by the total inability to recall a name when an effort was made to do so and when the occasion for such remembrance was past had the missing name flash into the mind apparently of its own volition?

Great minds have wrestled to find an explanation for the pranks that memory plays and have had to give up the effort. In the course of a systematic attempt to arrive at some understanding with regard to the wonders of memory a very valuable and unique body of testimony has been obtained. The following questions have been put to 200 American university students and professional persons, 151 being men and 49 being women. The answers are here given with the questions.

Question 1.—When you cannot recall a name you want, does it seem to come back spontaneously without being suggested by any perceived association of ideas? To this 11 per cent answered "No" and 81 per cent "Yes."

Question 2.—Does such recovery ever come during sleep? To this 17 per cent answered "No" and 28 per cent "Yes." Some examples given:

1. This morning I tried to recall the name of a character I had read of the night before in one of Scott's novels and failed. I taught a class, and walking home in the afternoon all the names recurred to me without effort.

2. I tried to recall the name of a book. Gave it up. Half an hour later while talking of something else blurted it out without conscious volition.

Question 3.—On seeing a sight or hearing a sound for the first time, have you ever felt that you had seen (or heard) the same before? Fifty-nine per cent answered "Yes."

The action of unconscious memory during sleep is illustrated by further queries:

Question 4.—Do you dream? Ninety-four per cent answered "Yes."

Question 5.—Can you wake at a given hour determined before going to sleep without waking up many times before? Fifty-nine per cent answered "Yes." Thirty-one per cent answered "No."

Question 6.—If you can, how about failure? Sixty-nine per cent seldom failed; 25 per cent often.

Question 7.—Do you come direct from oblivion into consciousness? Sixty-four per cent answered "Yes" and 16 per cent "Gradually."

Examples:

1. I had to give medicine every two hours exactly to my wife. I am a very sound sleeper, but for six weeks I woke up every two hours and never missed giving the medicine.

2. I am always awake five minutes before the hour I set the alarm.

3. I had had little sleep for ten days and went to bed at 9, asking to be called at midnight. I fell asleep at once. I rose and dressed as the clock struck 12, and could not believe I had not been called.

A strange phenomenon has come to light in the course of the inquiry into the mystery of memory. It has been discovered that by gazing steadily at a crystal consciousness is partly lost. Into the void thus produced those who have practiced crystal gazing find that there enter unbidden forgotten incidents and lost memories. To give a few instances: A lady in crystal gazing saw a bit of dark wall covered with white flowers. She was conscious she must have seen it somewhere, but had no recollection where. She walked over the ground she had just traversed and found the wall, which she had passed unnoticed.

She took out her bankbook another day. Shortly afterward she was gazing at the crystal and saw nothing but the number one. She thought it was some back number, but, taking up the bankbook, found to her surprise it was the number of the account.

At another time she destroyed a letter without noting the address. She could only remember the town. After gazing at the crystal some time she saw "321 Jefferson avenue." She addressed the letter there, adding the town, and found it was right.

A lady sat in a room to write where she had sat eight years before. She felt her feet moving restlessly under the table and then remembered that eight years before she always had a footstool. It was this her feet were seeking.

Psychical research brings to light many cases of similar strange tricks of memory. It is easy to find instances that serve to deepen the mystery. It is not so easy to give an explanation. The cleverest men who have attempted to do so have had to admit defeat.—Washington Post.

The Women of Belgium.

No one can travel in Belgium without being struck by the extraordinary activity and prominence of the women. Over the doors of shops of all descriptions the name of the owner or owners is frequently followed by "Sœurs" or "Veuve." You find them proprietors of hotels and restaurants. They are often custodians of the churches. They are employed to tow the boats along the canal banks. They cut up the meat in the butchers' shops, and they are even to be noticed shoeing horses at the forge.

A FEW DATES.

During the month of March there will be a number of first-class attractions at the Grand Opera House, Crookston.

On March 22nd, John Griffith, well known through his former visits in "Faust" will be seen in a romantic drama. Mr. Griffith is a great favorite throughout this section of the country.

Tuesday afternoon, March 28th, Sousa's full concert band will give one of their incomparable concerts. Reduced rates will be made on all railroads and trains run so as to allow everyone to attend. This attraction will draw the largest audience that have ever attended a theater in Crookston.

Wednesday March 29th, that great actor, Lewis Morrison, will present his version of "Faust." Mr. Morrison ranks as the greatest Mephisto who has ever appeared on the stage, and his visit to Crookston will give all an opportunity to see this great play presented by the actor who has made it famous.

Bank Impertinence.

The Philadelphia Record tells of an old Pennsylvania farmer who recently came into possession of a check for $200. It caused him a great deal of anxiety, and for a long time he could not muster up the courage to have it cashed. Finally, while on a trip to town, he summoned up nerve enough and, strolling into the bank, presented the check. The teller glanced at it hastily, and then, after the fashion of his kind, brusquely asked, "What denomination?"

"Lutheran, gol durn it! But what's that got tew do with it?" as brusquely replied the old farmer, to the great astonishment of the bank official.

It required several minutes' explanation before the teller could get the old man to understand his question, and then the latter took his money and departed, with sundry growls derogatory to banks in general.

Equal to the Occasion.

In 1840 a great convention was held in Baltimore by the young men of what was then known as the Whig party for the purpose of ratifying the nomination of General William Henry Harrison for the presidency. There was no hall in the city large enough to hold the crowd of delegates who attended. The convention accordingly met on the Canton race track, and when the great Whig orator of this state, who was chairman of the Young Men's national committee, arose to call the meeting to order he was so impressed by the vastness of the assemblage before him that instead of the usual formula he exclaimed, "The nation will please come to order!"—Baltimore Sun.

MYSTERIOUS LIGHT AT SEA.

Three Steamers Didn't Understand It, but the Prince of Monaco Knew.

The Prince of Monaco has been known since 1885 as an enthusiastic student of the sea and its various forms of life. He usually spends his summers in the study of oceanographic problems, and his cruises have on some occasions been extended almost to the coast of America. He delivered a lecture before the Royal Geographical society in London in which he told this incident:

One afternoon while in the bay of Biscay, he sank the trap in which he collected specimens of sea life. It went to the bottom in over 12,000 feet of water, and as night approached he fastened to the wire attached to it an electric buoy and then stood off a mile or so. It did not happen to occur to him that he was right in the track of steamers plying between northern Europe and the Mediterranean, but he was reminded of the fact later.

As he and his 14 sailors were watching with a good deal of satisfaction the swaying buoy with its brilliant illumination a steamer's lights came into view. It was seen evident that the steamer was curious to know the meaning of the illumination, for she altered her course and made for the light. She knew that no fishing boats came out so far from land and so determined to solve the mystery. Up she came to within a quarter of a mile of the buoy, slowed up for a minute, and then started ahead, perhaps a little disgusted at the incident that had lured her several miles out of her course.

She had hardly got away when a second steamer came into view, and she, too, bore down upon the lighted buoy. The marines on the prince's vessel understood by this time that the illumination was probably believed to be evidence of a disaster. Just as the prince's steamer was moving up to explain matters she was nearly run down by one of the large liners in the oriental trade which had also left her course to render what assistance she could.

The swell was very heavy, and the prince feared a collision as the three vessels approached the light like moths around a candle. He therefore veered off and the other vessels, after standing by for a few minutes, went on their way and probably never learned the cause of that night's illumination at sea.

But the incident gave the prince a pointer. He carefully refrained thereafter from exhibiting his electric buoy on any of the much traveled ocean routes.—New York Sun.

Whereas, default has been made in the condition of a certain mortgage, made, executed and delivered by Kate Wilmes and Michael Wilmes, her husband, mortgagors, to Anna Ericsson, mortgagee, dated the 11th day of October 1896 and recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of Polk County, Minnesota on the 31st day of October 1893, at four o'clock p. m. in Book 76 of Mortgages, on page 153, thereof conveying and mortgaging lands and premises therein described as follows: All those tracts or parcels of land lying and being in the county of Polk and State of Minnesota, described as follows: to-wit: Lots numbered 23 and 24 in Champagne and Dow's addition to the village, now city of Red Lake Falls, according to the plat thereof on file and of record in the office of the register of Deeds in and for the county of Polk and State of Minnesota: and

Whereas, said mortgagors, covenanted in and by said mortgage deed to pay all taxes which were then or might be thereafter assessed upon the said premises and in case of their failure to do so that said mortgagee might pay the same and that said taxes so paid would become a part of the debt secured by said mortgage. Said mortgagors further covenanted that in case of default in any of the conditions of said mortgage therein contained said mortgagee was duly authorized and empowered to consider the whole sum secured by said mortgage as immediately due and payable.

That default has been made in the condition of said mortgage in this—that the mortgagors have neglected and refused to pay the taxes on said above described premises for the years 1896, 1897 and 1898 and that there is now $179.95 delinquent taxes against said above described premises. That said mortgagee has elected to and does hereby declare and consider the whole sum secured by said mortgage as now due and payable, being the sum of one thousand one hundred and twenty-nine dollars and ninety-five cents ($1,129.95), the amount due and claimed to be due upon said mortgage at this date. And no action or proceeding at law or in equity has been instituted to recover the debt secured by said mortgage or any part thereof.

Now, therefore, notice is hereby given, that by virtue of the power of sale in said mortgage contained and therewith recorded and pursuant to the statutes in such cases made and provided said mortgage will be foreclosed by sale of the above described mortgaged premises by the Sheriff of said Red Lake county at public auction, at the front door of the Court House in the city of Red Lake Falls, in the county of Red Lake and State of Minnesota, on Saturday the 29th day of April, A. D. 1899, at ten o'clock in the Forenoon to satisfy the amount which will then be due on said mortgage and the debt secured thereby, together with the cost and charges of said foreclosure, including the sum of Fifty dollars ($50.00) Attorney's fees as stipulated in said mortgage.

Dated this 13th day of March A. D. 1899.

Farmers and others are being victimized in a new way. An agent comes around, secures permission to tack up signs, and then gets the owner to sign an agreement not to tear the sign down for a period of ninety days. These agreements subsequently turn up as ninety day notes for $300 each.

—For cuts and sores there is nothing better than the Imperial Carbolic salve.

I. J. MacConnell, Supt. of the sales department of the St. Hilaire Lumber Co., came down yesterday to meet his wife who was returning from a visit east. Owing to the fact that the train on that branch was not held for a connection with the belated main line train he was compelled to lay over here at considerable expense, and he has a kick coming.—Saturday Crookston Times.

Jim White, the only full blood Indian that has been known to work six days in a week, month in and month out, returned from the pineries last Friday where he has been working all winter. Jim has worked two seasons for the St. Hilaire Lumber Co., and comes back at their request to work this season. Jim is also a "yankee" having taken out his full citizen papers a few years ago.

The Van Dusen Harrington Company grain merchants of Minneapolis have prepared a circular on "Preparation of Seed Wheat and Prevention of Smut" and ask farmers to write to them for as many copies of the circular as they want for distribution among neighbors. The last page gives this advice. "Do now whatever is necessary for seeding. Clean and sack the seed and clean and repair and oil the seeder. Remember that "as ye sow, so shall ye reap," and always lay by, at threshing time, the very best grain for seed."

Once in a while we are approached by a subscriber and asked why it is that when Mr. So-and-so goes anywhere it is always in the paper, but, they say, "when any of my folks go or come you don't say anything about it." Now that's an easy question. It's simply because we didn't find it out. The average country editor is not a mind reader, no matter how many other attainments he may possess, but all you have to do is to drop in and mention any of these little personal items, and we will gladly print them.

To Cure a Cold in One Day.

Take Warner's White Wine of Tar Syrup, the best cough remedy on earth, 25 and 50 cts. For sale by the Imperial Drug Co., St. Hilaire.

—If you are troubled with rheumatism take the Imperial Blood and Rheumatism cure. It will positively cure all diseases arising from impure blood, and is sold under an absolute guarantee to benefit or money refunded. Call for free sample at the New Drug Store.

From Farm, Stock and Home.

In the absense of the hot-bed start cabbage and tomato seed in boxes in the house.

It is always safe to prepare for a hard winter and an early spring, now is the time to do the last.

The busy season will soon be here; preparations, big and little, for it should not be neglected now.

Depend less upon law for protection from frauds and more upon your own judgment and physical senses.

Those who corked the cracks in stables last fall had abundant reason to congratulate themselves and their animals many times during the winter.

For a year or two there was considerably less smutty wheat in this region than formerly, but last season it developed again and now there is much complaint of smut, and much of the wheat designed for seed is smutty and should be treated before sowing. There is no doubt that the recent comparative immunity from smut was due to the previous quite general treatment of seed wheat, and if that treatment had been kept up even after there seemed to be no occassion for it there probably would have been no return of the pest. All things considered, there is no better way to treat wheat for smut than with a solution of blue vitriol ("blue stone") and water, 3 or 4 pounds of the first to a gallon of the last. If the wheat can be subject to a bath of the solution for a few seconds only, and provision is made for draining the solution back into the vessel containing it, the stronger solution is the best. That solution need not be in contact with the wheat long enough to soak and swell it, in which case there is less waste of the solution, and the seed can be more quickly used if it is desired to treat at seeding time.

The Best Cough Remedy on Earth.

Warner's White Wine of Tar Syrup, Consumption Cure, cures a cold in 24 hours if taken in time and does not stop a cough in ONE MINUTE by paralyzing the throat, but it cures the disease and leaves the throat and lungs healthy and strong. 25 and 50 cts. For sale by the Imperial Drug Co., St. Hilaire.

Stick to Her, My Boy.

We are talking for the boys this time. If one of you boys ever come across a girl with a face full of roses who says as you come to the door, "I can't go for thirty minutes, for the dishes are not washed," you wait for that girl. You sit right down on the doorstep and wait for her. Cause some other fellow may come along and carry her off, and right there you have lost an angel. Wait for that girl and stick to her like a burr in a mules tail.—Minn., Lake Tribune.

O. A Wiste a former St. Hilaire boy, but now of Hallock has a champagne bottle all sealed up and promises to keep it so until he marries some fair damsel. The Hallock Enterprise has this to say: "O. A. Wiste celebrated his 30th birthday last Saturday evening and a number of invited guests pronounces it a right royal time. The only thing that marred the pleasure of the evening, we learn, was Mr. Wiste's refusal to tap a bottle of champagne which, he claims, was presented to him five or six years ago and which is yet intack. Some of the boys tried to steal a march on the bottle, but Wiste caught them in the act. He promises that the cork in this bottle would never be pulled only on the event of his wedding. Think of it boys, one score years and ten—the chances are the cork will never be pulled."

For a plain, practicial and instructive paper, made largely by farmers and wholly for farmers, Farm, Stock and Home of Minneapolis, Minn., has no equal among agricultural journals. We can furnish it in connection with the SPECTATOR one year for only $125.

The Best Governor Yet.

It is admitted on all sides that John Lind is making the best governor Minnesota ever had. Careful, conscientions and deliberate in the minutes details, he cannot help but administer the affairs of state in a matter that will win the admiration of not only his friends but those who are politically opposed to him.—St. Paul Broadaxe.

There's a world of good sense in the gossip of the bald-headed editor of the Anoka Union. Here's a sample: "Its all very nice for a town to reach after new enterprises and industries, but it is much nicer to give support to those already located. Take good care of those you have, and it won't take the outside world very long to find out how a place stands by the manufacturing institutions already in operations, and the chances are it will be an easy snap to gain additions. If there are favors to be extended, extend a part to those who are with you now. You can build up a great deal in this way."

—The SPECTATOR is the official paper of the village and county. Now is the time to subscribe. $1.00 per year if paid in advance—otherwise $1.50.

The National Advertiser tells a story of an old bachelor who bought a pair of sox, and found attached to one of them a slip of paper with the words: "I am a young lady of 20 and would like to correspond with a bachelor, with a view of matrimony. Name and address were given. The bachelor wrote, and in a few days got this letter: "Mama was married twenty years ago" The merchant you bought those socks from evidently did not advertise or he would have sold them long ago. Mamma handed me your letter, and said I might suit you. I am eighteen years old.

—La Grippe is again epidemic and every precaution should be taken to avoid it. When everything else fails, try a bottle of the Imperial Sarsaparilla it will cure Grippe in all its forms. Free samples at the New Drug Store.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

Regular Correspondent.

The "nigger" in the canal legislation of Congress is becoming visible to the naked eye. The work done by the Panama Canal company's lobbyists in killing legislation for the construction of the Nicaragua Canal and getting a commission to examine and report upon both the Nicaragua and Panama routes, is now being supplemented by other shrewd work towards roping this country in as a partner in the Panama Canal. As another move in that direction about sixty Senators and Representatives have accepted invitations for a months junket upon an elegent steamship, as guests of the Panama Canal Co., the junket to include a visit to Cuban ports of interest. The Panama Canal has already been the cause of a great scandal in France, brought about by this way of spending money to influence legislation.

Consternation was caused among some of the War Department officials by some of the testimony given before the Military Court of Inquiry, in Chicago, this week. There had evidently been a weak spot somewhere in the Alger coaching department, and it may result in another court-martial for Eagan, the verdict of which Mr. McKinley will not dare to set aside or mitigate, and serious trouble for other officers who have been connected with the Alger clique. Col. Smith, the War Department purchasing agent at Chicago, testified that he bought a lot of second-class canned beef because he didn't know any better also that he bought all the canned beef he bought by sample and trusted entirely to the honesty of the packers to furnish it up to sample, and that canned roast beef was first purchased by direct order of Gen. Eagan. But the most damaging portion of his testimony was that Eagan in a number of instances ignored him entirely and bought by wire, without competition, large quantities of canned roast beef. The justification of Gen. Miles is forcing itself to the front notwithstanding extraordinary efforts to keep it back.

When Admiral Higginson wrote a letter declining the promotion given to him because the nominations of his brother officers for similar promotions had not been acted upon by the Senate, while his had been confirmed, the country expressed its admiration for the extraordinory display of magnanimsty; when Sampson made an attempt to square himself by following with a letter to the Secretary of the Navy, suggesting that his name be left out of the promotions sent to the Senate, at the next session of Congress, the country gave him the ha! ha! of derision. The public is often humbugged, but in these two cases it correctly sized up the genuine and the imitation without a moment's hesitation or a single pointer, other than the letters of the two men and what anybody knew of their records. Sampson cannot live long enough to live down the bad opinion the people have had of him ever since it became known that he deliberately attempted to appropriate to himself honors which he knew belonged to Schley, and in order to do so did not hesitate to attempt to blacken the record of Schley. Fairplay is something that many do not get, but he who does not believe in it and practice is it unworthy to be called an American.

Yes, We All Know Him.

Edgeley Mail: Most editors are familiar with the man who "takes more papers than he can read," and consequently has no use for his local paper. He takes a paper in Augusta, Me., which contains all "The Smuggler's Last Cruise," "The Bandit King," etc., and while storing his mind with such information his wife and children are reading a last year's almanac. But let them get into trouble and they rush to the local newspaper to get them out. If his wife or baby dies, he wants a column obituary and if his son or daughter gets married he wants a long write-up of the affair with a list of presents and names of guests. Yet he is "taking so many papers" that he can't afford to become a regular subscriber to his home paper, and makes all kinds of a holler if he has to pay more than the regular yearly rate for a single copy containing a puff of himself and family.

The mother suffered and she thinks her daughter must suffer also. This is true only to a limited extent. No excessive pain is healthy. INDULGENT MOTHERS

Many a young girl's beauty is wasted by unnecessary pain at time of menstruation, and many indulgent mothers with mistaken kindness permit their daughters to grow careless about physical health.

MISS CARRIE M. LAMB, Big Beaver, Mich., writes: "DEAR MRS. PINKHAM—A year ago I suffered from profuse and irregular menstruation and leucorrhœa. My appetite was variable, stomach sour and bowels were not regular, and was subject to pains like colic during menstruation. I wrote you and began to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and used two packages of Sanative Wash. You can't imagine my relief. My courses are natural and general health improved."

MRS. NANNIE ADKINS, La Due, Mo., writes:

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM—I feel it my duty to tell you of the good your Vegetable Compound has done my daughter. She suffered untold agony at time of menstruation before taking your medicine; but the Compound has relieved the pain, given her a better color, and she feels stronger, and has improved every way. I am very grateful to you for the benefit she has received. It is a great medicine for young girls."

"Yes."

"Well, the young man had a terrible bad case of dyspepsia."

"Yes. I see."

"Being a dyspeptic, you know, he was naturally touchy."

"Of course."

"Well, after he had told the doctor all about his troubles, and how he felt after eating, and so on, he sat back and pulled at his red mustache and waited for the doctor to prescribe."

"Exactly, I understand."

"And when the doctor told him what to do, the young man started to fight, and thats all there is about it."

"But, see here," called the curious man, as the other started to walk away, "the doctor must have said something to offend the young man with the red mustache, didn't he?"

"Oh, yes, of course. But he didn't mean it, you know. When he told the young man with the red mustache to diet, he wasn't referring to the mustache. You're welcome. Good-day."—New York World.

Tobacco Judges.

"Even the best judges of tobacco can't always be depended upon," remarked a dealer, the other day. "Sometimes their taste goes back on them, so to speak, and remains blunted for a week at a stretch. One of my customers, for instance, is a cotton man who is very particular about his cigars, and one of the few real connoisseurs in town. When he is in good form he can tell more about tobacco on a superficial examination than anybody I know, with the single exception of a dealer who has a big reputation as an expert. About a month ago this gentleman began to complain about a favorite brand of very high-class cigars. I knew the goods were all right, and advised him to buy something else for a while. He finally began smoking a pipe, and used a cheap cut-plug that he declared was the best thing he ever tried. One day, all of a sudden, his taste returned, and he went back to the cigars. At present the bare smell of cut plug will make him ill. It is strange, isn't it? They tell me that the professional samplers of tobacco take a week off every few months, and never look at the weed until they return to duty. In that way they keep in condition.

A BILL.

An Act Proposing an Amendment to the Constitution of the State of Minnesota:

Be It Enacted by the Legislature of the State of Minnesota:

Section 1. An amendment to the constitution of the State of Minnesota is hereby proposed unto the people of the state, as Section 37, of Article 4 of the constitution.

Section 37. All legislative power herein granted is subordinate unto the inherent legislative authority of the people, which is to be exercised as follows:

The qualified electors, in number not less than ten thousand, may, at any time, propose legislative measures by delivering, in person or by agent, a petition for the enactment of any such measure to the governor of the state. Upon receipt of any such petition, the governor shall, within three days, cause a copy thereof to be made and filed in the office of the secretary of state. The original petition and copy shall be safely kept, but shall be subject to public inspection. Any citizen of the state may, by a written document, delivered to the governor, protest against the enactment of the measure so proposed. In like manner, any citizen may question the authenticity of the signatures to any petition and the electoral qualifications of a number of those purporting to sign such petition, sufficient, if the number questioned be found unqualified, to reduce the number of qualified electors signing such legislative petition to less than ten thousand. All questions of fact arising against any such petition shall be decided by the supreme court of the state, and it shall be the duty of the governor to notify said court of any protest, within three days after publication. The supreme court shall make and file its decision, in writing, within the period of twenty days from the date of its notification by the governor.

If no such protest shall have been filed within thirty days from the exhibition of a legislative petition, or, in case a protest shall have been made and shall have been determined by the supreme court to be contrary to the fact, then within a period of thirty days from such adjudication, the governor shall send a message to the legislature, if in session, or, if not in session, immediately on its assembly, stating the matters petitioned for, and, if the legislature do not pass it as petitioned, then within three days after its adjournment, the governor shall issue a proclamation, under the great seal of the state, announcing that the matter petitioned for shall be voted upon at the next general election, and that if a majority of those voting thereon vote in favor of it, it shall become a law of the state.

No law passed by the legislature of the State of Minnesota, save those for the immediate preservation of the public peace, health or safety, which are passed by a three-quarter vote of the members of each house, shall go into effect under ninety days after the date of its passage, and if, within that time the qualified electors, in number not less than ten thousand, sign and file with the governor, in person or by agent, a petition or petitions for the reference of a law to a vote of the people, the governor and supreme court shall follow the same course as with initiating petitions, and the governor shall make proclamation within thirty days of its filing or its adjudication that the law, whose reference is petitioned for, shall be submitted to a vote of the people at the next general election, and the law shall not go into effect until after the next general election, and not then if a majority of those voting on it vote against it.

Members of the legislature, in numbers not less than one-fifth of each house, may demand within ninety days after the adjournment of the legislature, a referendum on any measure, whether passed by the legislature or not, by filing a petition with the governor, which petition shall follow the same course as if signed by ten thousand electors.

Should more than one measure for the same purpose be submitted to the people at the same time, the ballot shall provide, first, an opportunity of voting on the principle and then on the various laws to carry it out. If a majority of those voting thereon vote against the principle, all of the laws shall be lost; but if a majority of those voting on the principle vote in favor of it, the law having the largest number of votes shall be declared enacted and the others lost.

Any law for the immediate preservation of the public peace, health and safety, which may be referred to a vote of the people, shall be repealed from the day of the voting, if a majority of those voting on it shall vote against it.

Any legislative measure which shall become a law of this state shall be held by all the departments of the state government and by every citizen of the State of Minnesota to be valid and constitutional. No law enacted by the referendum shall ever be subject to executive veto or be declared unconstitutional by any court of this state. No such law shall be repealed or amended or modified, save by the operation of the referendum.

The title of all laws enacted by the referendum shall be "The People of Minnesota Enact."

Within a period of thirty days after the date of any general election the governor shall, by public proclamation, under the great seal of the state, announce the result of the vote upon the several legislative measures subjected to referendum at such election.

At any election at which one or more than one legislative measure shall be proposed to the people for adoption or rejection, a copy of each such legislative measure shall be personally delivered to each elector appearing at any public polling place, and each elector shall vote upon each of such measures before voting for any candidate for public office.

A separate ballot shall be furnished to each elector for the purpose of voting upon the adoption or rejection of legislative measures and the various measures to be voted upon shall be designated thereon, in the manner directed by the petition for such measure. The color of such ballot shall be green. Each legislative measure shall be designated in a separate paragraph, and at the right of each paragraph shall be written or printed the word "Yes," and immediately under, the word "No." At the right of each shall be a space not less than a quarter of an inch square, and in such space opposite the word "Yes" the elector desiring to vote in the affirmative shall place a cross mark, and a cross mark shall be placed in such space opposite to the word "No" by each elector desiring to vote in the negative. All ballots shall be furnished by the secretary of state at public expense, as now provided by the general election law, and the secrecy of the ballot shall be preserved by the general election law, as now provided.

Sec. 2. The aforesaid proposed amendment to the constitution of this state shall be submitted to the electors of the state for adoption or rejection at the general election to be held in the year 1900. The said amendment shall be designated upon such ballot and submitted to the electors in a paragraph reading thus: "Shall the proposed amendment to the state constitution, establishing the initiative and referendum, be approved, ratified and adopted?" Immediately to the right of such paragraph as it shall appear upon such ballot shall be printed the words "Yes" and "No," the word "Yes" being placed immediately above the word "No." At the right of each of such words "Yes" and "No" shall be placed a square not less than a quarter of an inch, and each elector desiring to vote in the affirmative upon the question of the adoption or rejection of such constitutional amendment shall make a cross mark in the square at the right of and opposite the word "Yes," and each elector desiring to vote in the negative upon the question aforesaid, shall place a cross mark in the square opposite to, and at the right of, the word "No."

Sec. 3. This act shall take effect the date of its passage.

This bill for the initiative and referendum is a bill most important and desirable. Every labor organization of this state has considered the initiative and referendum as the only sure cure for political corruption, and it behooves the business men and laboring men throughout the state to call meetings at once and pass resolutions demanding of their representatives and senators to pass this bill; or, if meetings cannot be called, write personal letters to your representatives. Mr. J. R. Steiner, editor of the Twin City Guardian, Room 214 Washburn Building, St. Paul, Minn., has done yeoman service in the onward movement of this measure, and it might be better to address all communications to him for delivery. He will then know, and you can keep a record of, members who have been urged to support the initiative and referendum by their constituents. The following is suggested as a form of petition:

"We, the undersigned, citizens, voters and residents of ————, Minnesota, do respectfully present the following petition to your honorable body; that,

"Whereas, there is pending before your honorable body a bill for an act entitled 'An act proposing an amendment to the constitution of the State of Minnesota, creating the initiative and referendum, and designated as Senate File No. 431 and House File 426,'

"Resolved, That we, your petitioners, pray that you pass Senate File No. 431 and its companion co-worker, House File No. 426; and your petitioners will ever pray."

Empty Titles.

"The King of Rome" was the first title bestowed on the unfortunate son of Napoleon and Marie Louise. After his father's fall, his grandfather, the Austrian emperor, made him Duke of Reichstadt. The Duke of Reichstadt was haunted by memories of the days when he was King of Rome. The story goes that he once said to his grandfather: " "I remember once that people called me 'The King of Rome.' What did they mean by that?" "About as much as people mean when they hail me as 'King of Jerusalem.'" The latter was among the empty titles appertaining to the Hapsburgs, and, perhaps, still belonging to them.—Boston Transcript.

All remained silent a few moments and no one answered. The inspector was getting a little irate, when the smallest boy in the class proved equal to the occasion.

"Please, sir, the moon only weighs a hundred weight."

Inspector—How is that, little fellow?

"Well, sir, you see it has four quarters."

He got the five shillings.—Spare Moments.

AN EXCELLENT COMBINATION

THE pleasant method and beneficial effects of the well-known remedy, SYRUP OF FIGS, manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Company, illustrate the value of obtaining the liquid laxative principles of plants known to be medicinally laxative and presenting them in the form most refreshing to the taste and acceptable to the system. It is the one perfect strengthening laxative,

Its perfect freedom from every objectionable quality and substance, and its acting on the kidneys, liver and bowels, gently yet promptly, without weakening or irritating them, make it the ideal laxative.

In the process of manufacturing figs are used, as they are pleasant to the taste, but

by a method known to the California Fig Syrup Company only. In order to get its beneficial effects, and to avoid imitations, please remember the full name of the Company printed on the front of every package.

Consumers of the choicest products of modern commerce purchase at about the same price that others pay for cheap and worthless imitations. To come into universal demand and to be everywhere considered the best of its class, an article must be capable of satisfying the wants and tastes of the best informed purchasers. The California Fig Syrup Company having met with the highest success in the manufacture and sale of its excellent liquid laxative remedy, SYRUP OF FIGS, it has become important to all to have a knowledge of the Company and its product. The California Fig Syrup Company was organized more than fifteen years ago, for the special purpose of manufacturing and selling a laxative remedy which would be more pleasant to the taste and more beneficial in effect than any other known. The great value of the remedy, as a medicinal agent and of the Company's efforts, is attested by the sale of millions of bottles annually, and by the high approval of most eminent physicians. As the true and genuine remedy named SYRUP OF FIGS is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Company only, the knowledge of that fact will assist in avoiding the worthless imitations manufactured by other parties.

The heretofore rumored changes in the system of paying the employes of the Baltimore & Ohio Rail Road took permanent shape last week at a meeting of the heads of the several departments and general superintendents, called by General Manager Underwood for the consideration of that matter. It was determined to replace the present dilatory process of running the pay cars over the entire system, involving an expenditure of three weeks' time in distributing a large bulk of currency, aggregating one million dollars per month, by a more convenient, expeditious and safer process of distributing through the hands of the station agents checks payable at any one of the 37 banks on the line of the system and by any agent of the company. The new arrangement is effective May 1st.

FIERCE BATTLE NEAR MANILA

INSURGENTS FIGHT DESPERATELY, BUT ARE BADLY BEATEN.

American Losses Are Forty-five Killed and 145 Wounded—Col. Egbert Among the Slain—Insurgents Flee From Malabon After Applying the Torch—Character of the Country Interferes With Our Troops and Gives the Insurgents the Advantage—The Town of Malinta Captured by Gen. Wheaton After a Sharp Fight.

Manila, March 28.—The United States troops, under Brig. Gen. Lloyd Wheaton, captured the town of Malinta, beyond the Tulihan river yesterday after a sharp fight. Col. Harry C. Egbert, of the Twenty-second regular infantry, was killed. The total American loss thus far reached since the engagement commenced is 45 killed and 145 wounded. Gen. Wheaton entered Malinta, which is a small village of huts, at 1 o'clock yesterday afternoon. The gunboat Helena and other gunboats have been shelling Malabon, about a mile northwest of Caloocan, for several hours. The insurgents made a fierce resistance to the American advance up the railway at Malinta. Evidently anticipating an attack, a thousand insurgents vacated Malabon Saturday night and attempted to burn the town. Gen. Wheaton's brigade, composed of the Second Oregon regiment and the Twenty-second and Twenty-third infantry, stretched out along the railroad from Caloocan to the Tulihan river, was the withdrawal on account of the natural obstacles. Many of the rebels sought refuge in the suburbs of Navotas and Casig, or were driven inland by the shells of the Helena, Callao, Ningalhapan and Laguna de Bay. In the meantime Gen. Wheaton's brigade held the road to the river, but was unable to either repair the bridge, which had been destroyed by the enemy, or to advance, owing to the opposition and the hills on the other side. The calculations of both Gen. Hale and Gen. H. G. Otis, whose brigades constitute Gen. MacArthur's division, were much interfered with by the character of the country in front of both, and the enemy was able to take advantage of this, so that the operations against Novaliches and Pelo were delayed, though the right wing of the division swung out, sweeping the enemy in a northwesterly direction. Gen. Wheaton's headquarters was half a mile south of the river on the railroad. The opposite bank was protected by a blockhouse and intrenchments. Occasionally the artillery and infantry

Fired Across the Stream.

Finally the engineers moved a construction train up to the bridge, the iron framework of which remained, and began to replace the floor. While this was going on the Second Oregon crossed the river on the left and the Twenty-second on the right, with four companies of the Twenty-third infantry supporting the latter regiment. A hill of cleared ground stretched a distance of half a mile to Malinta, situated on its crest. In front of the village were strong Filipino intrenchments but no Filipinos were to be seen. Apparently they had fled. The Twenty-second regiment approached diagonally with Gen. Wheaton and his staff close behind and scouts closely observing the ground. When the Americans were within about 300 yards of the intrenchments the Filipinos suddenly volleyed heavily. The Twenty-second, which was holding the center, suffered considerably, but with the Oregons on the left and the Kansans on the right in the woods, the fighting was kept up for half an hour, the Twenty-second infantry advancing up the slope through the thick grass under

The Hottest Fire.

Gen. Wheaton and his staff were all the time under a rain of bullets. No Filipinos were found in the trenches. Though apparently their force was much smaller than that of the Americans, they had an immense advantage in position and in opportunity to retreat. The Second Oregon encountered a thousand Filipinos west of Malinta who were retreating from Malabon. The enemy had taken up a position behind four rows of intrenchments, but was driven out after an hour's heavy fighting. One Oregonian was killed and five wounded. The Third artillery, acting as infantry, with two guns of the Utah artillery and the Kansans had a sharp fight east of Malinta. The Americans had but slight losses. Five Filipinos were found dead and several were taken prisoners. Gen. MacArthur's division is advancing upon Pelo along the railroad. As the bridge is destroyed and the river cannot be forded the advance is temporarily checked. The surgeons from the fleet and the British cruiser Powerful volunteered their assistance and were indefatigable in their services at the front.

Gen. Otis Reports.

Washington, March 27.—The war department received the following last night from Gen. Otis:

"MacArthur's advance beyond New Ganayan, two miles beyond Pelo, nine miles from Manila and fifteen miles from Malolos; railroad will be repaired to advance point to-morrow and troops supplied by cars; MacArthur will press on to-morrow; is now in open country. Insurgents stoutly resisting behind succeeding lines of intrenchments, from which the troops continually drive them."

Minnesota Men Injured.

Whelahd, abdomen, severe; James C. McGee, thumb, slight; Corporal John Connelly, thigh, severe; I, Harry M. Glasier, abdomen, severe; Privates Avery Grimes, jaw, severe; M. Paulinin Hahn, chest, severe.

First South Dakota — Company G, Private Walter E. Brown, forearm.

FLEEING INSURGENTS.

Americans Drive the Enemy Out of Malinta and New Canayan.

Manila, March 28.—The Americans have advanced along the line of the Dagupan railroad, driving the Filipinos from Malinta and New Canayan, where there were 3,000 inhabitants. Last night the brigades of Gen. H. G. Otis and Gen. Hale encamped in the enemy's trenches at New Canayan, and that of Gen. Wheaton at Malinta. Gen. Wheaton's brigade formed a junction with the remainder of Gen. MacArthur's brigade and marched on to New Canayan. This place was fortified and 300 yards from it there were trenches on each side of the track. These were taken possession of by the American troops. The movements of the Americans will be pushed in this direction. The Filipinos, realizing that the railroad is the crucial line, have constructed row after row of trenches running diagonally on both sides of the track a distance of a few hundred yards apart. This work was designed most intelligently and has evidently been done under the direction of experts. The day's work of the Americans consisted of storming the successive trenches. The Filipinos occupying them were completely hidden. The enemy poured a strong fire from every trench until they were disturbed by a flanking volley, when they would disappear into the woods and jungle, only to make a stand at the next line. The American loss was remarkably small, seven being killed and twenty-five wounded. It is known that the Filipinos were so protected that they suffered little.

DECEIVED BY AGGIE.

He Adopts the Spanish Method of Reporting Battles.

Manila, March 28.—Insurgent papers received here from Malolos show that Aguinaldo is endeavoring to deceive his followers into the belief that they are winning great victories. All the recent engagements are proclaimed as American defeats. The papers describe the insurgents meeting with the American forces at various points and end their accounts with the assertion that the Americans retired to their original lines after suffering great slaughter.

FALL OF POLO.

Manila, March 28.—Polo was taken to-day after a hard fight. The advance continues and our troops are everywhere successful. Prince Lowenstein was killed yesterday. Our losses at the latest reports were 31 killed and 230 wounded since Saturday morning.

Capt. Dwyer Incapacitated.

Washington, March 28.—A dispatch was received from Admiral Dewey stating that a board of medical survey had examined Capt. Dwyer, of the Baltimore, and found him physically unfit for further service in the Philippines and he has been ordered sent home. One of the newly promoted captains under the naval personnel bill will be assigned to command the Baltimore.

Four Hundred Killed.

Algiers, March 28. — The Echo de Oran states that Dejedi and Benisuassou tribes attacked the Mohayos on the Moorish frontier on March 21. In the engagement the Mohayas were defeated. Eight Hundred prisoners were taken and 400 men were killed on both sides.

Russian Cabinet Change.

St. Petersburg, March 28.—The czar has selected M. De Witt, minister of finance, for minister of the interior in place of Privy Councillor Goremykin, who is blamed for not taking adequate measures to prevent the famine now prevailing in certain districts.

Kipling Doing Nicely.

New York, March 28.—The condition of Rudyard Kipling, who was reported to have suffered a slight relapse a few days ago, is again improving, and he is better than at any time since his illness began.

Heavy Loss by Fire.

Corning, N. Y., March 28.—Harrison Valley, Pa., lost almost its entire business portion by fire. Eleven buildings burned. One hotel and three stores remain. The loss is $100,000, with much less insurance.

Cut His Throat.

New York, March 28. — William Scott, a corn merchant of Liverpool, Eng., committed suicide on board the Umbria while en route to this country. He cut his throat with a broken bottle.

THE LEGISLATURE

Business Transacted by Minnesota Solons.

St. Paul, March 21.—The senate yesterday advanced to the calendar the Wilson bill to parole the Youngers, now under life sentence at Stillwater on a charge of having been implicated in the Northfield raid of 1876. The favorable recommendation of the bill was not accomplished without strong and determined opposition by Senator Stockton of Rice county, who represents Northfield in the senate. The bill was recommended for passage by a vote of 33 to 18.

The following bills were passed: Requiring the education of children and providing for truant officers in ungraded schools in school districts and cities now or hereafter having over 50,000 inhabitants. — To amend laws relating to corporations. — To authorize organization of certain insurance companies to insure bicycles against loss by theft. — To change the name of the Minnesota State reform school and to consolidate the various acts relating to said school and to amend the same. — Authorizing each of the district court judges of this state to appoint a district reporter and fixing his duties and compensation. — To provide for the purchase of municipal bonds for the permanent school and university funds. — Relating to the keeping of disorderly houses. — To provide punishment for illegal voting at school meetings.

The House.

Mr. Laybourn introduced the only new bill of the day in the house, and one which presents a most interesting proposition in taxation. It proposes to distribute the amount paid by railroads in the form of the tax upon their gross earnings among the counties and municipalities of the state in the proportion that they contain the tracks or other property of the railroads. The greater portion of the forenoon was given up to the passage of the bills accumulated on the calendar.

The following bills were passed: Making uniform the time of expiration of the term of office of all state appointive officers. — Establishing a state board of forestry and creating forest reserves. — Relating to the powers of municipal judges in villages. — Proposing a constitutional amendment allowing the state school fund to be loaned on farm mortgages at not less than 5 per cent. — Relating to the licensing of temperance saloons, etc., by townships. — Relating to the trial of actions against corporations. — Relating to the sale of real estate by executors. — Amending the law relative to the incorporation of insurance companies. — Prohibiting the compact of insurance companies to maintain rates. — Prohibiting the sale of renovated butter unless so marked.

St. Paul, March 22. — The senate yesterday took up for the first time the special order relating to the insane hospital propositions that have been pending since early in the session in the upper house. The special order was taken up at 2.30, and it was 5:30 before Senators Barker and Knatvold had completed their arguments in behalf of the Hastings-Anoka district hospital plan and the so-called county hospital cottage plan, respectively. At that hour Senator Thompson, who had risen to present an argument in favor of the bill to locate cottages on the sites of the present hospitals in lieu of the Barker and Knatvold propositions, withdrew in deference to a motion to adjourn, and the special order was postponed until 2:30 to-day.

The following bills were introduced: To legalize bonds heretofore issued by townships in certain instances. — Relating to powers of cities. — To legalize mortgage foreclosure sales heretofore made. — To provide for giving notice of malfeasance by public officers to bondsmen. — Regulating the incorporation of villages. — To regulate enrollment for votes of political parties. — To regulate the organization and business of building and loan associations.

The following bills were passed: To provide uniform state certificates for teachers in certain public schools in this state, and to repeal all laws inconsistent therewith. — Relating to the notice of hearing on petitions for formations of new school districts. — An act to provide for the incorporation of savings associations. — To establish a drainage commission, and to provide for the drainage of the swamp and marshy lands of the state.— Establishing a probation system for juvenile delinquents. — To provide for a uniform form of affidavit to be used in making affidavit of publication of any legal notice required by law to be published, and prescribing who may make such affidavit. To fix the salary of Warden Wolfer, of the state prison, at $4,000 a year, and to appropriate for the expense of such prison any fund arising from the labor of prisoners, etc. Authorizing boards of county commissioners in certain cases to allow county treasurers compensation for clerk hire.

The House.

Representative Jacobson of Lac qui Parle county threw the force of his influence in the house against the bill of Senator Horton providing for increased aid in building the new marble capitol building. He did not succeed in killing the bill, but managed to prevent a favorable recommendation at this time. Therefore the motion to recommend the bill to pass was voted down, 36 to 24, and then the house reported "progress."

The following bills were introduced: To legalize the defective execution of deeds and the record thereof. — To legalize bonds heretofore issued by townships in any counties of the state under and in pursuance of any special or general law of the state. — To amend laws relating to the desecration of decoration. — To amend laws relating to drainage. — To prevent the digging of ditches by which surface water is drained upon land owned by other persons. — Providing for an amendment to the constitution relating to the length of legislative sessions. — To repeal section 39, chapter 41, of the general election law.

St. Paul, March [illegible].—The Wilson bill to parole the Youngers was voted down in the senate yesterday afternoon after a protracted debate by a vote of 33 to 25. Senator Wilson voted in the negative to enable him to move for a reconsideration, which he will [illegible] later. He will accept the Stockton amendment providing that the board of pardons shall approve all paroles granted by the board of managers of the state prison. In this shape it is thought the bill can be passed.

The insane hospital bills were taken up again as a special order and, although all the afternoon was consumed in the debate, no action was taken.

The following bills were passed: To legalize village bonds and village orders issued for the purpose of erecting armories for national guards, and purchasing lands on which to erect the same. — Authorizing the organization of mutual retail hardware fire insurance companies. — To provide for leasing the real estate containing veins, lodes or deposits of iron, iron ores, or mineral ores, coal, clay, or any kind of substance valuable for any purpose, belonging to persons under guardianship. — To provide for the payment of all moneys derived from license for the sale of intoxicating liquors in counties having a population of 200,000 or more to the town wherein such license was granted. — To prevent railroad companies doing business in this state from raising rates for the transportation of certain freight between points in this state without the consent of the railroad and warehouse commission. — Relating to the getting on and off of moving cars or engines. — Relating to the office of state treasurer and the sureties on his official bond.

The following bills were introduced: To amend the laws relating to village elections. — To amend the law relating to town insurance companies. — To amend an act relating to admission to practice of attorneys. — For relief of school districts not able to support their schools. — Relating to garnishment of employes of counties and municipalities. — To regulate the business of mutual insurance companies.

The House.

The house disposed of the county option plan for this session by the adoption of the adverse report of the committee on temperance by the vote of more than a majority of the house, not including quite a number who voted to send the bill to the committee of the whole, but who explained that they were opposed to the bill.

The state text book bill was defeated by a vote of 57 to 46.

The following bills were passed: Authorizing county commissioners to expend road and bridge money on roads other than county roads. — Providing for a system of traveling libraries. — Amending the law with respect to posting notices claiming exemption from mechanics' liens. — Adding a watch and a safe of a value of not exceeding $75 to the list of property exempt from execution. Providing that the verdict of five sixths of the jury in civil actions, after not less than twelve hours' deliberation, shall be a sufficient verdict. — Requiring trust companies to give bonds when acting in such capacity.

St. Paul, March 24.—The senate yesterday reconsidered the Wilson bill to parole the Youngers and other life prisoners who may serve twenty years without discredit markes, and, after amending the measure so as to provide that the state board of pardons shall approve all paroles granted by the board of managers of the state prison, the bill was passed by a vote of 48 to 5.

Debate of the insane hospital bills was continued but not concluded.

The following bills were introduced: Relating to aid of indigent by societies. — Relating to conveyances of real estate by husband and wife. — Relating to capital stock of corporative associations. — To create a committee to investigate and report to the next legislature as to the best way of managing state institutions. — To appropriate $250 so that the state board of corrections and charities may furnish analytical reports of institution expenses and earnings. — To provide for the removal of garbage, etc., in villages. — Relating to the taxation of railroad companies. — To provide for the forfeiture of corporations which unite for the purpose of controlling trade, or to increase the cost of products sold.

The House.

The had its first real struggle over the sugar bounty proposition yesterday afternoon in committee of the whole, and, while no conclusive action was reached, from the tenor of the discussion it was evident that there is more than a possibility of the house following the lead of the senate in repealing the bounty law of 1895.

The following bills were passed: Relating to the procedure in petitioning for the laying out of county roads. — Providing for enforcing stockholders' liability against non-residents. — Prohibiting the desecration of the national or state flag. — Relating to municipal courts in cities of less than 3,000 inhabitants. — Legalizing certain county roads. — Granting a reward for killing wolves. — To legalize the organization of certain school districts part of whose territory was included within an Indian reservation, and to legalize the acts of the school officers. — To legalize the organization of certain townships, part of whose territory was included within an Indian reservation, and to legalize the acts of the school officers.

The following bills were introduced: To authorize villages to issue bonds in certain cases. — To amend section 5425, Statutes of 1894, relating to docketing of judgments. — To protect railroad employes from the false statements by private detectives or other persons. — To amend section 1, chapter 328, Laws of 1897, relating to drainage. — Providing for the publication of personal property tax lists. — To facilitate the equalization of personal property taxes before town boards of review and county boards of equalization.

St. Paul, March 25.—After four days of debate, that sometimes became acrimonious to a degree bordering on the sensational, the senate yesterday afternoon passed, by a vote of 34 to 27, the Barker bill, S. F. No. 231, providing for the location and construction of an insane hospital and the purchase for $17,000 of the insane hospital site at Hastings, over which there has been so much controversy during the past four years.

The Thompson bill, proposing the colony plan of constructing cottages at the three large state institutions, and the Knatvold bill, providing for the adoption of a modification of the Wisconsin colony plan of caring for the insane, were laid on the table by request of the authors. The Stockwell bill, providing for the construction of a detention hospital for the temporary treatment of people supposed to be insane, so that it may be determined whether their malady is liable to prove permanent, was returned to general orders, by request of Senator Stockwell, and will be taken up again in regular order. The four bills were all made special orders and the passage of the Baker bill settled the fate of all but the Stockwell measure, the interests involved in which were not the same.

The following bills were introduced: Relating to insurance policy premiums—To authorize cities of less than 15,000 inhabitants to issue refunding bonds—To provide for the election of a board of education in cities of 15,000 or less inhabitants—Relating to the assessment of personal property—To regulate fees of sheriffs—To regulate the formation and business of employers' liability insurance companies — To make insurance by employers indemnification against damages for personal injuries—To regulate plate glass insurance companies — Relating to homestead rights; allows vacation of the premises for twelve instead of six months at a time before forfeiture of the claim.

The House.

The attorney general late yesterday afternoon advised the house that by his calendar the last twenty legislative days of the session begin to run on Monday, and that under the constitution to-day is the last day for the introduction of bills without the consent of the governor.

There were so many committee reports and new bills in the house in the forenoon that it was entirely given over to routine business.

In the afternoon the house devoted itself to its general orders and cut the list in two, acting on twenty-one bills. Among the more important bills introduced were the following: Relating to the expenditure of county funds for roads other than county roads — Relating to the protection of game and fish—Authorizing the formation of employes' mutual liability insurance companies — To make insurance of employes against accident by their employers a defense in certain actions—relating to co-operative insurance associations—To enable counties, cities and villages to use automatic voting machines—Relating to pool selling and book-making—To provide for the incorporation of companies formed to loan to the indigent—To provide for the imposition and collection of taxes on telephone companies — Relating to interest on state funds—Relating to the shooting of live birds.

St. Paul, March 27.—The senate yesterday afternoon had a very serious question submitted to it through a resolution introduced by Senator Vesselman of Fairmont, Martin county, representing the district that gave birth to the famous Dunn-Day senatorial contest of 1897. This resolution proposes to reopen the fight by calling on the senate to reverse itself and declare that it was wrong when it unseated Former Senator Frank A. Day and recognized as the duly elected senator from that district Hon. H. H. Dunn of Fairmont. Senator Vesselman is of the same political faith as Mr. Day. His resolution provides that Mr. Day be paid for his services as senator from Jan. 23, 1897, to the end of the session, April 21, he having been ousted from his seat by vote of the senate on the day mentioned. The resolution was referred to the committee on legislative expenses.

The following were among the more important bills introduced: To appoint a commission of five to erect a soldiers' monument on the new capitol site, or some other suitable location in St. Paul; appropriates $1,000 for expenses of the commission. — To authorize cities of less than 5,000 to levy a special school tax. — To regulate the rental of telephones; companies may not charge more than $3 a month. — To create a state board of immigration commissioners. — To give preference in employment to honorably discharged Union soldiers and sailors. — To protect rights of pensioners residing in soldiers' home. — To amend the laws relating to mutual insurance companies. — To further regulate the sale of intoxicating liquors; to prevent wholesaling in less than five-gallon quantities. — Revising game and fish laws and preventing spring shooting. — To amend the laws to prevent fraud in the sale of flax seed and linseed oil. — For the care of crippled and deformed children and appropriating $20,000. — Requiring railway companies organized under foreign charters to incorporate under laws of the state. — To regulate elections in cities and villages of less than 10,000. — Amending laws relating to prevention of fraud in the manufacture and sale of baking powder, etc. — Amending laws relating to automatic voting machines.

The House.

Saturday was the last day on which bills could be introduced without the consent of the governor and the members took advantage of this fact to unload. When the unloading process was completed it was found that seventy-nine bills had been introduced.

Among the more important bills introduced were the following: To amend existing laws relating to use of automatic ballot machines. — To amend existing laws relating to the issuance of licences for the sale of intoxicating liquors. — To require railroad companies organized under the laws of a foreign country to incorporate under the laws of this state before extending their lines or acquiring property rights in this state. — To amend existing laws relating to the assessment of mortgages. — To prohibit the manufacture and sale of unhealthy or adulterated dairy products. — Relating to the fees for the inspection of illuminating oils. — To provide for a tax on certain mines and lands containing mineral ore in lieu of other taxes. — To regulate the sale of drugs and medicines by persons other than registered pharmacists. — To amend certain laws relating to insurance companies. — To protect the public against adulterated food products. — To amend existing laws relating to organization of the state agricultural society. — To amend the Laws of 1897 relative to adulterated food jellies, etc. — To license itinerant vendors of drugs, nostrums, patent medicines, etc. — To regulate the voluntary sending of newspapers and the receiving of the same. — To authorize towns, etc., to purchase lands containing material for the construction of highways. — To amend existing laws relating to the formation of drainage districts. — To amend the constitution relating to the franchise of women on questions of local option. — To regulate the price of binding twine manufactured in the state prison. — To fix a reasonable freight rate for transportation of potatoes, grain, coal, etc.

The following bills were passed: Allowing cities to settle claims for loss on contracts. — Amending the law relative to trust companies. — Relative to bounty for arrest of horse and bicycle thieves. — Repealing the law relative to teachers' examiners in independent school districts. — Relating to the conveyance of land for sites for schoolhouses. — Relative to the filling of vacancies in schoolboards. — Relative to the time of meeting of village and city boards of equalization.

WRECK OF A SLOOP.

Lost on the British Columbia Coast With All on Board.

Nanaimo, B. C., March 28. — News has been received here confirming the loss of the small sloop Thistle, with nine people on board. One month ago the party left Alert bay for Hornby island, on the east coast of Vancouver island. Under favorable circumstances they should have reached their destination within three or four days. Nothing has been heard of the party since. John Fletcher, a farmer of Quoleum, has arrived here with advices that wreckage had been picked up near Alert bay comparing in every detail with the Thistle. The party consisted of William Ford, his aged mother and two sisters and Mrs. Harry Thames and three small children. The ninth member of the party is thought to be the daughter of a Comox farmer. William Ford is the son of a wealthy farmer of Honolulu, and, with his mother, was visiting the old homestead. The remainder of the party resided at Quoleum.

Sauk Rapids is making an effort to secure the repair of the bridge over the Mississippi at that place. It has been impassable for more than a year. One-half of this bridge was blown down in a storm nearly twenty years ago, and the other half in the cyclone of 1886. A year ago an end collapsed, carrying with it several passersby. The county has been asked to assist in its rebuilding.

Fire was discovered recently in Birkebak's jewelry store, at Waverly, and it soon spread to the adjoining building, owned by John Halmptzok, filled with a large stock of merchandise on one side and a saloon in the other part. Both buildings were soon in ruins, and it was only by hard work that the adjoining buildings were saved. The Waverly house was on fire several times, as was also Perro's blacksmith shop. Birkebak places his loss at $2,200, with $1,000 insurance. Halmptzok's loss, $1,000 on building and $17,000 on both stocks, with $8,150 insurance. Mr. Halmptzok and family lived over the store, and had a narrow escape. Two of the children were taken from the room as the fire broke through the window. The origin of the fire is unknown.

THE FLAG OF STARS.

Oh, not alone the eager south—
Alone the steadfast north—
Saw with wet eyes beneath spring skies
Our flag of stars go forth!
Oh, not alone the elder east,
Nor the young hearted west,
Smiled high with pride where side by side
The nation's children pressed!

But north and south and east and west
The mountain and the plain,
The prairie and the desert,
Yielded their flower again.
East and west and south and north
The flower of the land,
Hearing the mother's call, went forth
To stand at her right hand.

We be many hands in labor,
But one arm for the right;
One blood to shed, one heart till dead,
One good sword for the fight;
We be many tongued and minded,
But one mind and one tongue
When once wide sent through a continent
The nation's word has rung!

Then northern tongues sing "Dixie"
Beneath the ancient flag,
And the southerner dies to rebaptize
His own the "Yankee rag!"
Brothers—to keep for freedom's sake
The flag of stars unfurled
Beneath the stars of heaven—to make
The starlight of the world!
—Grace Ellery Channing in Youth's Companion.

A LESSON IN COOKING.

How a Hobo Served Up a Dish of Roast Chicken.

"The first time I ran away from home I learned a trick or two that was worth the while," said a well known business man. "I started out on several unauthorized tours of adventure before I reached years of discretion, but the first is most vividly impressed upon my memory. Three of us kids caught a freight train and got some 60 or 70 miles away from home before the first nightfall. Then we didn't know where to spend the night. Several attempts to quarter ourselves in empty box cars on the side track of a little village only resulted in our being chased away and threatened with arrest, so we went to the outskirts of the place and built a fire on the bank of a little creek. Here we made ourselves as comfortable as possible and one or two of us had actually dozed off for short naps when a regular hobo, a good specimen of the real article, happened along and wanted to know if we had anything to eat. Of course we hadn't.

"'Well,' he said, 'if you fellers'll ketch a chicken I'll show you a trick that'll be useful to you.'

"It didn't take us long to catch the chicken and bring it back. The veteran member of the nomadic fraternity wrung its neck, jerked off its head, cleaned it and going down to the creek wadded it up, feathers, feet and all, in a big ball of yellow clay. This he rolled into the fire and scraped the burning embers up around it. The clay soon hardened, and we could see it among the wood coals gradually becoming a bright cherry red. When it did so, the cook rolled it out again, let it cool a little and then broke it open with a stone. The feathers had stuck to the baked clay and a clean, inviting chicken was ready to be served. All the moisture that in ordinary baking is lost had been kept in by the bricklike inclosure, and the morsel that fell to my lot was the juiciest and sweetest I have ever eaten."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

His Absent Companions.

At a banquet given in Rochester two of the expected guests were unable to be present. The order of seating happened to be such that a particularly jovial and companionable gentleman sat with one of the vacant chairs on each side of him. The empty chairs and first course of oysters were left in place for some time in case the expected guests arrived. The solitary gentleman therefore could move neither to the right nor to the left, but smilingly beamed throughout the repast, seemingly none the worse for his enforced isolation. After the banquet some one innocently asked him:

"How did you enjoy yourself, old chap?"

"First rate," he replied briskly enough. "I sat next to a couple of fellows who weren't there."—Rochester Herald.

The Managed Husband Is Worthless.

Helen Watterson Moody believes that the husband who can be managed is not worth managing, "and there is no better principle," she adds, in The Ladies' Home Journal, "for both husband and wife to adopt in adjusting themselves to the new relation than that of trying to do each by the other what men are accustomed to call 'the square thing.' Many a woman understands 'managing' a husband better than she does doing the square thing by him, and many a man understands and practices doing the square thing by other men who would be affronted if he were to be told that, judged by his own business standards, he habitually dealt unfairly with his own wife."

Mrs. Watkins' Club Inheritance.

"I don't see," said Mr. Mulberry, "why you women have that Mrs. Watkins in your literary club. The rest of you are bright enough, but she's as dull as dull can be."

"It's this way," answered Mrs. Mulberry. "Mrs. Watkins' great-grandmother's half sister's second cousin by marriage could trace her descent from Chaucer. So, you see, after all, with such literary claims, we couldn't very well leave Mrs. Watkins out."—Harper's Bazar.

A Candid Suitor.

"What do you think? Papa asked Jack if he expected to get any money in marrying me."

"Was Jack insulted?"

"Insulted? He told pop that a good home was more of an object to him than wages."—Detroit Free Press.

SMART AT SPELLING.

A LESSON IN ORTHOGRAPHY THAT WAS DEARLY BOUGHT.

How a Couple of Shrewd Sharpers Won Thousands of Dollars by Working the Dictionary For Game Until They Were Brought to Grief.

"How do you spell 'choir'?" asked a man in the bookstore.

"What do you mean—paper or music?" inquired a smart young man who poses as an authority on all topics.

"Music, singing, of course," replied the man in search of orthographical information.

"C-h-o-i-r," responded the smart young man decisively.

"Q-u-i-r-e," chimed in a red bearded man who was busy looking at some books.

"You are referring to paper," said the smart young man, looking sadly at the interrupter. "We were speaking about music."

"I mean music, too," said the red bearded man calmly; "q-u-i-r-e, to sing in concert."

The smart young man's expression changed from sadness to contempt. "You had better consult your dictionary," he said with a sneer.

"Never mind," retorted the red bearded man. "My way of spelling may be a little old fashioned, but you will find it correct according to Webster. You will also find it correct according to the Century Dictionary, and if I am not mistaken it is likewise given in the Standard. Your way is all right too."

The smart young man gave a sniff of scorn. "Josh Billings and you should have collaborated on a phonetic spelling book."

"Look here," said the red bearded man, "I'll bet you $3 that Webster's latest spells it 'q-u-i-r-e.'"

"Make it $5," said the smart young man, pulling out a roll.

"No; I don't want to rob you. Get the dictionary."

The money was put up and Webster's International brought out. There it was, "q-u-i-r-e, to sing in concert."

"I didn't mean a verb," said the smart young man, growing white around the ears. "Where is the noun?"

They found that, too, although it was marked obsolete. Then the smart young man wilted.

"I won't take your money," said the red bearded man, handing back the bills. "My name is Bell, George T. Bell. I have had educational advantages which you probably never received, and I spent several months learning the different ways to spell that word. Several years ago I was on the secret service. My partner and I had been on the trail of a pair of sharpers who had a repertory of 'con' games that would have made the ordinary bunko man look sick. They were men of far more than ordinary intelligence and had the manners of cultured men of the world. The way we happened to get them was a pure accident.

"My partner and I were going down from St. Louis on a Mississippi river packet. There were about 20 of us in the smoking room talking and trying to pass the time comfortably. Just as a lull came in the hum of conversation a young man seated at a table writing some letters looked up with a troubled air and said, 'Could any of you gentlemen tell me how to spell "choir"? I am a little puzzled over it.'

"'What kind of a one do you mean?' asked several.

"'Choir, to sing in concert,' chirped the young man, wrinkling his brow as if to recall the proper orthography.

"'C-h-o-i-r,' said a scholarly looking man with glasses on.

"'Q-u-i-r-e,' sang out a big, well fed old man off in the corner.

"'C-h-o-i-r,' repeated the first man with some emphasis. 'I thought every fool knew that.'

"'That's all right,' said the old man off in the corner. 'Money talks. I'll bet you $50 that Webster spells it "q-u-i-r-e" too.'

"'I'll raise you 50,' said the first man, who was a cotton buyer at Memphis.

"'All right,' said the big old man coolly. Then the others joined in and bet him to a standstill. They put up about $500. Then they got the dictionary, and, as just now, the man who bet on 'q-u-i-r-e' won.

"My partner and I waited till the money had changed hands, and then I said, 'Come on, Si.'

"I walked up to the young man and said: 'Come with me; I want you. I'll show you how to spell choir. Si collared the big old man and we waltzed them down below. You never saw two fellows look quite so cheap. They had cleaned up over $15,000 on that one trick, but they got four years and a half apiece. That is one spelling school I have attended that not every man goes to. That game is one which will catch nine educated men out of ten. You are all right, but you may still have something to learn."

Then the smart young man offered the usual invitation in payment for the information.—Washington Post.

AN HONEST ARTIST.

He Would Not Paint a Lie Even For a Napoleon.

There was no love lost between the Emperor Louis Napoleon and his cousin, Prince Napoleon, whom the Parisians called "Plon Plon." The prince used to make abusive speeches against the emperor, which people were only too ready to repeat to him. "Let him alone," Louis Napoleon would reply. "He is too well known. No one would turn me out to place him on the throne."

The emperor was correct, for no one said a good word about "Plon Plon." He was commonly believed to have shown the white feather in the Crimea and never exposed himself where the lead was falling. An English lady, who in her young days mingled with French society, tells in her "Foreign Courts and Foreign Homes" a story as discreditable to Prince Napoleon as it is honorable to a French artist.

While the artist was painting the historical picture of the battle of the Alma, which the emperor had ordered, Prince Napoleon called at the painter's studio to make known to him the facts. On leaving he said he wished the prominent figure in the battle to be himself mounted on his white charger. He sent the horse to the artist so that he could paint its exact portrait. When the picture was finished and invitations were sent out for a "private view," the white charger was seen, a prominent figure in the battle, but without a rider.

On hearing of this terrible omission the prince sent an aid-de-camp to ask the reason. The honest artist said the horse should remain if the prince wished, but no rider would be on it. "Tell the prince I have never yet painted a lie." The hint was taken. The prince ordered the horse to be rubbed out.

The Business of a Theater.

A prosperous theater in the city of New York may in a favorable season do a business of more than $250,000 and keep in employment 150 persons. There are 37 theaters, including the variety houses, in active operation in the boroughs of Manhattan and the Bronx, while the borough of Brooklyn adds a score or more. Everything which affects business in general affects the theater immediately.

A man will reduce his expenditures for tickets to places of amusement long before he thinks of cutting down his supply of cigars, for the cigar belongs to that class of luxuries which subtly become necessaries, while the theater habit, as any observant manager will tell you, requires constant cultivation. The management of a theater is therefore an occupation requiring business sagacity in a greater degree than it calls for artistic taste.—W. J. Henderson in Scribner's.

Proud of Her Work.

He looked with forced admiration at the slippers—forced because he already had half a dozen pairs.

"You don't mean to tell me that they are all your own work? What a talented little wife I'm going to have!"

And she smiled, though the plain truth was that she had bought the uppers, paid a man to sole them and then managed to sew the bows on crooked after her mother had made them. Yet she was very proud and really wondered how she had managed to accomplish so much.—Detroit Journal.

Sausage Links.

"Yes," said the yellow dog. "I believe after death we enter into another sphere of action. I think I'll be a golf player."

"How do you figure that out?" queried the black and tan.

"Oh, I'll be in the links."—Philadelphia North American.

Mortgage Foreclosure Sale.

Whereas, default has been made in the condition of a certain mortgage, made, executed and delivered by Kate Wilmes and Michael Wilmes, her husband, mortgagors, to Anna Ericsson, mortgagee, dated the 13th day of October 1896 and recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of Polk County, Minnesota on the 31st day of October 1896, at four o'clock p. m. in Book 76 of Mortgages, on page 153, thereof conveying and mortgaging lands and premises therein described as follows: All those tracts or parcels of land lying and being in the county of Polk and State of Minnesota, described as follows: to-wit: Lots numbered 23 and 24, Block 7, in Champagne and Dow's addition to the village, now city of Red Lake Falls, according to the plat thereof on file and of record in the office of the register of Deeds in and for the county of Polk and State of Minnesota; and

Whereas, that part of said Polk county in which said land and premises were at the time said mortgage was executed and recorded as aforesaid, has since been duly set off, organized and erected as Red Lake county in the State of Minnesota, and the aforesaid record of said mortgage has been duly transcribed to and recorded, in book 28 of Mortgages, on page 91 thereof in said Red Lake county, Minnesota and said lands and premises above described are now situated in said Red Lake county; and

Whereas, said mortgagors, covenanted in and by said mortgage deed to pay all taxes which were then or might be thereafter assessed upon the said premises and in case of their failure to do so that said mortgagee might pay the same, and that said taxes so paid would become a part of the debt secured by said mortgage. Said mortgagors further covenanted that in case of default in any of the conditions of said mortgage therein contained said mortgagee was duly authorized and empowered to consider the whole sum secured by said mortgage as immediately due and payable.

That default has been made in the condition of said mortgage in this—that the mortgagors have neglected and refused to pay the taxes on said above described premises for the years 1896, 1897 and 1898 and that there is now $179.95 delinquent taxes against said above described premises. That said mortgagee has elected to and does hereby declare and consider the whole sum secured by said mortgage as now due and payable, being the sum of one thousand one hundred and twenty-nine dollars and ninety-five cents ($1,129.95), the amount due and claimed to be due upon said mortgage at this date. And no action or proceeding at law or in equity has been instituted to recover the debt secured by said mortgage or any part thereof.

Now, therefore, notice is hereby given, that by virtue of the power of sale in said mortgage contained and therewith recorded and pursuant to the statutes in such cases made and provided said mortgage will be foreclosed by sale of the above described mortgaged premises by the Sheriff of said Red Lake county at public auction, at the front door of the Court House in the city of Red Lake Falls, in the county of Red Lake and State of Minnesota, on Saturday the 29th day of April, A. D. 1899, at ten o'clock in the Forenoon to satisfy the amount which will then be due on said mortgage and the debt secured thereby, together with the cost and charges of said foreclosure, including the sum of Fifty dollars ($50.00) Attorney's fees as stipulated in said mortgage.

Dated this 13th day of March A. D. 1899.

The citizens of this city and vicinity are to be congratulated on securing a new lumber yard, such as the St. Hilaire Lumber Co., are putting in. They are just finishing a mammoth lumber shed which is the finest in this part of the country. The company will carry an immense stock, all under cover, and patrons can be sure of obtaining anything they want in nice dry lumber. They have come to stay, and we should all assist them in getting started, by giving them some business. Mr. G. H. Wall, the general manager assures us that their grades prices and terms cannot be beaten. He is fortunate in securing Mr. B. F. Bivins of Argyle, as agent at this point. Mr. Bivins is an old lumberman, and has a host of friends who can rest assured that they will receive the very best of treatment at his hands. Good thing, push it along.—Warren Sheaf.

When Democracy Will Die.

In reply to the repeated republican assertion that the democratic party is dead, some unknown Hickory democrat has put into verses the conditions under which, and the time when democracy will die:

When the lion eats grass like an ox,
And the fishworm swallows the whale;
When the terrapins knit woolen socks,
And the hare is out-run by the snail;
When serpents walk upright like men,
And doodle bugs travel like frogs;
When the grasshopper feeds on the hen,
And feathers are found on hogs;
When Thomas cats swim in the air,
And elephants roost upon trees;
When insects in summer are rare,
And snuff never makes people sneeze;
When fish creep over dry land,
And mules on velocipedes ride;
When foxes lay eggs in the sand,
And women in dress take no pride.
When Dutchmen no longer drink beer,
And girls get to preaching on time;
When the billy goat butts from the rear,
And treason no longer is crime;
When the humming bird brays like an ass,
And limburger smells like cologne;
When plow shares are made out of glass,
And hearts of Illinoisans are stone;
When sense grows in Republican heads,
And wool on the hydraulic ram;
Then the Democratic party will be dead,
And this country not worth a d—m.
—Silver Knight Watchman.

Farmers, make a note of this. Have you ever tried seeding your grain both ways of the field. It will not only increase the yield, but will help to protect the crop from the hot winds. Drill in one half bushel of wheat per acre in the ordinary way, then drill in one half bushel per acre at right angles to the first seeding. If good seed is used, one bushel per acre is enough. By this method you cover the ground better get a finer and firmer seed bed, and a better stand of wheat, and a better yield. The rows of grain running both ways of the field will prevent the dry winds from blowing through and evaporating the moisture from the soil. Reports received from eleven farmers along the "Soo" Line of North Dakota, who tried this method in 1898, show an average increase of over five bushels to the acre. One Richland county farmer who made a careful test in two large fields adjoining, reports an increase of seven bushels of wheat per acre from the field that was drilled both ways. Cross seeding requires a little more work but it pays big returns. Give it a trial this year. If you are going to buy a new drill, buy a press drill that will put the seed in the ground right, and press the soil down firmly over it.

—If you are troubled with rheumatism take the Imperial Blood and Rheumatism cure. It will positively cure all diseases arising from impure blood, and is sold under an absolute guarantee to benefit or money refunded. Call for free sample at the New Drug Store.

Anthony Hope's New Romance.

Anthony Hope's new romance, which he has just finished, is called "The Countess Emilia," and has been purchased by The Ladies Home Journal, in which periodical it will immediately begin. The story is about a beautiful Countess. She has quarreled with her husband, and they have decided to live in seclusion in separate wings of the castle. This they do until Captain Dieppe, who becomes a member of the household, inadvertently opens a door, through which are revealed to him the apartments of the exiled Countess, with the beautiful occupant standing in a doorway. The Captain falls in love with the young woman, and from this point there is not a moment's cessation in the romantic adventures which ensue in the castle, its gardens and neighboring places of rendezvous.

W. W. Germane, in Minneapolis Journal: The Republican press bureau is trying at every opportunity to belittle John Lind and give out the impression that he is making many mistakes. This is unwise, because the facts do not justify any such position. Lind is making a good governor, and should he continue as he has begun the Republicans will have no easy task before them in accomplishing his defeat. Misrepresentation at this early stage of the proceedings surely does not help the Republican party or cause the general public to have more confidence in it. Better say nothing at all, it seems to me, than some of the very foolish things which have been said by the bureau of late. Lind has lost no ground with his own following. A few of the would-be officeholders are offended, but this was to have been expected in any event. The masses of the fusion people who are with Lind and believe in him, and the politicians will be with him when the time comes. They know they cannot hope to win with a new man. Lind will make it a point so to act in office as to give the Republicans no ground for just complaint, and all complaint which is unjust will re-act powerfully on those who make it.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

Regular Correspondent.

There are some men in the Alger party, now on the way to Cuba that are ashamed of being with him, or also he has some along that he is ashamed of, as particular pains were taken to prevent a complete list of the eight or ten men getting published.

Secretary Hay had a bad spell when it was learned that the report of ex-Secretary Sherman's death was false. He had caused copies of an article highly eulogizing the public career of Sherman to be sent to a number of the big newspapers. He isn't much of a politician, but he knew that with Sherman alive and his attitude in Ohio politics uncertain, neither Hanna nor McKinley would wish the administration to stand sponsor for any praise of the man they had forced out of the Senate and out of the Cabinet. Telegrams were sent requesting that the eulogy be suppressed.

When they have no power to be otherwise republicans are always fair. A case in point is the distribution of the Senate patronage. When the republicans were in the minority they thought the plan of dividing the patronage of the Senate among democrats, republicans and populists, in proportion to the strength of each in the Senate, as just right, as it unquestionable was. But now, having a majority of the Senate, they have undergone a change of mind and are advocating a change that will give them entire control of the Senate patronage, and without waiting for a change to be formally adopted democratic employes are being dismissed to make places for republicans.

Military officers who have closely followed the testimony taken by the court of Inquiry say the verdict is bound to support the charges made by Gen. Miles One prominent officer said: "I don't see how the court can do anything else but report that every charge made by Gen. Miles was justified, and I expect it to go further and fix the responsibility upon Alger and Eagan. I know that great pressure will be brought to bear to prevent such a straightforward report as the evidence calls for and to get some word juggling done than can be made to mean anything or nothing, according to the wishes of the reader: but there are men on that court who are not in the habit of suppressing their conscientious opinions."

Another blessing of annexation has just been officially uncovered. When it was stated in Congres that the annexation of the sugar producing islands would mean a speedy end of the sugar industry in the U. S. the rabid annexationists hooted at the idea. Now, an agent of the Agricultural Department, sent to Porto Rico to carefully investigate the subject, makes an official report saying that the sugar industry in the U. S. is doomed, if Porto Rico, Cuba, and the Philippines are allowed to send us their sugar free of duty. He says the same grade of sugar that costs 3¼ cents a pound to produce in the U. S. costs but 2 cents a pound to produce in those islands. This will be a hard nut for the next Congress to crack.

The Revenue Stamp Bill.

I licked a dozen stamps to-day
For telegrams I sent;
I licked and stuck one on the bill
With which I paid my rent;
I licked a stamp to place upon
A note which I renewed,
And then a licked another and to Make a mortgage good.
I've licked these stamps to show that I
Respect my country still,
And now I'd like to lick the man
Who introduced that bill.

THE BEST SPRING TONIC.

As winter passes away it leaves many people feeling weak, depressed and easily tired. This means that the blood needs attention and sensible people always take a tonic at this time of year. Purgatives are not the right medicine — they weaken instead of strengthening.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People are the best tonic medicine in the world and do not act on the bowels. They stimulate the appetite, enrich the blood, strengthen the nerves and make people feel bright, active and strong.

No one is better able to speak of this fact than Miss Hazel Snider, a charming young woman of Arlington, Ind. To-day she has rosy cheeks, sparkling eyes and a plump form, which prove that she is in good health. A year ago Miss Snider was very thin, her cheeks pale, eyes sunken and dull. She was troubled with nervousness and general debility. She says:

"After several months' treatment from the family physician we saw he could do no good. I was discouraged and did not know what to do. One day I read an item in a paper of the wonderful curative qualities of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. I tried the medicine, and when nearly through with the second box noticed a change for the better. After I had taken eight boxes I was cured, and have had no occasion to take any kind of medicine since. I owe much to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, probably my life, and I advise any one suffering with troubles similar to mine, to take these pills." Miss HAZEL SNIDER.

Sold by all druggists or sent post paid by the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Schenectady, N.Y., on receipt of price, 50¢ per box; six boxes, $2.50.

An Excellent Combination.

The pleasant method and beneficial effects of the well known remedy, SYRUP OF FIGS, manufactured by the CALIFORNIA FIG SYRUP CO., illustrate the value of obtaining the liquid laxative principles of plants known to be medicinally laxative and presenting them in the form most refreshing to the taste and acceptable to the system. It is the one perfect strengthening laxative, cleansing the system effectually, dispelling colds, headaches and fevers gently yet promptly and enabling one to overcome habitual constipation permanently. Its perfect freedom from every objectionable quality and substance, and its acting on the kidneys, liver and bowels, without weakening or irritating them, make it the ideal laxative.

In the process of manufacturing figs are used, as they are pleasant to the taste, but the medicinal qualities of the remedy are obtained from senna and other aromatic plants, by a method known to the CALIFORNIA FIG SYRUP Co. only. In order to get its beneficial effects and to avoid imitations, please remember the full name of the Company printed on the front of every package.

Getting the Drinks or Their Cash Equivalent.

"Pardon me, sir, but are you going in there to drink?"

Brown looked at the speaker in astonishment, as well he might. It is rather unusual, to say the least, to be addressed in such a way by a total stranger. In this case, the stranger was very shabbily dressed, and his face showed traces of dissipation. He repeated his question, as Brown stood glaring at him.

"Well, what if I am?" answered Brown, gruffly.

"If you are going to get a drink," replied the stranger, taking no notice of the other's evident ill-temper, "it is in your power to do me a very great favor. It will not cost you a cent, either."

"I don't know that I have any very strong desire to do you a favor," returned Brown, "but, curious to know what your game is, go ahead."

"I need a drink of whisky," explained the seedy one, "but, unfortunately, I have only a dime, and I detest 10 cent whisky. Now, your drink will cost you 15 cents, but you can get two of them for a quarter. May I venture to ask you to take my dime and get me a drink at the same time you buy your own?"

"Here," said Brown, "take this quarter and buy two drinks for yourself."—New York Journal.

BRIDGET CARRIED OUT ORDERS.

Her Description of Her Mistress Was Effective, but Not Pleasing.

Mrs. Smith, who lives on Calumet avenue, sent a domestic out the other day with a tailor-made suit that she wanted cleaned and pressed.

"Now, Bridget," she said, "these cleaners are sometimes very careless, if they think one will put up with their poor work. You take this over to No. —, Cottage Grove avenue, and be sure to impress it upon the old fellow that I want the work well done."

Bridget came back in the course of half an hour, evidently well pleased with herself.

"Sure, mum," she explained, "Oi'll warrant yer dress is trruned to perfection. Oi tould 'im, sez Oi, the woman yez be goin' to worruk for is the divil. She's the partickalarest crayther yez iver had dalins wid, bein' that bomely she knows her dresses hae got to be disthracktinly good lookin'. True to Principle.

REFORM POLICIES

EVENTS OF THE WEEK IN STATE AND NATIONAL POLITICS—LEGISLATIVE OUTLOOK.

The People Awakened Concerning the Gross Earnings Tax, but They Must Press Hard in the Senate or Be Defeated—Talk of Big Railroad Boodle Bag—Twin City Rapid Transit and the Next Reform Board of Equalization. Probable Fate of the Fee Bills—Republican Fiasco—The Jones and the Smiths—Merriamism—Cheering News From National Headquarters—Reform Note and Comment of the Week.

Reform Press Bureau.
ST. PAUL, March 20, 1899.

With the legislative session making the turn toward the home stretch, the tension draws tighter and tighter, as to what the record for the whole will be. It also brings those specially interested to the anxious seat. The law crop is certain to be as short as the ice crop is long. There will not be the usual bills either introduced or passed, into the hundreds. Indeed, it looks like the "shortest" long session, in that respect, since the state "grew to greatness."

The wind-up will come Wednesday, April 19, when members will draw balances for 110 days, though the statutory limit is "ninety legislative days," and put the difference in the wallet along with the mileage, while having passes. Such is life "in the big cities."

It is beyond expectation that any very important bills will appear hereafter, except the appropriation bills; and perhaps some which may come from the governor. One of the most important, presenting the question of direct legislation, was presented by Hon. Altweed Pomeroy, of New Jersey, secretary of the Direct Legislation League of America, Judge J. W. Willis, and Louis Nash, Esq., the text of which has been given our press through the Northwestern Union and the Kellogg company. The Republican majority shows at every turn that it will have none of the legislation, and struck the bill to the heart in house committee. A senate bill, however, is also pending, and all friends of it should let their senators hear from them at once.

A good thing to keep in mind, against the next meeting of the state board of equalization, is the annual statement of the Twin City street railway company, which last year defeated the attempts to have the Republican board raise its taxes in proportion to its profits. Its stock has taken a high place on Wall street lately, and big figures of the profits to owners of that stock are given out.

The '98 statement shows total receipts from 5 cent fares, $2,145,092.95, an increase of $160,000. Net earnings $1,019,220.14, an increase of over $140,000. The company's debt on both Minneapolis and St. Paul systems being bonds at five and six per cent, is $10,388,000, on which the annual interest was $548,400. The capital stock outstanding is $2,462,000 preferred, drawing 7 per cent, and $15,010,000 common, the holders of which own the company (Twin City Rapid Transit.) Out of the net earnings the debt interest, $548,000 was paid, and that on the 7 per cent preferred stock, the total interest paid being $718,454.07. The sum of $64,214.11 was paid in taxes, being over $2,200 less than was paid in 1897. The whole leaves a surplus of $378,655.69 for the year, which is an increase over the surplus of the preceding year of $140,000.

The company has paid taxes on a valuation of $1,420,095, in both Ramsey and Hennepin counties, for all its property, shown to be 122 miles of railway in Hennepin and 101 in Ramsey, its franchise untaxed in the former, and valued at $300,000 in the latter. This meager valuation the Republican board of equalization refused to raise. The company's present schedule gives the total value of the company's property in roadway, securities, current assets, notes and bills, cash in bank ($225,000), stores, material, etc., at $30,309,719.92. It has paid an average of 6 per cent on stock and bonds aggregating $13,000,000, and left a common stock surplus of $400,000. Or, take it another way, its net earnings would pay nearly 4 per cent on the total of its assets and resources. Shown to be worth $30,000,000, its taxes are on a valuation of less than $1,500,000. The company convinced the Republican board last year—as it has just about convinced St. Paul that it could not afford to give three cent fares—that its whole plant could be replaced for $3,000,000, yet it earns 4 per cent on $30,000,000, has actually paid large interest on $13,000,000, and left $400,000 surplus. The people pay this on franchises they themselves made a present to the company.

The next board of equalization is appointed by Governor John Lind!

And speaking of Republican politics, it looks as if J. Adam Bede would certainly be the next candidate for congress in the Sixth district. Since the last hard winter it is declared that Morris won't do any more. Ran over the whole district, as Bede does constantly in his mind's eye, and he cannot see where a man more available can be found. And so, satisfied that he can make it, Bede is getting patches ready for those birch bark pants, and will be heard from after the spring freshet!

The reform sentiment is catching, and has taken hold of the Republican member from Wright, Boatwell, to the extent that he has evolved a bill to visit the death penalty on dogs that bark at bicycle riders. There is hope for the g. o. p. yet.

The Otter Tail Peoples Party League at a recent meeting adopted the following:

The Otter Tail County Peoples Party league at the third annual meeting renews its loyalty to the principles of the People's Party national platform adopted at St. Louis in 1896, and the state platform of 1898, on which was elected the governor of the state, the Hon. John Lind, who, in his inaugural speech, recommended each and every one of the reforms advocated in the resolutions adopted at our last annual meeting.

The league likewise commended the beet sugar veto, and the action of Governor Lind and the Otter Tail delegation in the legislature.

A BRAVE COLONEL.

RECOMMENDS PE-RU-NA AS A FAMILY MEDICINE.

A Scientific Spring Medicine and Remedy for Catarrh and Stomach Trouble.

Colonel Arthur L. Hamilton, of the Seventh Ohio Volunteers, 259 Oneida street, Columbus, Ohio, writes: "Besides having the merits of Pe-ru-na so fully demonstrated in my family, I have a number of friends who have taken it for catarrh and stomach trouble, and all unite in praising it. As a remedy for catarrh I can fully recommend it." Mrs. Hamilton, wife of the gallant colonel, is an ardent friend of Pe-ru-na also. In a letter on the subject, she writes: "I have been taking Pe-ru-na for some time, and I am enjoying better health now than I have for years. I attribute the change in my health to Pe-ru-na, and recommend this excellent catarrh remedy to every woman, believing it to be especially beneficial to them."

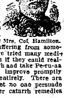
The spring-time is the most favorable time of the year to treat catarrh. There is so much less liability to take fresh cold that the treatment is unimpeded. All old cases of chronic catarrh should begin immediately a course of Pe-ru-na as directed in Dr. Hartman's books on this disease. There are so many different phases and stages of catarrh that one hardly knows when he has it. A great many people think they are suffering from something else and have tried many medicines in vain, when if they could realize that it is catarrh and take Pe-ru-na for it they would improve promptly and soon recover entirely. There are no substitutes. Let no one persuade you there are other catarrh remedies just as good.



Mrs. Col. Hamilton.

Rules for Long Life.

The figures and statistics of the census and the life insurance companies show, according to P. McArthur, in Ainslee's Magazine, that if one would live long one must follow Beecher's advice and be careful in the selection of your parents, especially long-lived ones; be born a female; be a genius with a leaning toward philosophy; be a Quaker; avoid financial worry; buy an annuity; make a happy marriage and live a moderate, temperate life between the thirtieth and fiftieth degrees of latitude. Even then some would question whether his life was worth living on these conditions. And if everybody bought annuities, who would provide them?

In order to test this paper as an advertising medium, the T. M. Roberts Supply House, Minneapolis, Minn., has stated on the bottom of their seed ad., in another part of this paper:

Offer 20 papers of fresh garden seeds free to anyone sending an order for 37 packages of garden seeds and knife, as stated in another column. We wish to convince this firm that this paper is a good medium for advertising, and as the knife alone is retailed at a dollar, we hope our patrons will avail themselves of the offer.

Sometimes marriage is a failure, and sometimes it is only a run on the bank.

Calling attention to the supposed peril of the bill for the increase of the railroad gross earnings tax, has borne fruit, but friends of the measure must not slacken their efforts. The latest apprehension is the use of money, and all sorts of stories are afloat. A few days may develop startling facts. The choice of the senate as the best body for the railroad lobby to operate in creates suspicion. It must be remembered how much the railroads have at stake. If they can escape now it makes them safe during the life of the present senate membership, four years. And as the measure must be submitted to vote of the people for ratification, that means two years more, six years in all before the companies can be again reached. This means a saving to the companies of $2,500,000 easily. Whatever it saves to them would be gained by the state.

Two years ago the stock argument against the Anderson bill for taxation of railway lands was the same as now used against the gross earnings increase, to-wit, that it would vitiate the present gross earnings tax. Has anybody heard of such interference as yet? Governor Lind, in his message, met the case by suggesting that to the proposed law the alternative proposition might be made, and which is contained in the Johnson bill, that if any company refuses to pay the tax, then the property and franchises be taxed the same as the average of taxation in the state; thus the companies can elect whether to pay taxes on a valuation or accept the commutation plan, in lieu of the general form. Governor Lind also went a very important step further, suggesting that the companies might be authorized to fix their own valuation for taxation, such valuation to be the basis for determining transportation rates as well as for taxation. "With such an alternative," said the governor, "you need have no fears that they would reject any reasonable gross earnings rate." The governor declared that the companies understand perfectly that they cannot escape payment in one form or another, and will prove glad to avail themselves of the gross earnings tax, increased to compare with that of the neighboring states, as even then far less burdensome. If not, it meant still more money for the state treasury.

It is probable that the fee legislation recommended by Governor Lind will fail. To begin with the Republican majority in both houses showed a willingness only to reduce to salary basis the offices not held by the Republican party; to-wit, oil inspector and the surveyor of logs, leaving clerk of supreme court, known to be the great "snap," to go on and make for the Republican machine. As to surveyors, it has now been clearly shown that any bill now under consideration is impractical; that is, will impair the efficiency of the service and not add to the state's revenue. As to the oil inspector legal obstacles have been encountered, in substance that there is no power to raise revenue from oil inspection, and none to enforce its collection. The experiment was tried in 1889, when Inspector Willis was placed on a salary. The Standard Oil company resisted payment to the state, the case was tried and the company has won by a supreme court decision. But if all of these obstacles were surmounted the legislation would probably fail, on account of the injustice and farce of seizing on these two offices, because held by the opposition, and leaving the Republican plum uninjured.

The bureau acknowledges receipt of "Live Questions," the speeches and writings of ex-Governor J. P. Altgeld of Illinois, who is now making a Chicago campaign for mayor, for the purpose of enforcing the principles of municipal reform, for which he has so long stood out so boldly and so bravely. His volume is one of the most important additions to current political effort which could possibly be offered at this time. It is marvelous that one of Governor Altgeld's age could, in the brief space in which he has been a political figure, produce the quantity as well as quality of matter that is thus preserved and placed to do the work it will accomplish. The book, to which more extended reference will be made at another time, is published by George S. Bowen & Son, Unity Building, Chicago, to whom applications for handling the work should be made. It should simply be in the hands of every reformer in the entire Northwest.

With W. R. Merriam census superintendent, ex-Labor Commissioner Powers chief statistician, and with Moses E. Clapp candidate for the gubernatorial nomination, there is a rise of Merriamism in Minnesota plainly visible to the naked optic.

Notwithstanding the recent illness of Chairman Jones of the national committee, the national work appears to be progressing most favorably. Mr. Harvey is out in the field, the committee work of that bureau conducted by Col. Stone. Hon. George H. Shibley, author of Falling Prices and other great works, and one of the ablest of our national workers, has removed from Chicago to Washington where he has in hand the work of collecting and disseminating the world's news concerning industrial and political development, and associated with him will be Professor John R. Commons of Syracuse university, who is said to be exceptionally equipped for the work. G. S. C.

VOLUME XVIII. ST. HILAIRE, MINNESOTA, WEDNESDAY APRIL 5, 1899. NUMBER 36

THE DEATH GRIP

OF THE CORPORATIONS FASTENED ON THE MINNESOTA LEGISLATURE.

Dubious Prospect of Reform Legislation. Slaughter of the Gross Earnings Bill. The Railroad Lobby Rides Rough Shod—Some Significant Republican Sidelights—Where Will Republican Reformers Stand?—More of the Efficient Work in the Departments—Salaries Found in Triplicate—Glimpses of Handwriting on the Wall—No Money for the Summer Schools—That National Campaign Fund Scheme—Twin City Note and Comment of the Week.

Reform Press Bureau.
St. Paul, March 27, 1899.

Before this reaches all of its readers the seeming fate of the gross earnings bill will be over, and it will be fully apparent what a death-like grip the railroad corporations have on the legislative machinery of this state. Apparently nothing short of a miracle can save the Jacobson bill to increase the gross earnings tax. The Republican senate's judiciary committee kindly performed the strangulation act, without even the formality of a hearing—at least an open one—on the part of the railroad companies. There has apparently not been the least halt in the railroad programme of boldly killing the bill, regardless of public sentiment, and the action of the people which has been taken with more or less vigor, has been without effect to stand the charge of the railroad "rough riders."

Take up the Railroads' Burden,
Sow that another reap!
Gold where the magnates revel,
Dank where your loved ones weep!
Bend to the tiresome furrow,
Bind in the sweat and pain,
Less of the fruit and vintage,
More for the bonds-men's gain!

It must not be understood that all of the senate judiciary committee are opposed to the gross earnings bill, as the most of our reform members favor it, and are simply snowed under by the overwhelming majority.

Representative Jacobson of Lac Qui Parle, ironically dubbed "Leader" Jacobson by his envious fellow Republicans, has met the crushing defeat that was inevitable in his attempt to secure important and genuine reform at the hands of this legislature. General sympathy goes out to Mr. Jacobson on account of his honorable and sincere purposes, but his experience has been the same as in past years. The natural query is how long will such men as he continue to hope for real reform through the corporation ridden Republican party.

State Auditor Dunn is in much the same situation. Not a single recommendation of the many which he has made to the legislature, has borne fruit as yet. Well may this Republican leader wonder what the outcome is going to be.

Speaking of Republican politics, there are signs of a coming struggle which many think will rend the party from stem to stern. This is between the sincere reformers and the much stronger element which despises all pretension for anything but the old machine. It was the latter which controlled last year and kept the party from any declaration on state issues, and brought it defeat. The contempt of the machine men is undisguised. Said one of the leaders, who has just laid down office for a Lind appointee: "I suppose that we shall now have to organize a Pop department to the Republican party, for the accommodation of such men as Dunn, Jacobson and Grondahl." So prominently have such leaders as Dunn and Jacobson stood up for reform that some of their own papers twit them of being in alliance with Governor Lind.

Examiner Pope is doing business at the old stand, and in the Republican administration of the state board of health continues to find nice and pleasant things for the people to consider. The board consists of seven appointive members besides the secretary, Dr. Bracken, recently reported for violation of law regarding the holding of state money which Examiner Pope has since required him to turn over. General Pope now finds that Secretary Bracken and four other members of the board are drawing two salaries each from the state, while another member is only on three different pay rolls! One member receives $1,800 a year for simply approving monthly expense bills, while that arduous work is said to be performed by another. One member is found to be on the pay roll for $1,500, and to draw another salary of $1,800 from the University. Three assistants who draw salaries from the board are also on the University pay rolls as instructors. Governor Lind and Examiner Pope are giving the matter attention and it is possible that some summary action may be taken before this reaches all its readers. Next!

And now comes State Superintendent Lewis, officially showing to the governor and the legislature there is no money with which to meet the expenses of the summer schools, and that no schools can be held unless the legislature supplies the deficiency inherited from the Republican administration. Next!

Anoka gets a hospital and Hastings a site, according to Republican legislation, continuing the old system. Governor Lind's recommendation for reform of the system has been unheeded, though it would save thousands of dollars annually.

"All things come to him who waits," is one of United States Marshal Grimshaw's mottoes, and he has verified its truth abundantly. Many years ago he bolted the Republican party and went to the legislature from Hennepin as an independent. There he cast one solitary vote for "Cush" Davis for senator. Six years later Davis reached the senate, and Mr. Grimshaw, having returned to his party, and recently worked with the zeal of them that "slew the prophets," picks for his reward the finest plum in the federal orchard. It was a wait of fifteen long years for Marshal Grimshaw, but he got there all the same.

There are those who think the United States marshal will not have an easy job in carrying out the agreement to kill opposition to Knute Nelson in Hennepin county. However, a hopeful sign is that Chairman John B. Steele of the Republican state committee is for Nelson's re-election, and opposed to Hennepin county having any candidate for senator next year.

Republican bimetallists rejoice that United States Marshal Grimshaw has appointed Captain C. A. Nimocks to a responsible position, as Captain Nimocks is a silver man from top to bottom and has been for years.

The grain investigation last week heard another farmer, Mr. Marks of Clay county, who shipped 709 bushels of wheat last fall the elevator paying him for 523. Oh, there's nothing wrong with our grain inspection.

Renville county has food for reflection, and for next year's campaign, in the salary grab bill which Governor Lind has permitted to become a law, under circumstances which should be understood. The law just repealed, was passed after having been an issue before the people in 1890, the bill being a compromise between the Renville county delegation and representatives of the county officers. The reform forces of Renville have been jealous of every proposal to alter or repeal, and those desiring repeal have been very cautious of having it suspected that repeal was favored; in fact it was denied in the last campaign that repeal was contemplated. The present delegation, Senator Nixon and Representatives Peterson and Kittme, having put the bill through, Governor Lind was flooded with petitions asking him to veto it. He called on the delegation and asked them to recall the bill and insert a provision submitting the repeal to a vote of the people, but this was refused. Under the circumstances, the governor felt that a veto would be an interference with the prerogative of the peoples' chosen representatives, of which, especially as applied to local matters, senators and representatives are very jealous, and therefore approved the bill, leaving the responsibility with the Renville county representatives. So that it is now up to the taxpayers of Renville.

The Republican legislature has passed, and Governor Lind has made laws, but sixty measures all told to this date, including that made a law without the governor's "aid or consent," the sugar bounty appropriation. This is scores and scores behind the work of previous legislatures, and in the whole list there are not a half dozen measures of more than passing interest. The time for introduction of bills has now expired. In the time remaining it is not possible for the legislature to redeem itself, or to escape the verdict of "Mene, Mene, Tekel Upharsin."

But why, pray, should reform legislation be expected from the Republican majority? Did it not in its last platform ignore every state interest and declare only for Good Roads? By the way, the counterpart of that remarkable platform has turned up in a West Virginia municipal election, where the Republicans adopted a single plank which was "Let hogs be kept in the city."

Ex-Senator S. P. Brown of the Democratic state central committee possesses one of the original typewritten copies of the famous travesty on Emperor William of Prussia, entitled "Hoch De Kaiser," and of which the following are the concluding stanzas:

"In dimes of beace brebare for vars!
I bear der helm unt sbpear auf Mars,
Und care nichts for ten dousand Czars—
Meinself-und Gott!

"In short I humor effery vhim
Mit aspect dark und visage grim;
Gott pulls mit me, und I mit Him—
Meinself-und Gott!"

Two years ago Colonel Thomas Lowry declared that the grass would grow in the streets if John Lind was elected governor. Lind has now been governor three months, in which time Colonel Tom has seen his railway stock climb up many points, and so big a surplus turned out that he is to increase the pay of his employes, some one, some two cents an hour, not now, but next June. And so he can from the increased surplus, and still have enough left to help out a little more on state taxes.

Place it on record that the Republican majority in each house could scarcely wait the rapid machinery of committee, in order to kill the initiative and referendum. They feared its consideration even. But the cause of direct legislation will go marching right on, nevertheless.

The National Press Bureau has issued from Chicago, authoritative statement regarding the "cigar scheme," so-called, of raising campaign funds for next year. On April 1 C. H. Schaefer & Co., Chicago, extensive tobacconists, will place on the market two brands of cigars, "Ways and Means" and "Defense Fund," being 10 and 5 cent cigars, respectively, on the sale of which the firm will voluntarily pay to the national committee's fund a royalty of 1 cent on the 10 cent and one-third of a cent on the 5 centers, for every cigar sold throughout the United States until after 1900. Perfect safeguards surround the arrangement so that the fund will get its share. All the cigar dealers of the United States are to be asked to push the sale. "The firm donating this royalty," says the bureau, "are not only level-headed business men, but are ardent bimetallists and believe that their donation to the committee will not only be of a large amount, but that it will do the most good to the greatest number of people."

COLLAPSE OF THE REBELLION

BACKBONE OF THE INSURGENT OPPOSITION BROKEN.

This Opinion Is Gaining Ground Among the Americans—Gen. MacArthur Resting Quietly at Malolos—Hostilities Elsewhere Limited to Occasional Exchange of Shots — Shooting Just Active Enough to Make the Lives of the Soldiers a Burden—Rumor That Gen. Pio del Pilar Will Desert Aguinaldo and Give His Support to the Americans.

Manila, April 4.—The American troops under Gen. MacArthur, are still resting at Malolos, where everything was quiet yesterday. Hostilities elsewhere—so far as officially reported—have been limited, during the last twenty-four hours to an occasional exchange of shots between the insurgents and the troops forming the lines of Gen. Lawton and Gen. Hall, extending from the water works to La Loma. But this shooting has been just active enough to make the lives of the soldiers a burden and to compel the officers to sleep in trenches, clothed and in readiness to repel possible attacks. Most of the Americans are becoming convinced that the backbone of the insurgent opposition is broken. There are numerous rumors pointing to an early collapse of the insurrection. One of these is that Gen. Pio del Pilar, the best fighter among the Filipino officers, will desert Aguinaldo and give his support to the Americans. The Spaniards, reasoning from their experience of the natives, refuse to believe that the rebellion is anywhere near put down. They declare that the Filipinos will not Take Their Defeat at Malolos, with the loss of the city and the removal of their so-called government, seriously to heart. On the contrary, the Spaniards predict that the insurgents will hover near the American lines, bothering them as much as possible, and when attacked in force, dissolve, only to reappear at other points. This sort of tactics, the Spaniards say, will be followed until the wet season compels the Americans to be housed in barracks, and then the Filipinos will return and reoccupy such towns as the United States troops do not garrison. With the next dry season a repetition of the present operations will begin. Time alone will show how much there is in the theory, but, as against it, it must be borne in mind that the Spaniards in all their domination of the Philippines, never gave the inhabitants a demonstration of power comparable in effectiveness to that given them by the United States. A priest and two members of the so-called Filipino congress, who hid themselves in the woods during the fighting which preceded the capture of Malolos, returned there and declared that 2,000 of the Filipino soldiers were anxious to Give Up Fighting and would do so but for their officers, who kept them under arms. The whole country between Malolos and Caloocan is now full of friendless women, children and old people who are returning to their homes, carrying white flags. The Americans are trying to gain the confidence of the inhabitants by proving to them that if they will return and attend to their ordinary work, peacefully, no harm will befall them. Two hundred and fifty civilians have come back to their homes in Malolos. Two thousand women and children, with a sprinkling of unarmed men, supposed to be warriors, came to the outskirts of Malolos on the sea side of the city and afterward sneaked away, carrying all the goods they could. There has been no little good rivalry as to which regiment—the First Montana or the Twentieth Kansas—is entitled to the honor of having raised its flag first in Malolos. Col. Funston and twenty men of Company B, Kansas volunteers, claim the distinction on the ground, as already cabled, of having entered the town at double-quick and raised the company's flag, but the first to be recognized officially was that of Company G, of the Montana infantry.

Casualties Reported.

NATIVES STARVING.

Wives of Killed Insurgents Left Without Means of Subsistence.

Seattle, April 4.—The Times prints a letter from a Washington volunteer at Manila which was written under date of Feb. 15, as follows:

"The native women and children in our neighborhood and beyond, as well as the old men and sick, are absolutely starving to death. The husbands and fathers have been killed, wounded, captured or driven back to Malolos, their houses burned to the ground with all their earthly possessions, and they are left with no means of subsistence. They attempt to come into the American lines by thousands, but have to be turned back. We cannot feed them."

FILIPINOS SCARCE.

Insurgents Cannot Be Located by the Americans.

Manila, April 4.—Repeated efforts to locate the insurgent army in front of Malolos have been unsuccessful and our forces are, therefore, still resting in the former Filipino capital. The attack on the forces under Gen. Hall at Mariquina suggests that the enemy is concentrating in that direction.

Col. Denby's arrival makes the early issue of the proclamation of the Philippine commission probable.

PEACEFUL ADJUSTMENT.

Samoan Affairs Will be Amicably Arranged.

Washington, April 3.—The opinion is expressed in official circles here that the outlook for a satisfactory and peaceful adjustment of Samoan affairs is decidedly hopeful. The statement was made in a well informed quarter that it is altogether likely that the joint high commission, by virtue of the plenary powers vested in its individual members, will be able to conclude a settlement of the Samoan question satisfactory to all the powers concerned, and that there is such an understanding between the three powers as almost certainly will prevent any disagreement such as would make it necessary to ask King Oscar of Sweden and Norway to act as umpire. The peaceful solution of this delicate situation, full of possible trouble, is regarded as a triumph of diplomacy and as furnishing the strongest kind of evidence of a desire on the part of Germany as well as on that of the other powers to maintain a most amicable attitude one with another.

London, April 3.—The Times, in an editorial on the Samoan controversy, says:

"We do not suppose that England will offer an objection to the joint commission proposals. Although Admiral Kautz's fashion of downright meaning what he says is not calculated to soothe ruffled feelings, yet his dispatch has a method of raising a direct issue. A modus vivendi will doubtless be arrived at until a more permanent government can be arranged."

SEVERAL KILLED.

Official Report on the Fighting at Samoa.

Washington, April 4.—The following was given out at the state department:

The secretary of state has received from the secretary of the navy a telegram addressed to him by Rear Admiral Kautz relative to Samoan matters. It is dated Newcastle, N. S. W., March 30, 1899, and reads as follows:

"Mataafa people obeyed orders to leave government reservation. Since then have become aggressive, killing Private Holloway and three British sailors. Our man killed guarding American consulate. German consul general issued incendiary proclamation saying that my proclamation was untrue and he should uphold provisional government. The British forces act in concert with the United States, shelling rebels where (they) can be reached."

A copy of the dispatch was sent to the German ambassador. The German ambassador, Dr. Von Holleben, called at the state department at noon and had a fifteen-minute conference with Secretary Hay. The nature of the conference was not disclosed, but it was taken for granted that it had to do with the Samoan settlement. The German authorities have heard nothing further as to the collision in Samoa.

CLEAN OUT THE CORRUPTION.

Gen. Brooke Will Reorganize the Cuban Courts.

Havana, April 4.—To-day, as under the Spanish regime, bribery and fraud direct the Cuban courts. This is the firm conviction of the military administration. Gov. Gen. Brooke is taking the matter up and intends to clean out the corruption, to revise the judicial procedure, to change the court personnel and to abolish the barbarous practice of incommunicado, by which a judge may imprison for life a person ignorant of the accusation against him and of the names of his accusers. It is true that the statutes only allow three days detention incommunicado, but a judge, under the practice that has grown up may make a new commitment at the expiration of the third day, another at the expiration of the sixth day and so on, without limit.

More than this the evidence in criminal cases is taken by clerks, who, for a consideration, write into the testimony things never uttered, thus often making the best friends of the accused appear to condemn him. Apparently the whole criminal and civil systems have been arranged so as to make it easy to buy and sell justice.

The island government, as administered by the United States military government, has yielded for the first quarter $3,500,000 as customs receipts. Of this amount $2,100,000 has been spent, the city of Havana getting $1,100,000 and the city of Santiago $259,000. Each provincial governor received all he asked. Spanish gold, and especially silver, are going abroad, so that Cuba's treasury keeps out of circulation from 10 to 15 per cent of the currency in the island. Silver is appreciating. Worth 55 cents during the blockade, it has now risen to 93 on the basis of the legal value of the centen, $5.30. Change is scarce and there is little American fractional currency circulated. American bills, however, are often to be met and also American gold. The commerce and industries of the country are improving.

CLASH ON THE FRONTIER.

Bulgarians and Turks Exchange Compliments.

Vienna, April 4.—A serious collision has taken place between Bulgarian and Turkish frontier guards at Kozyl-Agah, between Jamboli, Eastern Roumelia, and Adrianople, on the banks of the Tonja, fifty-six miles south of Jamboli. According to a dispatch from Sofia the Turks attacked a weak Bulgarian outpost, but the Bulgarians, aided by armed inhabitants, repulsed their assailants after four hours' fight. Both sides suffered losses of killed and wounded. The Turks were seeking to secure a position hitherto held by the Bulgarians.

Occupation of San Mun Bay.

London, April 4. — A Rome correspondent says he learns in official circles that Italy and Great Britain have arrived at an agreement which will result in an Italian occupation of San Mun bay before April 25.

Lake Vessels Shy.

Chicago, April 4.—A serious shortage of vessels in the grain trade which is likely to result in the diversion of a large traffic from the lakes to the all-rail lines eastward is threatened for the coming season.

THE LEGISLATURE

Business Transacted by Minnesota Solons.

St. Paul, March 28.—The house did a magnificent day's work yesterday. Confronted when it assembled by a calendar of ten house bills and twenty-five senate bills, it "buckled down" to business and before adjourning in the afternoon had passed all the bills on the calendar but five, which were laid over, and two which were defeated, and threw in a couple of odd senate bills and one house file not on the calendar.

The following were among the more important bills introduced:

To appropriate $3,000 to pay the register of deeds of certain counties for perfecting the record evidence of the title to certain foreclosed railroad lands. — Relating to the division of common property by towns and villages. — Authorizing the formation of mutual retail hardware insurance companies. — Authorizing district judges to modify the term of commitments to the state training school. Exempting orphan asylums and homes for the indigent from taxation. — Placing the Sons of Herman on the same footing with other secret societies with respect to the insurance laws of the state. — Provides that proceedings with respect to change of county seats may not be renewed until five years has elapsed from a vote on the proposition. — Places the reformatory on the same footing with the state prison with respect to unauthorized communication with inmates. — Allows county commissioners to secure a surveyor to relocate corner and meander posts. — Amends the law relative to the time of report of the state board of equalization as to freight line and equipment companies. — Allows a school tax levy of 15 mills. Relative to the destruction of grass and weeds on public highways. — Reduces the legal rate of interest from 7 to 6 per cent. — Amending the law relative to banks of discount and deposit. Relating to assessments for public improvements in cities of less than 10,000 inhabitants.

The Senate.

The McGowan eight-hour bill was saved from slaughter last evening just as the senate was adjourning. The bill had been under discussion on general orders the better part of the afternoon. Numerous amendments had been added until the bill was patched out of all semblance to its former self. Senator Roverud then took pity on the bill and moved that it be indefinitely postponed so as to end its misery. His motion prevailed on a rising vote, but when the committee of the whole had resolved itself into the senate again Senator McGowan had the report on the bill excepted, and after some further oratorical sparring was indulged in, it was laid on the table, to be taken up later.

Senator Johnson of St. Peter introduced the first bill to be submitted by consent of the governor. It proposes to empower city councils of cities of 10,000 or less inhabitants to appropriate money for the improvement and maintenance of county roads and bridges leading to the cities. The bill was passed under suspension of the rules.

The special senate committee appointed to draft a medical bill made its report yesterday afternoon. The report recommends a board of twelve, to represent all schools. The Christian Scientists are not to have representation. The bill will be placed at the head of general orders.

St. Paul, March 29.—The senate late yesterday afternoon, by a vote of 31 to 30, adopted the report of a majority of the judiciary committee, indefinitely postponing the Jacobson bill to increase the gross earnings tax of railroads from 3 to 4 per cent. The senate spent most of the day in debate on the Jacobson bill.

Senator McGowan induced the senate to reverse itself yesterday with regard to the eight-hour bill. In committee of the whole the senate voted to recommend the bill for indefinite postponement. This was Monday afternoon. Senator McGowan had the bill excepted, and yesterday morning he called it up and moved that it be placed on the calendar with a recommendation that it be passed. The motion was adopted by a vote of 34 to 28.

The House.

Most of the afternoon was spent by the house in committee of the whole in the discussion of the sugar bounty question as presented by Mr. Roberts' bill limiting the bounty to $50,000 a year for three years, and the Batz bill repealing the bounty law altogether. The consideration was devoted mainly to the former bill, although the debate took the widest range. The bill was finally amended so as to provide that not more than $25,000 shall go to any one congressional district, and in this form the bill was recommended for passage.

The house finally disposed of the Guiterson bill increasing the tax on the premiums of insurance companies and business done in Minnesota from 2 to 2 1-2 per cent.

St. Paul, March 30.—The legislature paid the regulation visit of inspection yesterday to the state prison at Stillwater. There were about 300 in the party, consisting of legislators and their families and employes of the legislature. Luncheon was served in the prison immediately after the arrival of the party, after which the prison authorities and members of the board of managers showed the visitors through the institution.

The senate yesterday morning put itself on record by a vote of 34 to 21 against taking the county option bill out of committee. It was not exactly a vote going to the merits of the measure. It came up on a motion of Senator Grindeland that the chairman of the temperance committee be requested to report out the bill immediately. There are undoubtedly several senators who voted to sustain the position of the committee, who may change their vote when it comes to a question of passing the bill.

The House.

The house at its morning session went on record very emphatically as opposed to the Larson bill, allowing pool-selling on race tracks for a thirty-day period in each year. The bill came back from the committee on general legislation without recommendation. Mr. O'Neil moved that the bill be committed to the committee of the whole. Mr. Fosnes moved that the bill be indefinitely postponed. The motion was adopted.

The house spent considerable time in committee of the whole and a large number of bills were acted on.

At the evening session the bill of Judge Abbott, providing for a fourth experimental farm was considered.

St. Paul, March 31. — The railroad gross earnings tax bill, which proposed to increase the gross earnings tax on railroads operating in the state from 3 to 4 per cent, was made the bone of contention again yesterday afternoon in the senate. After a long preliminary wrangle the state refused, by a vote of 32 noes to 30 ayes to take up from the table the motion of Senator Greer of Wabasha to reconsider the vote of Tuesday whereby the recommendation of the committee on taxes and tax laws that the bill be indefinitely postponed was adopted.

The senate yesterday passed the Daugherty bill to license peddlers by the narrow margin of one vote. As originally drafted the bill was undoubtedly prohibitive, but it has since been so amended as to make it optional with town boards to adopt the law; it is not to affect peddling in townships and the license fee has been reduced from $3 a day, $50 a month and $100 a year to $1 a day, $10 a month and $50 a year.

The McGowan eight-hour bill was passed by a vote of 33 to 29, under a call of the senate, all voting except Senator Gausewitz, who had been excused.

Other bills passed were:

Legalizing electric light and water works bonds heretofore voted upon by cities having less than 10,000 inhabitants. — To legalize acknowledgments of conveyances and other instruments and the record thereof. — To legalize the execution and record of conveyances and powers of attorney executed in blank or unattested by witnesses.—Legalizing the foreclosure of mortgage by any foreign executor or administrator who has not filed authenticated copy of his appointment as such executor or administrator.

The House.

The Roberts bill amending the sugar bounty law so as to limit its operation to Jan. 1, 1901, and the amount which the state may be called upon to pay in any one year to $40,000, and the amount which any one factory may receive to $20,000, went through the house yesterday by the vote of 87 to 21.

The house disposed of a dozen bills in committee of the whole, Mr. C. O. A. Olson in the chair.

The following bills were passed:

To prevent the use of preservatives in dairy products. — Appropriating $2,500 for a monuments at Hinckley.—Relating to the assignment of wages.

St. Paul, April 1.—The signature of Gov. Lind is all that is now needed to make a law of the staples house bill providing for the location of a new state hospital for the insane at Anoka and the appropriation of $15,000 for another hospital at Hastings. This result was accomplished by the passage yesterday forenoon of the bill by a vote of 36 to 24.

The senate, in committee of the whole, transacted considerable business. The amended medical bill was the most important measure acted on and it was recommended to pass. The bill provides for a board of twelve examiners, to represent all schools of medicine and healing arts. Under the provisions of the measure Christian Scientists are excluded from practicing if they attempt to collect a fee for their services.

The House.

The house spent a good part of the day in committee of the whole and covered considerable ground, reporting nineteen bills.

The following bills were passed:

Providing for charter commissions in cities. — Providing for a system of district poorhouses. — Increasing the salary of the deputy state treasurer to $2,000. — Relating to the accounts of executors and administrators. — Empowering certain villages to issue bonds for the payment of outstanding indebtedness.

St. Paul, April 3.—The senate was in session only a half-day Saturday, the afternoon being devoted to an inspection of the state university. The only business outside of routine committee reports, etc., was the consideration in committee of the whole, with Senator Ryder in the chair, of the bill to place the state oil inspector on a salary basis. After debating the question for more than an hour and a half, it was recommended for passage.

The House.

The session of the house was productive of some routine business and a little work in committee of the whole. Nothing of general interest transpired. A large number of bills were reported from the committees.

VERY BOLD ROBBERY.

Man Assaulted and Robbed in His Own Office.

St. Paul, April 4.—Michael Treacy, of Brown, Treacy & Co., printers and stationers, was assaulted and seriously injured and robbed of nearly $500 on the stairway of his building. The robber escaped without being seen or leaving a clue. The robbery is one of the most desperate pieces of work that has ever been done in the city. Mr. Treacy pays his printers and lithographers at 6 o'clock Saturday evening. The money is placed in envelopes in the office on the first floor. The envelopes are put in a canvas bag which Mr. Tracey carries to the composing room on the third floor. He left his office as usual with the canvas sack. He reached the second floor and passed through a dark hallway leading to the stairs to the third story. As he placed his foot on the first step he was struck on the head from the back with a blunt instrument, which cut a deep gash on the top of the head. Mr. Treacy fell unconscious at the foot of the stairs. When he revived he was alone and the bag of money was missing. Mr. Treacy was able to walk down stairs to his office, where he told the story to the cashier. Doctors were called and they said that the wound was serious, and that if the blow had been struck nearer the front of the head it would probably have been fatal.

THE PROFESSOR'S BABY.

Medical Students Provided a Surprising Array of Presents For It.

"When I was a medical student in the University of Pennsylvania," said the doctor, "the boys celebrated an interesting event in the domestic life of one of the professors in a unique way. The news that the favorite professor was a happy father reached the students on Thursday morning, and that afternoon and evening there were consultations held all over the university buildings, and sundry dimes and quarters were collected by two or three of the students, who constituted a sort of finance committee. Every Friday morning the professor gave a lecture to the students in the amphitheater. The subject for the lecture that week was 'The Relation of the Sympathetic Nervous System to the Nerve Centers of the Brain,' and half an hour before the time set for the lecture every man in the class, which numbered about 350, was in his place waiting for the fun to begin and glancing now and then toward the three long operating tables in the center of the room.

"Promptly at 10 o'clock the door opened and the favorite professor entered the amphitheater. He carefully closed the door behind him, then with a self-conscious clearing of his throat turned toward the class. At the first glance his jaw fell, while every one of the 350 fiends in the seats above began to yell at the top of his lungs. Spread out upon the three long operating tables were about 150 baby's toys and furnishings of every kind and description. There were rattles by the dozen, Noah's arks, dolls of all sizes, a toy cooking stove, a baby carriage, an embroidered flannel petticoat, a nursing bottle lying in a graduated glass, a pair of little blue kid shoes and other things too numerous to mention. After the first shock of surprise and embarrassment, the professor was game. He thanked us, in a speech peppered with five syllabled words, for our thoughtfulness in thus providing for the future needs of his offspring, but he observed, after a careful examination of the various instruments of infantile delight spread out before him, that we had forgotten one thing, a bottle of paregoric. Then he yawned in a way suggestive of midnight vigils and turned his attention to 'The Relation of the Sympathetic Nervous System to the Nerve Centers of the Brain.'

"But he was not allowed to proceed beyond the first sentence or two. His attention was drawn to the blackboard, where some student of artistic tendencies had drawn an elaborately decorated design in red, white and blue chalk, 'Is Marriage a Failure?' The poor professor, seeing that there was no possibility of a serious lecture that morning, entertained us for about ten minutes on the text posted on the blackboard; then, after inviting us all to visit the newcomer in the immediate future, he marched off to the music of 350 voices singing, 'Go to Sleep, My Little Pickaninny' and 'Daddy Wouldn't Buy Me a Bowwow.'"—New York Sun.

A SCENE OF BUTCHERY.

The Slaughter That Came With the End of the Janizaries.

On the 15th day of June, 1826, the whole corps of the janizaries in the capital assembled, overturned their camp kettles (the signal of revolt) and advanced upon the seraglio. With his own hand the sultan unfurled the sacred "sanjak sherif" and called upon the true believers to rally round their dischah and caliph, and the zealous Mussulman citizens rushed from all quarters and rallied under the sacred symbol. The ranks of the janizaries were raked with grape and solid shot by "Black Hell" (a nickname for Ibrahim, general of artillery) and his gunners as they pressed through the streets, compelling them to fall back to the Etmeidan, where they defended themselves with extraordinary fierceness, slaying great numbers of their assailants. The artillery, supported by the marines and the bostangi, pressed forward and compelled them to retreat to their barracks, where they offered desperate resistance to the assault.

From every street cannon thundered on the walls without intermission, the building was soon in flames, the walls torn and battered down by grapeshot, and the janizaries, overwhelmed by ruins, shot and flames, perished in their burning and blood stained barracks. For two days the gates of the city remained closed, and with relentless vigor every corner was searched for such janizaries as had escaped the general massacre, and when found they were hastily executed. Nearly 20,000 janizaries were destroyed on this memorable day, and many thousands were afterward put to death in the various cities of the empire, and thus not one of the number under arms was left to tell the tale.—Self Culture.

Accounted For the Fit.

Hon. George R. Peck so keenly appreciates a good joke that he tells the following on himself:

"When, after a foreign trip, I was being welcomed by some of my friends in Topeka, I wore a suit of clothes made by a London tailor that was uncomfortably tight in places. I expressed my surprise that a loose fit in London should prove a tight fit in Topeka, whereupon an Irishman of the party exclaimed:

"'Mr. Peck, don't forget you're a bigger man in Topayka than you were in London.'"—Chicago Journal.

GERM CELLS OF LIFE.

THEY RETAIN VITALITY EVEN AFTER APPARENT DEATH.

A Startling Theory Showing That Instant Death Is an Impossibility and That We May Be Conscious For Some Time After Dissolution.

"You often meet with the phrase "death was instantaneous," and you believe it, but instant death is impossible.

A professor has been studying the subject, a man of renown in his own world, and he has discovered certain important data proving conclusively that no one can meet with instant death. He works out his theory on the data afforded by the physiology of cells. He states that no one yet has proved the difference between a dead and a live brain cell. When this has been done, then we can more easily ascertain how long a time elapses before the death of a cell takes place.

But, first, what is a cell? To be brief, both plants and animals—including, of course, man—are built up of units, elementary units, which you can only detect under the microscope. Now, each tiny cell is a vital elementary unit. We are nothing but highly developed results of the individual vitality of huge quantities of these fundamental cells.

As this is undeniably so, how is it possible, by simple decapitation, say, to cause instant death in the millions of cells which compose the brain? It is known that brain cells have their own cell life and are liable to live a certain time after they are cut off from outside nutrition without the supply of any blood whatever from the body. The nourishment is supplied inside the cell walls, and it can go on living after being cut off from other resources.

From this argument it is clear to the professor that these millions of cells in the brain must continue to live after death has apparently intervened—that is, when death appears, but only on the outside, to have been instantaneous.

After a man's leg is cut off, or an animal's, you can stimulate the nerves for a long time, but you cannot do it after the cells are dead. You cannot get any response at all.

Electricity has been thought to be the germ of life, but this is a fanciful theory when confronted with the new laws as by research established.

The countless millions of cells of which our bodies are entirely composed contain the germ of life, and it is impossible for these to be visited with an instantaneous unconsciousness.

You can take living cells from a pig's glands, and this same professor will demonstrate to you that after these glands have gone through their preparation the cells are still living.

But the curious fact remains that at present there are no data showing the supposed length of time it takes for the cells of the brain to empty themselves of the germ of consciousness or life, but it is certain that consciousness does not cease immediately after, say, a head has been cut off a body. The belief, however, is that at least four or five minutes must elapse ere death finally steps in to arrest life.

It has been noticed in the case of a decapitated head that the cheeks remain red for some minutes after the severance, a conclusive proof that the cells are living.

The heads of decapitated animals have continued to bite and snap at the air for three or four minutes after severance. This phenomenon is well marked in the head of a tortoise separated from the body. The life of the brain, therefore, must be retained for some time after the head is severed, from the very fact that, though being separated from the trunk, its nutritious blood and gases, taken from the fund stored up in the cells, are in sufficient quantity to carry on life, but for what exact period is unknown.

Do the brain cells die simultaneously? No, because they have their own individual cell life. Our scientific friend also makes the very startling statement that in many diseases the brain cells, although the person to all appearances is dead, may live for three or four hours after supposed death has taken place.

In the case of a healthy person being hanged, seeming death is not instantaneous at all. Organic motion is arrested, but real death is certainly not instantaneous. The brain cells are the last to die, and life is not really extinct until rigor mortis sets in, which, in the case of a healthy person dying suddenly, is protracted.

Now, when it is known that an ordinary cell lives after being removed from a living body, why, then, cannot the brain cells retain their life when the conditions immediately surrounding them are much the same as during their previous existence?

The head of a chicken was cut off, and after certain stimuli had been made it opened its mouth and gasped five minutes after its head had been decapitated from the body.

The head of a certain animal was cut off and found susceptible to light for many minutes after it was apparently dead. A strong electric light was held in front of the eyes and moved alternately near to and far away from them. The pupils of the eyes followed the light in its movements, expanding and contracting, that is to say, focusing themselves upon the light as it moved backward and forward. It was proved that the animal was capable of smelling by the use of certain pungent odors placed near the nasal organs—and all this because the brain cells were yet living.

Raising Ducks Without Water.

Ducks don't need water to thrive. There are many duck raising plants in this country where thousands of the fowls are bred each year for market and where there is not even a puddle for them to flounder in. One of these farms is credited with an output of 20,000 ducks a year.

The Army and Navy.

Have covered themselves with glory during the war. The Army and Navy vest pocket memorandum book published by the Northern Pacific, is a compact digest of information relative to the navies and armies of Spain and the United States at the beginning of the war. It has a map of Cuba, illustrations of naval ships, glossary of navy and army terms, translation of Spanish words, etc. Send ten cents to Chas. S. Fee, general passenger agent, N. P. R., St. Paul, Minn., for a copy.

Names of Litigants.

In an old Indiana case a man named Shallcross undertook to live up to his name by running an unlawful ferry, but the decision of the court said to him, "You shall not cross."

The name of an adopted citizen of the Chickasaw Nation, whose adoption was canceled and who was thereupon expelled, was Run Hannah.

A California woman who said in her will, "I have no fear of the hereafter; O my Lord, teach me to live right, then to dying there is no sting," bore the prophetic Christian name of Euthanasia.

The name Dr. Physick, which might be looked for in some allegory, appears as the name of a real person in a recent law report.

Some peculiarly suggestive combinations of names in the titles of cases are these: People versus Kaiser, Priest versus Lackey, Kick versus Merry, Protected Home Circle versus Winter, Grant versus Lookout Mountain Company.

In reminiscences of the early Minnesota bar Judge Charles E. Flandrau tells in the Minnesota Law Journal of an argument before the supreme court in 1853 by ex-Chief Justice Goodrich on behalf of an Indian convicted of murder. The Indian's name was Zu-ai-za, but as the counsel could not pronounce it he always referred to him in his argument as "my client, Ahasuerus."—Case and Comment.

The Irrepressible Small Boy.

This is a true story, and it really happened in a New York family. It looks as if it might be an old story brought up to date or renovated for the occasion, but it is exactly as the small boy arranged it and not to the edification of his family. The small boy was very fond of ice cream. It never cloyed his palate. It was with the same delight that he saw it each time brought on the table, and upon each of these times he showed the exuberance of his feelings by crying in rapturous tones: "Oh-o-o! Ice cream! Ice cream! Ice cream!" much to his mamma's annoyance.

"People will think we never have ice cream or anything else to eat," she said to her son one day. "Now, we are going to have company to dinner tonight, and I don't want you to say a word when the ice cream is brought on." The small boy promised. He really was a good little boy, and he intended to mind. But when the cream was brought on the old feeling of rapture was so strong that he forgot entirely and cried out as usual. Then he remembered and stopped short, looking very repentant. He had not intended to call out, and his mother was mortified. He changed his tone entirely:

"We have ice cream almost every night," he remarked carelessly.—New York Times.

Painfully Polite.

The people of Dresden are very polite, so overpolite that they not infrequently bring down ridicule upon themselves. It used to be told in that city that a stranger was one day crossing the great bridge that spans the Elbe and asked a native to direct him to a certain church which he wished to find.

"Really, my dear sir," said the Dresdener, bowing low, "I grieve greatly to say it, but I cannot tell you."

The stranger passed on, a little surprised at this voluble answer to a simple question. He had proceeded but a short distance when he heard hurried footsteps behind him, and, turning round, saw the same man running to catch up with him.

In a moment his pursuer was by his side, his breath nearly gone, but enough left to say horriedly: "My dear sir, you asked me how you could find the church, and it pained me to have to say that I did not know. Just now I met my brother, but I grieve to say that he did not know either."

Her Opinion In Full.

The car turned sharply around a curve and the tall man who was holding on to a strap somewhat loosely was suddenly thrown from his upright position with a force that landed him in the lap of a dignified dowager sitting near him, while his high silk hat flew from his head and rolled down the aisle of the car.

"Sir," she said as he rose to his feet again with profuse apologies, "I am compelled to say that in my judgment you were lacking in that complete grasp of the strap which was essential to the highest efficiency in maintaining an upright attitude when turning a curve."

That was all. But it crushed him.—Chicago Tribune.

As He Understands It.

"As I understand it," remarked the intelligent foreigner, "you Americans regard George Washington's hatchet as the emblem of truth."

"Yes, sir, that's right," replied the American proudly.

"Then, when statesmen or other individuals who have quarreled, bury the hatchet, I suppose they cease to speak the truth?"—Detroit Free Press.

Inspiring Hope.

The Doctor—Bear up. I must tell you the worst—you can't possibly recover.

The Client—That's a pity, for if I'd lived a bit longer I should have come into a fortune; as it is, I haven't a penny to pay you with, doctor.

The Doctor—Well, now, don't give up hope. We'll try to mend you. We'll try.—Illustrated Bits.

Not Mentioned.

"Everybody seems to have been mentioned for the office except you," observed the sympathizing friend.

"Yes," replied the disappointed politician. "My name is Pants."

"Then, of course," soothingly rejoined the other, "you might expect to be among the unmentionables."

And silence like a poultice fell.—Chicago Tribune.

Mortgage Foreclosure Sale.

Whereas, default has been made in the condition of a certain mortgage, made, executed and delivered by Kate Wilmes and Michael Wilmes, her husband, mortgagors, to Anna Ericsson, mortgagee, dated the 17th day of October 1896 and recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of Polk County, Minnesota on the 31st day of October 1896, at four o'clock p. m. in Book 76 of Mortgages, on page 153, thereof conveying and mortgaging lands and premises therein described as follows: All those tracts or parcels of land lying and being in the county of Polk and State of Minnesota, described as follows: to-wit: Lots numbered 23 and 24, Block 7, in Champagne and Dow's addition to the village, now city of Red Lake Falls, according to the plat thereof on file and of record in the office of the register of Deeds in and for the county of Polk and State of Minnesota; and

Whereas, that part of said Polk county in which said land and premises were at the time said mortgage was executed and recorded as aforesaid, has since been duly set off, organized and created as Red Lake county in the State of Minnesota, and the aforesaid record of said mortgage has been duly transcribed to and recorded in book 28 of Mortgages, on page 91 thereof in said Red Lake county, Minnesota and said lands and premises above described are now situated in said Red Lake county; and

Whereas, said mortgagors, covenanted in and by said mortgage deed to pay all taxes which were then or might be thereafter assessed upon the said premises and in case of their failure to do so that said mortgagee might pay the same and that said taxes so paid would become a part of the debt secured by said mortgage. Said mortgagors further covenanted that in case of default in any of the conditions of said mortgage therein contained said mortgagee was duly authorized and empowered to consider the whole sum secured by said mortgage as immediately due and payable.

That default has been made in the condition of said mortgage in this—that the mortgagors have neglected and refused to pay the taxes on said above described premises for the years 1896, 1897 and 1898 and that there is now $179.95 delinquent taxes against said above described premises. That said mortgagee has elected to and does hereby declare and consider the whole sum secured by said mortgage as now due and payable, being the sum of one thousand one hundred and twenty-nine dollars and ninety-five cents ($1,129.95), the amount due and claimed to be due upon said mortgage at this date. And no action or proceeding at law or in equity has been instituted to recover the debt secured by said mortgage or any part thereof.

Now, therefore, notice is hereby given, that by virtue of the power of sale in said mortgage contained and therewith recorded and pursuant to the statutes in such cases made and provided said mortgage will be foreclosed by sale of the above described mortgaged premises by the Sheriff of said Red Lake county at public auction, at the front door of the Court House in the city of Red Lake Falls, in the county of Red Lake and State of Minnesota, on Saturday the 29th day of April, A. D. 1899, at ten o'clock in the Forenoon to satisfy the amount which will then be due on said mortgage and the debt secured thereby, together with the cost and charges of said foreclosure, including the sum of Fifty dollars ($50.00) Attorney's fees as stipulated in said mortgage.

Dated this 13th day of March A. D, 1899.

A great many people were alarmed Sunday forenoon by the ringing of the church bell thinking it a fire alarm on account of quick taps. Upon investigating the cause the president of the village was told it was the custom in the old country to ring the bell in such a manner Easter Sunday.

Bro. Mottson of the Warren Sheaf set a pace last week that but very few country newspaper men will follow. He put into his establishment last week a Babcock press, Sidney folder and a gasoline engine. He is postmaster at Warren and as Uncle Sam is a good paymaster, we will ask no questions.

The weighing of mail for 30 days has begun on northwestern roads and the time may be extended 10 days if either party is not satisfied. A general average is struck of all mail weighed each day, and on this average the price paid by the government for four years is fixed. The government pays $42.50 for not to exceed 200 pounds and upwards, per year. For 500 pounds the amount paid is $63.75 and $84 for 1,000 pounds. The mails in the northwest have greatly increased in amount the past four years. Each road has a man to look after his interests.

Sudden Death.

Last Wednesday, March 29th, 1899, at 5:30 p. m. Mr. P. S. Stranahan peacefully passed away at his residence in St. Hilaire at the age of 59 years. Death came very suddenly, being taken down with pneumonia just a week before which resulted in jaundice. The whole family were at his bedside when he peacefully passed away with the exception of Mrs. Kellogg and his son William, who arrived the day after his death. He was born at Saginaw, Mich. May 11, 1839 and married to Miss Jennie Buse, July 4th 1865. The earlier years of his life were devoted to milling and carpenter work, the latter trade which he followed up to the time of his death. The funeral was held at the Methodist church Friday afternoon and was conducted by Rev. H. Logan. Kind friends furnished beautiful floral offerings and the singing by the choir was very appropriate. The church was crowded with citizen of St. Hilaire, Red Lake Falls and Thief River Falls who came to pay their last respect to their departed friend. The body was laid to rest in the Lutheran cemetery east of town. The pall bearers were M. McAndress, O. W. Brink, A. H. Weagant, C. G. Rapp, P. Patterson and W. A. Sorsoleil.

He leaves a wife and three daughters Mildred and Mrs. Carrie Dainard of this village and Mrs. Elizabeth Kellogg of Walhalla N. Dak., four sons, Clarence of St. Hilaire, Levi, of Thief River Falls, William C. of Crookston and Elmer H. of Fargo, N. Dak. The Spectator joins in extending sympathy to the bereaved family in their sad affliction.

To the many kind friends who extended their loving aid and kindly sympathy during the illness and at the death of our beloved husband and father we extend our heartfelt thanks.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

Regular Correspondent.

Gen. Otis is still winning victories, but Aguinaldo still has an army, and we have not undisputed possession of a single island of the Philippine ground. The administration seems to have acquired the "manana" habit along with other Spanish property. So far as known, our victories over the Filipinos have not been very productive of results, although the country has been daily told that "tomorrow will end the organization fighting." Mr. McKinley told his cabinet that he didn't like the situation and asked for opinions on the advisibility of calling for the 35,000 volunteers authorized by the last Congress. It was pointed out to him that nothing could be accomplished by enlisting the volunteers now, as the rainy season in the Philippines would stop all active military moments long before they could be got there. An army officer came very near to correctly sizing up the situation when he said: "We lick the Filipinos every time we fight them, but they are such fools that they won't stay licked, and we have to keep doing it over again, which is monotonous; also expensive, both in blood and money."

Gen. Eagan, when he was again placed on the stand by the Military Court of Inquiry, which is now sitting in Washington, promptly took the cue given him by the beef contractor, who testified that Eagan "must have been mistaken" when he stated that it had been his intention to make the contracts stipulate that refrigerated beef should keep 72 hours after being taken from the refrigerators, and that by an error it appeared in the contracts as 24 hours. Here is Eagan's last statement: "When I was asked here about the 24 hours I had totally forgotten that I had changed my own opinion as to the condition from 72 to 24 hours. I recall since in thinking it over that I was impelled to change it to keep 24 hours from the refrigerator on shore. I felt that 24 hours from the refrigerator would be ample to reach the troops." Things look blacker and blacker for Eagan. He must have seen it in the cold politeness with which he was treated by the officers in the court room; also by the looks of everyone present when he swore that he had never spoken to Boss Hanna and would not know him if he met him. This last was in answer to Maj. Lee's question—"Were you present at a conference between Senator Hanna and someone else in regard to a beef contract?" The "some one else" referred to was Secretary Alger. Capt. Black, who was in the Commissary department, did not help Eagan any when he testified that Eagan had been greatly excited when he returned to Washington and told him that the troops in Porto Rico had refused to take and eat the meat on the Manitoba. According to Capt. Black's testimony Eagan said: "Blank, blank them. They had no right to refuse it, blank, blank them; I would have make them take it."

"Dewey had a little fleet that once was white as snow, and everywhere that Dewey went that fleet was sure to go. It went with him to the Philipines against the Spanish rule, it made the poor Dons gnat their teeth to see him keep so cool. And so they tried to turn him out, but still he lingered near, and swiped Spains fleet clear off the sea, which made the Yankees cheer. Then slant eyed Aguinaldo thought he'd have a little fun; he marshaled his niggers where they oughtn't to be, in range of those gun-boats on the sea, and the're now in kingdom come."—Ex.

It will be surprising to many to learn that the three northern states of Minnesota, Wisconsin and Michigan equal or exeed all of Canada in population, and in acreage under cultivation or improved. They greatly exceed Canada in the production of wheat, barley and oats. In circulation of bank notes, the three states almost equalled those of Canada. TALKS WITH WOMEN OF MIDDLE AGE

"Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—The doctor called my trouble ulceration of womb and change of life. I was troubled with profuse flowing and became very weak. When I wrote to you I was down in bed, had not sat up for six months; was under a doctor's treatment all the time, but it did me no good. I had almost given up in despair, but your Vegetable Compound has made me feel like a new woman. I cannot thank you enough. I would advise any woman who is afflicted as I have been to write to Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass., and get her advice and be cured as I have been."

"Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—Change of life was working on me. My kidneys and bladder were affected. I had been confined to the house all summer, not able to stand on my feet for any length of time. Terrible pains when urinating and an itching that nearly drove me wild. I had tried many remedies. I told my husband I had great faith in yours and he got me a bottle; am now on my fourth bottle. I feel that I am entirely cured. I can work all day. I can hardly realize that such a wonderful cure is possible. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the best medicine for women."

The railroad expert believes that the number of revenue tons hauled per mile is the best indication of a railroad's ability to handle traffic at the lowest cost of transportation. As is well known, the Receivers of the Baltimore & Ohio Rail Road have been spending millions on improvements and have not completed the work, the lines west of the Ohio river being in need of a general rehabilitation, which they are to get this year. But the revenue haul per mile in 1897-98 was increased to 314 tons, and a special report for the six months ending December 31st, 1898, shows an average of 321.9 tons, quite an appreciable advance.

A SENSIBLE LETTER,

A Western Canadian Settler Writes to an Illinois Friend.

In writing to Mr. T. Hawkyard, of Rockford, Ill., Mr. G. Simpkins, of Leduc, Alberta, Western Canada (and to which points especially low rates are being quoted over all lines of railway), says:

Dear Sir:—Rec'd your letter the 14th inst. We have had no snow till after Christmas and the cattle have been able to live out, and are all in good condition. It is snowing now. That is what we want; have about 6 inches now. The old settlers say when we have lots of snow it means a good crop the coming season. It never drifts here. The weather is calm and bright. We do not have to dress any heavier than in Illinois, and the horses never shiver with the cold when we take them from the warm stables, as they do in Illinois. It has not frozen in the stable this winter. The most of the stock runs out, but there is no need of it, for timber is plentiful and there is no expense to build good stables and houses. We have good log houses and they are very warm. Two men can put up a house 16x24 in two days. There are good rails for fences. We live ten miles from the coal district, the price being from 50 cents up to $2.00. The land is a very rich, loamy soil, from 6 inches to several feet in depth; the hills have the deepest. It is a rolling country, and excellent for stock of all kinds. Sheep do well, and there are plenty of small lakes where the cattle can get good water. The cattle got out of grass last year, about the middle of April, and run at large; unless in charge of a herdsman, we have to fence against them. Wheat goes from 35 to 60 bushels per acre, oats 80 to 90, very often over a hundred. As to potatoes, a neighbor planted 7 bushels and dug 226 bushels and no bugs. Roots of all kinds do well. There are lots of strawberries and lots of red raspberries, black and red currants, and gooseberries, where the fire has not burnt them. Cattle are scarce. I have been trying to buy some for 8 months and have got only three two-year-old, and paid $30 each. Hogs are scarce, but can be got. They sell for 6 cents dressed, and cost more for stockers. Wheat 50 cents per bu., oats 25 cents, eggs 30 cents a dozen, butter 15 and 20 cents, poultry was 10 and 11 cents dressed. Sheep are scarce. If you come, bring your farm tools, but bring no seeders; we use drills. Bring cows, but do not bring horses unless you are an experienced hand in shipping them, for so many of them are hurt in shipping. There will be plenty of work for a binder. Two good horses will break, but three lighter are better. The horses you get here can work without grain, but are better with it. It will be hard to tell what prices horses will be, for the immigration will be very large the coming spring. They could be had last spring at one time. They claim the best time to break is June, but my experience is to break in the spring and work it. You can break till the middle of July.

FARM AND GARDEN.

MATTERS OF INTEREST TO AGRICULTURISTS.

Some Up-to-Date Hints About Cultivation of the Soil and Yields Thereof—Horticulture, Viticulture and Floriculture.

Plowing in Oats.

I have tried the above method of covering them, says a contributor to Wallace's Farmer, but did not find it very satisfactory for several reasons.

First—It is quite difficult at times, in early spring, when oats should be sown, to get the plow to scour among the heavy stalks that will be found upon the corn fields of a careful and painstaking farmer without plowing the oats under too deeply for best results.

Second—The seed will be thrown together somewhat in the furrows and is not scattered as evenly as it should be for best results.

Third—If plowed only about three inches deep, as I think it should be, the harrow will bring many of the stalks to the surface and partly defeat the plan. * * * I think it will be found that more lodged oats are caused by putting the seed in too well than by not putting it in well enough.

It is quite an objection to have the seed thrown together in the furrows, for it has been my experience and observation that the more evenly oats are scattered the better the results. They should occupy the whole surface of the ground evenly, thus giving each plant its share of warmth, light and air. This is the chief objection, I think, to drilling oats. It crowds the plants too much together in the drills. I do not consider it impracticable to plow a stalk field deep enough and thorough enough to cover up all the litter and put the ground in good shape for a meadow, and plow the oats in at the same time. I would prefer to break, rake and burn the stalks, then cultivate the oats and grass seed in, going across the ridges and harrowing thoroughly afterward. If I used the plow at all would plow and then sow afterward and harrow down smooth and firm. An objection to plowing at all in my mind is that it leaves the ground too loose and unless the soil is rather heavy, it will dry out too much later in the season. But if the soil is dry enough, and the season permits, this can be avoided by plenty of harrowing or perhaps the use of the roller, and the whole plan will work better. On the contrary if it is rainy and the soil wet and sticky, and the stalks too tough for the rolling cutter to handle, causing the plow to choke, it will be found a very slow and tedious way to put in oats, and most likely be abandoned.

Some Cheesemaking Methods.

The first thing which I observe in the manufacture of cheese is cleanliness, not only in the factory, but as well among the different cows and their keepers, writes W. L. McLain in American Cheesemaker. All the animal heat should pass from the morning milk before it is mixed with the evening's milk and then it is transported without being jarred or jostled very much. In the factory I receive no milk that is in cans which are not daily cleansed and steamed. It must be sweet and pure. Add enough coloring to give a rich color and then heat the milk slowly to 85 deg. and add diluted rennet. I dilute it to prevent curd before the rennet is thoroughly mixed. It takes about five minutes to mix. I require from 25 to 35 minutes for a good curd.

If ever I have a floating curd, I draw off the greater part of the whey and add some moderately warm water. This is to weaken the lactic acid and reduce the acid to the proper amount. Then heat as before, not heating above 95 deg. in cooking. In cooking the maker has the curd under his control, if he has not added too much rennet. Rennet does not aid in ripening cheese and I use as little as I can. It simply changes the milk into a gelatinous mass. When the whey is drawn off the curd should be soft and retain moisture, thus being under the complete control of the maker, and it must then cool slowly to 85 degs.; then add salt, but not too heavy. It should be in proportion to the amount of rennet. Then the curd is in its normal state to commence curing. It should be entirely free from all taints and odors. Should remain in the press from four to six hours, then be removed and dressed and placed in press again until next morning.

The curing room should always be darkened and the same moderate temperature kept, with good ventilation, not allowing gases and foreign substances to enter the room. The cheese should be greased well and turned at six in the morning and again at six in the evening and again at six in the morning of each day. Ten to twelve days are required for my cheese to cure.

Milk test—A room especially for that purpose, with milk, acids, and a temperature the same. I take a certain amount of acid of a certain known strength to a certain amount of milk at the same temperature. No man can test correctly without knowing first how to test the strength of his acid used in testing. In no two rooms will the test be the same, as in making cheese. A person must be his own guide, and commander of the situation. In no two days are the results of making cheese the same. Or in no two factories are the results the same. Man, under different circumstances and conditions, must be master of the situation.

Clover Hay Worm.

A correspondent of the Homestead writes that while putting in hay from a stack the last loads were found fairly alive with a small worm about half an inch long and of dark color, which appeared to be quite lively. The hay was stacked on rail bottoms. He desires to know what they are, whether they will work in hay in the mow that has been put in directly from the swath and whether it is the same little customer in another dress that works in clover seed and is called the midge. The Homestead replies:

If, as we are inclined to believe from the letter, the hay is clover hay, the worm is probably the clover hay worm, which was very prevalent in many parts of the West in the spring of 1893. The color of the worm is dark brown and the lower parts of stacks and mows are, in February and March, fairly alive with them. They also work on hay later in the season. They are the larvae of a purple moth that has a silken luster and two bright spots on the wings. It is not entirely settled whether the moth lays the eggs that produce the worm exclusively after the hay is put up, or whether eggs are not also laid while the clover is yet in the field. The clover hay worm works in mows as well as in stacked hay, and while hay so affected may be fed out to the cattle if fed early enough, the worms then being consumed along with the hay, if deferred until later the work of the larvae so fills the hay with webs that the cattle will refuse to touch it. From another part of our correspondent's letter we find that he is putting this hay into a new barn that he has just built. We would advise him not to do this, as he will be thereby preparing for a bigger crop than ever of the hay worm for the next year. Hay in stacks is generally worked on from the bottom up for about two feet, and the only way we know of combating the insect is to take off and feed all the good and burn that that is seriously affected. If it gets into the hay mow the best thing to do is to clean out the mow thoroughly and burn that part of the hay that seems to be affected, and then turn in the chickens. Prof. Webster, in Ohio, in 1891, however, found that the majority of the larvae can be killed by re-stacking the hay and dusting it with two pounds of powdered pyrethrum mixed with ten pounds of flour, to each ton of hay. We would suggest to all our readers who have any considerable quantity of clover hay, either in the stack or in the mow, that now is the time to examine thoroughly, particularly the bottom of the mass, and see whether it is affected. If it is, and that part of the hay that is being worked upon can be got at, it should be destroyed during this month and next, as later on some moths will be developed early, ready to lay eggs for the following season."

Early Vegetables.

From Farmers' Review: Cauliflower should be in as general use as is cabbage. Its good qualities merit its general use. Would you do without cabbage from year to year? Then why be without cauliflower? Do you grow and use salsify, the oyster plant? Try it. If you have good success and are as fond of it as some are, you will not let a spring pass without planting it. If you like celery try to grow it. For raising early vegetables now is the time to begin work. Make a hot bed and have good-sized hardy plants ready for the open ground as soon as the weather will admit of their being put out. Place several loads of horse manure in a flat topped pile and give it a good wetting. After several days it will be steaming vigorously and should be forked over into a similar pile and wet again. After this process has been repeated two or three times, make the manure into a solid bed two feet deep, place a frame on the bed and fill in with four inches of good soil well pulverized. Sow your seeds, cover lightly and keep the soil moist. Cover the frames during nights and cold days with glass sashes if you have them, but if not, use the best covering you have, such as old carpet or wagon sheet. With this little care you may have an early supply of vegetables. They grow better during early summer before it gets hot and dry, and tomatoes will continue to bear till frost if irrigated, or if the drouth is not severe.

Winter Forcing of Rhubarb.

When at W. W. Rawson's place, at Arlington, I made inquiries about forced rhubarb, writes a contributor to Rural New Yorker. Their plan is to put a glass roof over the entire crop. This sounds more troublesome than it really is. The process is simply that of erecting a roughly-constructed house over the bed. A board wall is set up, about five feet high in the back, and another wall about four feet high in the front. Sashes, supported by scantlings, roof the space, and the ends are boarded up. This covering is put over the rhubarb in February, or the beginning of March, according to the season. No heat is given artificially, but the structure conserves the sun's rays, and the increased temperature soon causes the rhubarb to start. Beds treated in this way should not be under three years old, to get the best results, and it would not be wise to use the glass covering over the bed two seasons in succession. The plan is much less wasteful, as far as plant vitality is concerned, than the lifting of the roots.

Danger in Cotton Seed Meal.

The Texas Experiment Station, commenting on the effect of cotton-seed meal on pigs, says: "Some hogs resist the poison and are practically cotton-seed proof." So far as our experience has gone, most mature cattle are not attacked by this poisonous agent. The calf-feeding so far attempted with cotton-seed meal, has been terminated by death of the subject fed, though Rioter St. Heller doubtless had stoppage at the pylorus, which caused death. From these cases of cows and calves affected, apparently from the use of cotton-seed meal, it may be stated that for calves and some mature cows cotton-seed meal, especially if old or damaged, is a dangerous food, though strong calves may be fed on it sparingly long enough to make veal of them with no apparent harm.—N. C. Experiment Station.

Milk Sent to Creameries.—There is a profit to the farmer in milk sent to creameries over that kept at home, provided the cost of hauling it to and from the creamery be not too great. But this obstacle is done away with where one farmer is secured to do the hauling. At the creamery the farmer has his milk put in shape where it will bring a higher average price than will the milk if kept at home and made into average farm butter.

Bogus Land in Illinois.—One of the most troublesome features of Illinois agriculture is the so-called "bogus lands" or "alkali spots" scattered promiscuously over the central and northern portions of the state. They amount in the aggregate to thousands of acres and are practically unproductive as farm lands.

AN EXCELLENT COMBINATION

THE pleasant method and beneficial effects of the well-known remedy, Syrup of Figs, manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Company, illustrate the value of obtaining the liquid laxative principles of plants known to be medicinally laxative and presenting them in the form most refreshing to the taste and acceptable to the system. It is the one perfect strengthening laxative,

CLEANSING THE SYSTEM EFFECTUALLY, DISPELLING COLDS AND HEADACHES, PREVENTING FEVERS, OVERCOMING HABITUAL CONSTIPATION PERMANENTLY.

Its perfect freedom from every objectionable quality and substance, and its acting on the kidneys, liver and bowels, gently yet promptly, without weakening or irritating them, make it the ideal laxative.

In the process of manufacturing figs are used, as they are pleasant to the taste, but

by a method known to the California Fig Syrup Company only. In order to get its beneficial effects and to avoid imitations, please remember the full name of the Company printed on the front of every package.

Consumers of the choicest products of modern commerce purchase at about the same price that others pay for cheap and worthless imitations. To come into universal demand and to be everywhere considered the best of its class, an article must be capable of satisfying the wants and tastes of the best informed purchasers. The California Fig Syrup Company having met with the highest success in the manufacture and sale of its excellent liquid laxative remedy, Syrup of Figs, it has become important to all to have a knowledge of the Company and its product. The California Fig Syrup Company was organized more than fifteen years ago, for the special purpose of manufacturing and selling a laxative remedy which would be more pleasant to the taste and more beneficial in effect than any other known. The great value of the remedy, as a medicinal agent and of the Company's efforts, is attested by the sale of millions of bottles annually, and by the high approval of most eminent physicians. As the true and genuine remedy named Syrup of Figs is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Company only, the knowledge of that fact will assist in avoiding the worthless imitations manufactured by other parties.

ROUND THE STATE

GOES THE ECHOING SHOT OF JUST TAXATION OF THE RAILROAD CORPORATIONS.

Fixing the Responsibility of Defeat of the Gross Earnings Tax—Comprehensive Review—Experience of the Jacobson Bill Is Similar to Previous Attempts For Taxation Reform—What the Record Shows of Shifty Republican Leaders—Admission That the "Devil Will Be To Pay"—Even Nervy Knute Nelson Is Troubled—The Record Sprung on Young of Swift—Wanted—a Compass to Show the Republicans Where They Will Be at in 1900—Republican "Good Roads" Plank Means Railroads—State Capitol Note and Comment of the Week.

Reform Press Bureau.
St. Paul, April 3, 1899.

The fate of the railroad gross earnings bill brings the people face to face with the question as to how they will free themselves from the death grip of the corporations upon the law making power of this state. The possession of a majority of the senate for the railroad interest, under circumstances and with results forshadowed a week ago, presents the question more clearly to the people than any event of years. In brief summary the case is this:

While this issue was not by name included in the reforms pledged by the reform forces in the campaign as against the ignoring of all state matters except "good roads" by the Republicans, still it was the essence of the reform pledges and might claim specific mention to break down the "rule of rings," and "to redeem the state from its long and oppressive misrule." See last paragraph of our platform. But the message of Governor Lind made it a specific issue, and offered the reform which if it could be accomplished meant the breaking of the greatest of the ring rulers, to-wit, corporate control of the law making power. Realizing the force and justice of the recommendation, and seizing on a great political opportunity, the Republican leaders rushed into the breech with the bill of Mr. Jacobson, drawn under the eye of the Republican state auditor, who had made the same recommendation in his report to the legislature. And so the bill which followed substantially the lines of Governor Lind's message recommendation went into and through the lower house, the railroads not seriously showing their hands, evidently reserving their "ammunition" for the senate, the much smaller body.

Gulled into the belief that the proposition would be heard on its merits in the senate, the friends of the measure proceeded to make known the utterably unanswerable arguments there were in favor of the bill, both as to the law and the question of policy and justice. For the first there were the results of previous contests involving the gross earnings tax law, extending back to the Foley and Markham bills for taxation of railroad lands, and covering the Anderson law and its final test in the supreme court. The present bill landed in the senate judiciary committee, of which several of the most prominent members were on record for the constitutionality of the proposed legislation. Finally, as the greatest encouragement, the chairman of the committee, Senator E. T. Young, of Swift county, was on public record as having made the celebrated minority report on the Anderson bill, finding it constitutional on exactly the same questions involved in the present bill.

It was ominous, when consideration could not be longer delayed, that the railroads made no open appearance, nevertheless the committee, in the form of hearing which they went through, were supplied with all the old and new statements of facts and law. They were shown that Governors Austin and Davis recommended the increase of tax. Were shown from Lind's message that the railroads are paying but a moiety of taxes, compared with those paid by the people. That the 5 per cent on gross earnings, paid in lieu of all else, was nearly 2 per cent lower than paid by the roads in the neighboring states, the difference exceeding $600,000 a year. That if the roads were taxed as other property, even on the low valuation of $10,000 per mile, it would increase the state revenue over $300,000.

Mr. Jacobson presented a perfect mountain of undisputed facts. His document, part of the official record, will long stand as a monument to his over-confidence of accomplishing reform through his old party. He took up the earning power of the roads and their dividend paying capacity. On Jan. 1, 1890, the roads of this state had a market value, stocks and bonds, of $289,122,000. They had net earnings of $18,860,000 for last year. They paid an average of 6 per cent dividends on their enormous capitalization of $119,562,000, and the average interest on their bonded debt of $155,890,000. The roads had gross earnings of $40,008,000 in 1897, on which their 3 per cent tax would be $1,120,400, and the total of all the taxes they did pay for the year was $1,127,050.24. Compared with taxes paid generally it was but 8 mills on the dollar of fair valuation, against the average of 24 mills paid by the people. Furthermore their net earnings of over $18,000,000 is 6 per cent on $300,000,000! And finally, while the rate for the roads in Minnesota is 3 per cent of their gross earnings, the roads of ten other leading states pay an average of 5 per cent on the comparison of earnings to taxes.

After going through the form of hearing, the report of the committee was made by Chairman Young, against both the policy and law, the latter on the ground that the state is barred from changing the gross earnings law, because it was passed when Minnesota was a territory, and constituted contract rights. Then, in open hearing in the senate, came the bombshell from Governor Lind in a letter to Senator Halvorson, who made the principal fight for the bill. It was shown by official state reports, that these roads had never paid one cent of tax under the territorial charters, but had each and all obtained new tax laws, after the admission of the state, changing the law so that they paid one, two and three per cent. as their lines were constructed, and the time of operation increased. This later act could not be contracts, because the making of contracts of that kind is expressly forbidden by the state constitution. And, finally, came all of the tests which have been made since the passage of the Anderson law, including the supreme court decision affirming the right of the legislature to change the gross earnings law.

To which may pertinently be added, though simply cumulative proof, the following from A. Y. Merrill, Esq., to whom the state owes much for the Anderson law and agitation of this question, and to which he owes his slaughter as the defeated candidate for attorney general by the Republican party, covering previous discussions of the question. Says Mr. Merrill:

"During the arguments made upon the Markham bill in 1892, and the Anderson bill in 1895, which bills were identical and provided for the taxation of unused railroad lands, the same arguments were used against the passage of those bills as have been used against the Jacobson bill. And the question was fully discussed as to the effect of the charter provisions so-called of the original land grant roads which obtained their charters prior to the adoption of the constitution in 1858 upon those bills, and it was determined by a majority of the committee on judiciary, in the senate in those sessions, that the charter provisions were contracts, the same as determined on the Jacobson by such majority. But the minority of the judiciary committee of those two sessions determined that they were not contracts. Or more accurately speaking that the successors to the old land grant roads had not acquired the rights of the original roads, but were taxed under laws subsequent to the constitution of 1898, and therefore the laws could be amended or appealed by proper legislation to that effect."

And here it is well to leave Senator Young and the colleagues who have destroyed this measure and delayed the reform for six years, and at the same time thrust it up as a burning reform issue, basking in the new refulgent "light" which they have found, changing their former views. The report in the Anderson bill which Mr. Merrill refers to, is on file in house documents of the legislature of 1895. It bears the name of Senator Young, among others, and found:

1. The gross earnings laws are not contracts which cannot be changed, because the taxing power is sovereign, and cannot be parted with except when it appears in the grant. There is no element of contract in the gross earnings law. And there could not be because the constitution prohibits contracts as to taxes.

2. If not contracts they may be recommended by submission of vote of the people.

3. Changing the law would have no effect of releasing the railroads from paying the tax. If the laws are amended they are just as valid as they were before; hence this bill cannot in any way affect the validity of such laws.

It is in the face of such self-stultification as this, on the part of leaders of the Republican party, who have stifled the wishes of the people and delayed justice, that the taxation reform issue will go before the people.

Perhaps as expressive an opinion on the effect of the Republican slaughter of the gross earnings tax, as any of the many afloat, is that of Judge Abbott, the Republican wheelhorse of Faribault, who simply said: "The devil will be to pay."

Senator Knute Nelson, who was in St. Paul, is said to have been amazed at the defeat of the gross earnings bill, and to have demanded of such of the supposed "faithful" as Senator Ed Smith, who is reported to have been selected to manage Nelson's Hennepin county interests, what they were going to do about it next year. The best that most of the Republican majority can "do" will be to go abroad and enjoy "it."

Last week the legislature made the annual visit to the Stillwater pen, dined with Miss Minnesota, wined (some of them) at the beer hall down town, saw the binder twine spindles go "round and round," condoled with the Youngers, talked politics with George Bixby, saw Blixt, missed the rotund form of "Manager" O'Brien, and came home again. 'Tis well.

There's oap for Senator Young. Being from Swift he need not be slow about shifting his position on the railroad bill again. Favorable four years ago, agin' it now, he can come round again in two years "just as easy."

The Republican state central committee are said to have spent a whole evening's session recently discussing two great questions, one whether or not they should have a press bureau, and the other trying to convince themselves that anyone can be found who can beat Lind. The first is a cruel reflection on the labors of Colonel Whitney and Grandahl, and the other, like the hard conundrum, is better given up.

The Minneapolis Union League, by which, in times past, more partisan deviltment has been manufactured than by any political organization in Minnesota, is dead, absolutely dead. Hang no crape on the door, but send the news to Shanghai (to John Goodnow).

Just for the little thing of not paying its rent, in Minneapolis, the Union League has been flung out of the building of William Henry Eustis. This would look like the real retirement of William Henry from politics. He got the unreal last fall.

AGED JURIST PASSES AWAY

JUSTICE STEPHEN J. FIELD, RETIRED, IS DEAD.

Kidney Complications, Aggravated by a Severe Cold, Cause the Death of the Venerable Justice of the Supreme Court—He Retired From the Bench on Dec. 1, 1897—Had Enjoyed Comparatively Good Health Until Recently—Will Probably Be Buried at Stockbridge, Mass., Where Other Members of the Family Are Interred.

Washington, April 11.—Justice Stephen J. Field, of the United States supreme court, retired, died at his home on Capitol Hill, this city, at 6:30 last evening, of kidney complications. About his bedside were his wife and her sister, Mrs. J. Condit Smith; Justice David J. Brewer, his nephew; Mrs. Edgerton of California; Mr. Linton, his private secretary; Rev. Edward M. Mott, rector of the Church of the Advent, and the family servants. He had been unconscious since Saturday morning, and death came painlessly. Ever since Justice Field's retirement from the supreme court bench on Dec. 1, 1897, he had enjoyed comparatively good health, and being relieved from the responsibilities which he had borne for so many years he became more cheerful than formerly, and seemed to enjoy the society of his friends and acquaintances more than ever before. All during the winter, when the weather was fair, it was his custom to take daily drives about the city or through the grounds of the soldiers' home, and always returned refreshed. About two weeks ago, however, he took a longer ride than usual in an open carriage and contracted a severe cold, which rapidly developed the kidney troubles from which though but slightly, for some time. The disease rapidly yielded to treatment, and on Thursday last he sat up for a time and seemed quite himself again, but on Saturday morning a change for the worse took place and about noon he lost consciousness. From that time he sank rapidly and expired at 6:30 o'clock. No arrangements have yet been made for the funeral, nor is it now known where he will be buried. It is probable that his remains will be taken to Stockbridge, Mass., where are buried his father and mother and his brothers Cyrus, Dudley and Jonathan, two sisters and other members of the Field family. It is possible, however, that Mrs. Field may decide to take his remains to California, where a considerable part of his active life was spent before President Lincoln appointed him an active member of the supreme court bench. Justice Field was eighty-two years old. Justice and Mrs. Field never had any children and the only surviving member of his father's family is the justice's younger brother, Dr. Henry Field, the editor of the Evangelist.

He Had Suffered,

Moscow, April 11.—An attempt has been made to assassinate the czar's aide-de-camp, Gen. Manzey. He was stabbed in the throat by a servant but the would-be assassin was overpowered. The general's wounds are not serious.

Old Spanish Treasure Found.

San Antonio, Tex., April 11.—News has been received from Devine, Medina county, that a Spanish treasure of over 10,000 doubloons, jewelry and documents has been unearthed there.

MET DEATH IN A FLOOD.

Twelve Persons Known to Have Lost Their Lives.

Glendive, Mont., April 11. — Twelve persons are known to have been the victims of the overflow caused by the ice in the Yellowstone river below Glendive Friday night. Ten of the bodies have so far been recovered and searchers expect to find the other two to-day.

An Earlier Report.

Glendive, Mont., April 11. — The ice gorge in the Yellowstone river at this point caused the stream to overflow, drowning four persons. Eight more are missing, three spans of the steel bridge are washed out, causing a loss of $25,000; the Northern Pacific tracks are inundated and possibly washed away for some distance, and the loss to live stock by drowning will involve a large sum.

Loss of Life and Property.

Anaconda, Mont., April 11.—Specials to the Standard from various parts of Montana show that the recent chinook has made raging torrents out of most of the rivers, in many cases breaking all records. The Yellowstone has caused the greatest loss to life and property. Ice jams have backed the water up at Glendive and Miles City, where the greatest damage has been done.

At Miles City the ice jammed the mouth of the tongue river, forcing the water back until the entire south side of the city was under water. Seventy-five houses had to be abandoned, the people having to be rescued in boats, so quick was the rise. Later in the afternoon the water broke over the track into Main street, where it ran a torrent. Dynamite is being used and it is supposed the wash is over. The loss cannot yet be estimated.

Washouts are reported all along the Northern Pacific and passenger trains are stalled all along the line, but the details are slow in coming.

GEN. LAWTON'S EXPEDITION.

Will Capture the Town of Santa Cruz.

Manila, April 11.—The expedition of fifteen hundred men, under Maj. Henry W. Lawton, which started Saturday night with the intention of crossing Laguna de Bay, capturing the town of Santa Cruz on the eastern shore of the lake, and then sweeping the country to the south, consists of 200 picked sharpshooters, chosen from the various regiments, Hawthorne's mounted battery, Gale's squadron, three troops of the Fourth cavalry, unmounted, with bronchos, and Tappen's battalion of the Fourteenth infantry, Black's battalion of the First North Dakota infantry, under Gen. King. The flotilla of twenty canoes, towed by tugs and convoyed by the gunboats Laguan de Bay, Oestand Rapidan, and preceded by the launch containg Gen. Lawton and Gen. King, started from San Pedro Macati, on the River Pasig, moving toward the lake just as evening was setting in. It was a truly picturesque scene. The men were all in high spirits and carried rations for ten days, with the lightest marching equipment. Gen. Lawton's plan was to reach Santa Cruz at daybreak, to
